MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via Southampton on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

WE regret to learn from the papers received by the Bombay mail of the 12th Dec. that, owing to his recent bereavement, Lord Canning finds it impossible to fix his attention on public questions to the extent his high sense of duty regards as indispensable. It was his intention, therefore, to leave India some time in December, but without visiting either Burmah or the Godavery. The last acts of his viceregal administration will be the inauguration of the new Councils and High Courts of Judicature, and, it is to be hoped, the permanent settlement of the North-West Provinces. During the interregnum between Lord Canning's departure and the arrival of Lord Elgin the Government will be provisionally conducted by Sir Bartle Frere.

The creation of a Chief Commissionership of the Central Provinces on the plan that has been found to answer so well in Oude and the Punjab, promises a brighter future to that rich but hitherto mismanaged tract of country. Henceforth the Saugor and Nerbudda Territories are annexed to the Nagpore Province, and the whole placed under a Chief Commissioner and Governor-general's Agent responsible alone to the Supreme Government. The area of the entire district is stated at about 90,000 square miles, with a population of six millions, and a revenue of three quarters of a million. The Chief Commissioner will be assisted by a Secretary, a Judicial Commissioner, three Divisional Commissioners, sixteen Deputy Commissioners, fourteen Assistant Commissioners, and eighteen Extra Assistant Commissioners; the total expenditure amounting to about £10,000 per annum.

The Nana Sahib, or his double, has turned up at Kurrachee, in the disguise of a merchant proceeding to France. It is said that he has been completely identified by a native who was formerly in his employ; but for the present it is safer not to attach implicit belief to this statement, though it may quite possibly be founded on truth. If it be the arch miscreant himself, there can be little doubt of the fate that awaits him, and which he would not have escaped had he succeeded in getting away to France, as the French Government could hardly have recognized him as merely a political offender entitled to the right of an asylum. Salabut Jung, the murderer of Major Burton and his sons, having been duly convicted and sentenced to death, is to be hanged at Kohat, the scene of his iniquity.

Fatigue, anxiety, and the climate have proved too much even for Col. Baird Smith's hardy constitution. An immediate return to Europe has been ordered by his medical attendants. Another distinguished officer, Sir Sydney Cotton, was also reported to be on his way home; but the latest intelligence from Lahore contradicts this rumour.

Mr. Laing arrived in Calcutta on the last day of November. Should his health be spared he will probably enjoy the rare and agreeable privilege of announcing the equalisation of receipts with expenditure.

A small force of military police has been despatched into the jungly hills of the Sumbulpore district to effect the recapture of Soorunder Sahi, liberated from the Hazareebaugh Jail by the mutinous Bhagulpore Rangers in 1857. Some slight disturbances are also reported from Rajpootana, where the outlawed Thakoors of Marwar are giving trouble to the constituted authorities.

The following telegram from Peking, dated Nov. 13, received this morning by way of St. Petersburg, is full of happy augury for the maintenance of friendly relations with the empire of China:—

"The Emperor has arrived here.

"Prince Kung has been appointed Regent of the Empire.

"The Supreme Council, the members of which were hostile to Europeans, has been dissolved.

"Suh-Shun, President of the Finance Department, has been publicly executed.

"Two other influential personages have strangled themselves, by order of the Emperor."

BENGAL.

THE THREE HUNDRED.

The time is drawing near when the list of field officers desiring to retire under the terms of Sir Charles Wood's offer will be closed. It has now been decided that the benefits of the retiring scheme are open to all officers of Cavalry and Infantry on the effective list, who may have accepted the additional £50 pension offered in the despatch of 4th February, and who may have withdrawn before the publication of the last retiring scheme. These officers are not to be reckoned among the three hundred. This is an act of simple justice. The state of the retiring list, however, so far as is yet known, is so remarkable that the subject calls for serious notice.

The general impression produced at first by the publication of that offer was, that, while it was a liberal one as far as it went and to those who would be able to accept it, it was altogether too limited in its action, and like all half measures it would fail of producing the effect intended, of clearing off all superfluous officers from the army. It was shown in Major Chesney's scheme that the number of these would be about 1,400. Although this estimate was based on the erroneous supposition that the irregular system was to be immediately introduced into the Madras and Bombay Presidencies, still a reference to the present state of the Bengal army alone will show that the number of superfluous officers is very much larger than the Secretary of State assumes. In that army the number of regular regiments has been reduced from seventy-four to twelve; and assuming the effective complement of each of these at the moderate number of ten, this reduction alone places more than 600 officers out of employment. The regular native cavalry has been swept away, and only a small proportion of the officers belonging to it can find places in the new dragoon regiments. At the same time the irregular troops have been very largely reduced, and, although the complement of officers with an irregular regiment has been raised from three to six, this increase is far from being equivalent to the reductions which have been made in this branch of the service. At the same time numerous staff appointments have been or are to be abolished. In Bombay four regiments have been broken up, and the regular native cavalry abolished. In Madras four regiments of cavalry have been disbanded, and the reduction in the number of regular native infantry regiments, so long unaccountably deferred, cannot be postponed much longer. The effect of all these reductions is that nearly one thousand officers are, or will be, thrown out of useful employment. Such being the case the offer of three hundred retiring pensions appeared to be a very inadequate way of removing the burden on the finances, and the obstacle to promotion in the army which these supernumerary officers will prove to be. But certainly no one was prepared for the remarkable result of the offer which has so far appeared. Up to this time less than one hundred applications for these extra pensions have been registered in the Bengal Military Department, and the applications in Madras and Bombay are proportionally few. It is true the option of accepting these pensions is confined to regimental field officers and other officers of more than twenty-five years' service. But we believe that these limitations include nearly six hundred officers, of whom probably more than three hundred are without regular employment, while, as many of the applications registered have been made by officers who are now in employment, the proportion of the others who have held back from doing so is still larger than would be inferred from comparing the number of applications with the number of supernumeraries.

We do not know what reasons have caused these officers to take this unexpected course. With some, probably, debt makes retirement or even a high pension difficult; others may cherish an indefinite hope that better days will come if they hold on a little longer. But whatever the cause may be, we earnestly warn these officers that, if they let this opportunity pass by, they will, in all probability, have cause bitterly to regret their shortsightedness. The best that can happen to them is to be placed on garrison allowances, that is, on half batta. The half batta pay of a Major is Rs. 640 a month, and even as a mere question of money it is very doubtful whether that rate of income, with the obligation of residing wherever he is required, is worth as much to an officer as £450 a year, with the option of living where and how he pleases. But officers must be exceedingly sanguine if they suppose that they will be permitted to stay on in the service as long as they please, drawing garrison allowances and doing nothing for them. They may rest assured that, so soon as the list of the special retirements has been declared, and the consequent promotions made, a definite scale for the establishment of the Indian army will be fixed on, and all officers whose services are not required in it will be made to retire without any additional inducement. Some persons, indeed, have got an idea that the parliamentary guarantee of their "rights and privileges" secures them against a measure of compulsory retirements, and that the State is bound to maintain them on their full Indian allowances for so long as they may choose to hold on, although their services may be unnecessary and useless. These gentlemen cannot too soon surrender this extraordinary claim, for they may be assured it is altogether baseless and deceptive. The only right they possess is that of promotion by seniority. As regards staying in the service, there are two parties to every contract, and if officers can claim their discharge when they can be spared, the Government which they are serving is unquestionably at liberty to discharge them if it does not want them any longer. The Secretary of State has the power, and undoubtedly ought, to reduce the army to the lowest point necessary for the requirements of the empire. Such reductions are often made in the line; that they have never before happened in the Indian army has been from political, not legal, causes; and as far as legality is concerned, her Majesty's Government could, if it chose, abolish the grade of field officer altogether, or alter the constitution of the army in any other way. Therefore the less said about rights and privileges in the present case the better.

We have hitherto earnestly contended for not only fair play, but the most honourable treatment, for the old officers of the Indian army. We believe we are their warmest friends when we earnestly recommend all those, whether employed or unemployed, to whom the offer is made, and whose position is not such as to render them perfectly secure from the chance of being considered as encumbrances, or such as to make them perfectly independent of pensions, to make up their minds before it is too late. If they let this opportunity go by, they will assuredly never cease to regret it. —Friend of India.

WASTE LANDS.

As we anticipated at the time, the information on the subject of cultivable Waste Lands in India supplied by the local authorities in 1859, and recently published by the Government of India, is in many cases incorrect. One correspondent, the most extensive tea-planter in the Punjab, questions the figures which refer to that province. Others, the most competent authorities on the subject in the N.W. Provinces and Madras, give trustworthy information. Since the publication of the Fee-simple Resolution, the Government of India should publish accurate facts on the subject of Wastes, accompanied by the remarks of the most intelligent of the English settlers in their vicinity, and stating to whom application should be made. This will prove a real guide instead of a stumbling-block to enquirers in England.

PUNJAB, Nov. 9.

I have seen a good deal of the Hills and am as satisfied that Military Colonies in them would be a failure as I am that they would prosper on the high table lands of Central India. Above 4,000 or 5,000 feet, there are hardly any uncultivated spots where European colonists could support themselves, though hundreds of individuals might get a living in detached places. European farmers should be men like our planters, who know the people and country. In Central India there is apparently plenty of good land, 3,500 feet above the sea, and at this elevation I believe Europeans may colonise, and their children thrive, if bred up in a hardy manner. Here, in the district of Kangra, I am told that the Government have no land at their disposal. In the Friend, however, Kangra is stated as having 16,000 odd acres available to settlers. In Sealkote, too large quantity of land is entered as available, but the other day I went there to enquire about land and only heard of less than 2,000 acres in detached spots; and these are occupied by Sansis, whom the authorities are attempting to turn into cultivators. You will generally find that where at the time of the perpetual settlement much land was waste, and where this has been cultivated, under-tenures exist, because the gross assets greatly exceed the sudder jumma. There is room for many between the actual cultivators and the proprietor who pays the jumma to Government. Again, a large quantity of land can never be cultivated by hired labour at ordinary rates profitably, except where the population is very dense, because there alone does dismissal entail any punishment. Again, it is impossible for a proprietor in this country to find trustworthy agents either to manage villages as tehsildars or as supervisors of labour, and therefore it is found better to give out villages in farm on putnee or talook than to employ tehsildars, and to give out lands to ryots than to employ labourers under headmen who both rob their masters and allow the labourers to be as idle as they please.

DEHRA DOON, Nov. 14.

The late minute of the Governor-General on the subject of the disposal of waste lands has induced a great number of persons to send applications to me for an allotment of such in their favour in the district of Dehra Doon. All these applications have hitherto been concluded in general terms, and throw the burden of selection of the sites upon me—the applicants, no doubt, considering that my general knowledge of the district affords me unusual facilities for imparting the information they require. In order to save such persons much trouble and loss of time, it is as well that it should be generally made known that the quantity of waste lands available for such grants is very limited, and that where it is to be found it is generally unfit for the higher kinds of cultivation, either from the absence of means of irrigation or some other disqualifying cause. The demand for land for tea cultivation has for some time past led to the appropriation of all eligible sites; those still remaining uncultivated are, therefore, the refuse. Many, on ascertaining the large quantity of waste land situate in this district, conclude that it is available for cultivation. In order to obviate such a mistake, I may state that by far the larger proportion of it consists of the Government Sal Forest, which is strictly reserved for timber purposes.

I therefore beg that any one wishing to secure an allotment of waste land will apply to me, either in person or by agent, and, on payment of a small monthly sum in advance, they will be furnished with a competent native surveyor, chairmen, and map and plans of the vicinity of the spots which they may select, which they will thus be able thoroughly to investigate. This course will prevent any risk of falling into the error committed by the original grantees of land in this district, viz., of undertaking the cultivation of lands on which large sums of money were fruitlessly thrown away, owing to the capabilities of the soil and the appliances for developing them not having been properly ascertained in the first instance. I need hardly add, that it will be my pleasure to afford any advice or assistance that may lie in my power to the intending settler, but it is manifest that to expect me to select a site for him, which might not afterwards answer his expectations, is as unsatisfactory to me as the result might be to him.

R. MANDERSON, Superint., Dehra Doon.

N. W. PROVINCES, Nov. 8.

"In your paper of 31st ultimo are two points which I can give a little information about. Under "Hill Wastes, North West Provinces," Jubbulpore is put down at 25,180 square miles. This is the area of the whole division, not of the wastes, the wastes are barely half the area, if so much; and of that half, certainly not above one-third will bear any crop, much less cotton. There are probably in Munda about 2,000 square miles, and lower down the Nerbudda valley about 2,000 square miles more of good waste land available. You have put down the Mahadeo Hills and Gondwana as "several thousand square miles." The Mahadeos are another name for the Purchmurees, and the area of the plain there is certainly under 30 square miles. They are an isolated clump. Gondwana is included in the Jubbulpore division, except what is in Chundwara, where the available waste land is put down, correctly I should say, at 2,000 square miles. Except the upper parts of Munda you can hardly call it "Hill Wastes;" it is under 2,000 feet above the sea.

As regards "the Land of Ophir" it may be interesting to you to know that gold is washed regularly in the Puzdhar nullah in Seonee, and at the Salee Tekree (whence flows the Bunjur), North of Lanjee in Bundara. The gain in either place does not exceed 4 annas per diem to each washer. Some Europeans once tried in Bundara, but failed to make anything.

GANJAM, Nov. 12.

In your issue of the 31st October I see a table of figures purporting to represent the number of acres of waste land in the districts of the Madras Presidency. I fear Lord Stanley, to whom these returns were rendered, must have been at cross purposes with his informants. The figures in your table probably show the cultivable waste included in existing village boundaries; they certainly bear no proportion to the enormous tracts of unreclaimed but cultivable waste lying beyond the limits of existing villages and townships. I speak from long acquaintance with several of the districts named in your list, and assure you that you may in most cases read hundreds of thousands where thousands are set down. The fact deserves publicity, to correct the erroneous impression likely to be created by your article in persons desirous of speculating in land.

There is room, and to spare, in many districts of Madras, for double the cultivating population they now contain.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CIVIL SERVICE MEETING.—Pursuant to advertisement there was a large meeting of the Civil Service in one of the side rooms of the Town Hall on Nov. 21. The Honourable H. B. Harrington was in the chair, and there were about thirty-five other civilians present. The object of the meeting was to take into consideration the injury done to the Civil Service annuity fund by the opening of the Civil Service appointments to outsiders by the late Act of Parliament, the Civil Service Act. Reporters were not admitted to the meeting, but it is understood that a memorial to the Secretary of State expressive of the views of the Service in the three Presidencies on the compensatory concessions they consider themselves entitled to, was resolved on; and Messrs. Harrington, Gray, Harrison, Sandeman, Temple, Aitchison, and Monro, were appointed a committee to communicate with the Service in the other Presidencies, and to draft a memorial embodying the views of all. Mr. Aitchison, who represents the competition branch of the Service, and who is already an Under-Secretary to Government, was nominated honorary secretary to the committee.

THE 51ST KING'S OWN L. I. are under orders to march from Meer Meer to Rawul Pindee whenever they can secure carriage, without waiting to be relieved.

THE BANK OF BENGAL is preparing to extend its operations. The directors intend shortly to depute Mr. G. W. Moultre, Accountant to that Bank, to Mirzapore, for the purpose of opening an agency there in connection with the Bank.

SUMBULPORE.—The Calcutta journals are speculating upon the movement of troops towards the south-east frontier, of the object and purpose of which they seem to be profoundly ignorant. If the reader will trace the course of the Mahanuddy River from its debouchure into the Bay of Bengal in the Cuttack District, he will find that between the 21st and 22nd degrees of latitude it separates into two nearly equal parts what was once the native principality of Sumbulpore. The country is in general very mountainous and jungly, but the valley of the Mahanuddy produces rice, wheat, and sugarcane in great abundance. Indigo grows wild, and there are extensive and valuable forests of teak. Sumbulpore, moreover, is not without mineral wealth. Gold in small quantities has been found, and other metals doubtless also exist. It is, however, famed above all for its diamonds. Golconda obtained a world wide reputation for its mines, though never were diamonds dug up in the district, they being merely cut and polished there, by its cunning artisans famous for such handicraft throughout India. On the other hand, the finest diamonds in the world are occasionally found in the bed of the Mahanuddy, and at the mouth of the other rivers which flow into it. To this day, diamond searchers are to be found employed there in their occupation, from the month of November to the rainy season. The district embraces an area of 4,693 miles, being 112 miles from east to west by sixty from north to south. The population are low caste Hindoos, but most of the chiefs and zemindars claim to be of Rajpoot origin and dignity. A former Governor-general conferred the raj of Sumbulpore upon, or confirmed in it, a chief of the local family named Sahi. The conferral, or the confirmation, however, appears to have left it open to doubt whether the raj was given to "the chief, his heirs and successors," or to himself for his life-time only. The Chief died undisturbed in his possessions, as did also two successors, who in due course ascended the gaddee after him. Fortunately, or unfortunately, the last chief of Sumbulpore, dying in 1849, left no direct issue. Lord Dalhousie was the Governor-general, and, as might have been expected, Sumbulpore was declared lapsed to the State. It was taken possession of, and from that day to this there has been something like chronic rebellion in the district. A few years back, a relation of the last rajah, named Soorundur Sahi, raised the standard of revolt, and was joined by large bodies of the people, and by several of the zemindars, large and small. Troops were poured into the district, and the disturbances put down; and the ultimate result was the capture of Soorundur Sahi, and his incarceration in the gaol at Hazareebagh as a State prisoner. There, in hopeless confinement, remained this turbulent aspirant to the honours and advantages of the Sumbulpore raj, until the year 1857, with its work of mutiny, revolt and bloodshed. The only native troops then stationed at Hazareebagh were the Bhaugulpore Hill Rangers. They mutinied, broke open the jail and liberated all in it. And so was Soorundur Sahi once more a free man. He made immediately for Sumbulpore, with a brave gathering of rebels and budmashes at his heels, and in that district has ever since contrived to maintain himself against the "authorities," or rather to elude their efforts to capture him. There is little question that he has the sympathy of the lower order of the population with him, and perhaps also that of the small zemindars. It is, however, considered undesirable that he should be allowed to remain longer at large, and force has been ordered into Sumbulpore by the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal to, if possible, effect his capture. Every means short of this has been tried, but without success. Neither Soorundur, nor his followers, responded to the amnesty of the Governor-general; and lest that proclamation should not have been sufficiently made known in the wild districts of Sumbulpore, another proclamation was issued about a month ago by the Government of Bengal, repeating its terms to the mere rebels, and offering to Soorundur himself his life, should he come in and deliver himself up. But Soorundur knows that if he delivers himself up transportation will be his doom. He, therefore, prefers the green wood, and the jungly wild, and the companionship of his merry band, to surrender. But as he won't come, somebody must go and fetch him, and this duty has devolved on Major Rattray, Commandant of the Bengal Military Police, who was to leave Chota Nagpore on the 1st Dec. with the 8th Military Police Battalion, to be reinforced by the 9th Military Police Battalion, under Major Nation, which was to leave Midnapore on the 5th Dec. Chota Nagpore is twenty marches from Sumbulpore, and Midnapore is somewhat nearer, so that, in all probability, Mr. Soorundur Sahi will have a hot time of it about Christmas-day. The country, however, is a very wild and difficult one, and it is a question whether the expedition will be able to "pin" their man; and, if they fail, it is not likely any other equally strong body of troops will prove more successful. Soorundur can dodge them through jungle and wild, and over hill and through forest, and he will prove himself simpler than reported, if caught without giving a great deal of trouble. Of real fighting there will probably not be much chance, though sometimes jungle birds like Soorundur turn out game fowl indeed.—Bombay Times of India.

THE MESSENGERIES IMPERIALES, according to the Ceylon Times, will start the first of their fine fleet of steamers from Suez for the East in March next. "The Agent of the Company is now in Colombo, for the purpose of making the necessary arrangements for the Ceylon station at Galle, on the completion of which, Calcutta, Singapore, and other places will be visited. A passenger by the Simla saw some of the steamers for this line, at Marseilles, and speaks in the highest terms of them, as regards size, accommodation and machinery. They are as large as the largest of the P. and O. vessels, and the cabins are very different to the little cribs on board the English steamers, where four are compelled to occupy the proper space for two."

FYZABAD, Dec. 1.—A salute of nineteen guns at nine o'clock in the morning yesterday, the 30th Nov., announced the arrival at this station of her Highness Secunder Begum, of Bhopal, who was daily expected in from Benares. The natives of this place, especially the Mahomedans, were astonished beyond measure to see her Highness driving in a phaeton beside two European gentlemen, and expressed their utter disapprobation of such an unheard-of thing. She is the first enlightened lady of India, who, being an inmate of the Zenana, has broken the ice of Mahomedan etiquette, and appeared in public. We sincerely hope that other ladies as great will follow her example, and in time contribute to the enlargement of the prisoners of the Zenana in general who, for ages past, have been considered in the light of slaves created only for the pleasure of the lords of creation. Her highness is accompanied by her daughter, who, of course, does never expose herself to public gaze, and subject her person to remarks of the multitude, being always confined within her own tent. Her highness' camp is pitched midway between Ajoodhya and Fyzabad, where all the officers, both civil and military, with their wives, went last evening to pay her a visit. There was a regular mela, the road leading from Fyzabad to her camp being thronged with carriages and horses, and crowds of natives, both high and low, mounted on their tattoos, and others proceeding on foot passed to and fro. The excitement has been great for the last four or five days, and a most extravagant account of her suite was given by the natives, that her Highness, besides her own innumerable followers, was accompanied by a regiment of European infantry, and the bunyas and the shop-keepers have been collecting atta, rice, gram, &c., for their use, and selling those things at a higher price; but they are disappointed, for there are not more than five hundred men, soldiers (her own shabby-looking sepoy) and all, composing her retinue. Her Highness remains here for to-day, and leaves for Lucknow to-morrow.—Delhi Gazette.

THE GREAT TRIGONOMETRICAL SURVEY.—It is very strange that although nearly a year has elapsed since the retirement of Colonel Sir Andrew Scott Waugh, the late Surveyor General and Superintendent of the Great Trigonometrical Survey, no one has yet been permanently appointed to succeed him. The arrangements that have been made are of a temporary nature; the officiating appointment of Surveyor General being given to Colonel Thuillier and that of Superintendent of the G.T.S. to Major Walker, both of whom are perfectly uncertain whether they may not to-morrow be displaced by officers of the Royal Engineers. Perhaps the Government have doubts as to their fitness for such high positions in the Survey Department. But, surely, instead of giving the appointment to some one who has not been in this country, it would be far better to select an officer of Indian experience? There are some who have not only conducted extensive survey operations with success, but have personally, and by their own zeal for science, materially extended the bounds of geographical knowledge. Foremost among these may be mentioned Major Montgomerie, a zealous and accomplished officer, whose name is now associated with one of the most extensive trigonometrical operations in this country, those carried on in Kashmere, Thibet, and Ladak. He was appointed Superintendent of the Kashmere Survey in 1855, at the suggestion, we believe, of Sir Andrew Scott Waugh—a strong recommendation—for experience has shown that the nominees of the late Surveyor General have always proved to be thoroughly qualified for their office. Since the commencement of this Survey, Colonel Waugh has, every season, had occasion to eulogise the skill and ability evinced by Major Montgomerie in the conduct of this work. Upwards of 60,000 square miles have been triangulated, while many of the stations are on elevations exceeding 20,000 feet above the level of the sea. Rarely have Indian explorers had such natural difficulties to encounter, as stood in the way of the Kashmere surveyors, but were successfully overcome.—Mofussilite.

COMING EVENTS.—For the present Lord Canning has abandoned all idea of visiting either the Godavery or British Burmah. One result of this determination not to leave the presidency will be that the new councils will be called into existence at an earlier period than was at first intended. It is not likely that the Governor-general will now wait for the return of the Proclamation of the Bengal Council, which was sent to England some time ago. Within a fortnight we expect to see the Imperial, Madras, and Bombay legislatures proclaimed. The appointment of the representative members of the existing council is merely a personal compliment to these gentlemen. It is not probable that on their resignation the same expense will be maintained. We regret that we can give our readers in Burmah no more definite information regarding the amalgamation of the provinces than that it will take place. But the orders for the creation of a "Chief Commissionership of the Central Provinces" have been issued to the various departments. The new Palatinat will consist of Nagpore and the Saugor and Nerbudda territories in thirteen districts. The administration and pay of the officials will be in all respects like that of Oude. Mr. Temple is now making the arrangements. The whole additional cost for the good government of the most neglected of our provinces will not be more than £10,000 a year. Whether Mr. Muir or Mr. Temple will be the new Chief Commissioner the Viceroy alone knows.—Friend of India.

THE PUNJAB.—We regret to hear from the eastern provinces of the Punjab, that the prospects of the rubbee crop are becoming less favourable every day. Wheat recently selling at Umritsur at 22 seers per rupee, has risen to 14 seers. Stocks are all exhausted in the Punjab, and unless there should be a fall of rain before the 13th of December, grain of all kinds will be again at famine prices in the North West. We can only hope for the best. At present the prospect is very gloomy, to judge by the reports forwarded us.

FORGED SEALS.—The Oudh Gazette has published "as a most unique curiosity in its own way, lithographed impressions of the twenty-eight forged seals to which we alluded the other day, as having been discovered by the Oudh Police. It will be seen that the forgers have hardly left a single seal in use in the province out of the scope of their transactions. The process, too, through which they have been able so successfully to manufacture the counterfeits is the easiest possible, and one which obviates the possibility of any difference between the spurious and original. It was only necessary to get possession of the real seals, (and it is surprising how this was managed to so great an extent), and stamp them on a cake of wet clay to obtain their perfect fac similis. There are so many as two and three on each cake, and the impressions transferred from them on paper are as clear as can be. Whether this process assimilates with that in vogue in Bengal, we are not aware; but, simple as it is, it was hardly suspected to be practised in Oudh, and the police deserve great credit for their vigilance in having detected them, and brought the culprits to punishment."

COUNCIL OF INDIA.—The Governor-General having invited, as was expected, all members of the Legislative Council (with the exception of the Judges) to be members of the new Council of India, the personnel of the new Council, as far as is at present known, must stand as follows:—Sir Bartle Frere, Hon. Mr. Beadon, Hon. Mr. Laing, Sir Robert Napier, members of the Council of the Governor-General of India. Sir Hugh Rose, extraordinary member to rank next to the Governor-General, according to the Indian Councils Act. The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal. By the 9th section of the Act it is provided that when the Council shall assemble within either of the Presidencies of Madras or Bombay, the Governor of that Presidency shall act as an extraordinary member; and as often as the Council shall assemble within any other division of the empire having a Lieutenant-Governor, such Lieutenant-Governor shall act as an additional member. The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal will, therefore, have to sit in the Council as long as it sits in Bengal. Messrs. Harington, Forbes, Erskine, Seton-Karr, additional official members. By the 10th section of the Act it is provided the Governor-General shall, in addition to the ordinary and extraordinary members, and to any Lieutenant-governor who may be an additional member, nominate such persons as to him may seem expedient to be additional members of Council for the purpose of making laws and regulations only; provided that the number of such additional members shall not be less than six, nor exceed twelve, and provided that not less than one-half of the persons so nominated shall be non-official persons; that is, persons who at the date of nomination shall not be in the civil or military service of the Crown in India. Now, as Lord Canning has already nominated four official additional members (for the North-West Provinces, Madras, Bombay, and Bengal) as given above, it follows that there must be at least four non-official members nominated to satisfy the provisions of the Act. It is said that Messrs. Bullen and Cowie, both ex-Presidents of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, will be invited to take their seats in Council; while others have it that Mr. Fitzwilliam, the present President, will be one of those asked. The non-official members will probably be chosen, half from the European, half from the native community.—Times of India.

THE NAVAL BRIGADE.—The Naval Brigade which was raised in Calcutta some time ago, and was located at Port Blair, has been disbanded, in consequence of its services being no longer required by Government. The men, consisting of about sixty Jack tars, returned to Calcutta the other day by the Walter Morris. They appeared sickly, and some of them are still in Hospital.

DRUNKENNESS.—Captain Brabazon, late 60th N.I., has been dismissed the service by court martial for drunkenness, and Lieutenant Charles Grant, late 45th, for the same.

LORD CANNING.—Since the burial of Lady Canning in the Barrackpore Garden the Governor-general has remained in the strictest privacy in the Government-house, transacting no business. He went to Calcutta on the 28th Nov., but returned to Barrackpore after council on Friday. On Friday last he was rowed over to Serampore, where, with Major Bowie, who had a small spy-glass in his hand, he landed and walked up and down the course looking at Lady Canning's grave, which is visible from the Serampore side. As yet it is merely covered by brickwork. Ach-deacon Pratt, and not the chaplain of the station, read the service at the grave, the funeral procession defiling amid the shrubbery of the garden from the House, along the river bank, to a spot close to the gate which leads into the park. During Lord Canning's presence in Barrackpore the band has not played us usual, and the flag has been half-mast high.

HOLKAR AND SCINDIAH.—The Governor-general has exempted his Highness the Maharaja of Gwalior and Holkar from the payment of Income-tax on their possessions in British territory, and has also authorised those chiefs to entertain six thousand sowars each.

DEATH OF GENERAL HOGGAN, C.B.—The news that Maj. gen. John Hoggan, C.B., of the old Bengal army, has finished his earthly pilgrimage, will be received with sorrow wherever he was known. The gallant soldier had passed beyond the Psalmist's limit for short-lived man, but his intellects were so clear, and his spirits so cheerful that his friends had at one time hoped to enjoy his society for many years more. Gen. Hoggan had been in this service for upwards of fifty-three years, and before coming to India he had been for a short time in the Royal army at home. He had taken part in the Nepaul campaign of 1815, in the suppression of the Bareilly outbreak of 1816, in the Affghan war under General Pollock, and in the Punjab campaign, where he commanded a brigade at Ramnuggar, Sadoolapore, Chillianwallah, and Goojerat. Lord Gough, whose own valour was so conspicuous, called him the "intrepid General Hoggan," for his bearing while under his Excellency's command. His personal character stood very high in the estimation of his intimate friends, by whom he was emphatically regarded as an example of the strictest honour and staunchest friendship. General Hoggan died at Dehra on the 13th of Nov., aged 73.—The Hills.

MEDICAL AMALGAMATION.—There seems to be a very general idea that the long expected medical amalgamation will soon make its appearance, and it is pretty certain that it will be accompanied by an offer of a bonus to the senior officers to retire on a scale somewhat similar to that published for officers of the line. But in spite of the hints and vague intimations given by certain journals who would be thought wise overmuch, we (Delhi Gazette) may safely say that the details of the scheme and the anticipated bonus are as yet a secret. This much only is known, that Dr. Linton will be the superintendent general, or whatever the title may be under which the new office entailing the general superintendence and direction of the amalgamated medical service may be held.

COLONEL TRAVERS.—We hear that there has been some hitch as regards the investiture, or rather non-investiture of Colonel Travers with the order of the Victoria Cross, and that, in consequence, some differences are existing between his Excellency the Viceroy, and his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief. We have been informed that Sir Hugh Rose refused to invest Colonel Travers, despite an official request that he should do so. The particulars are not yet sufficiently before us to warrant our making any remarks on the case; and, if they were, we should not at the present time think of doing so, for reasons which our readers will readily conjecture.—Mofussilite.

CAPTAIN BARTER of the 7th Royal Fusiliers, commanding the military police at Moradabad, and who served as Adjutant of the 75th regiment throughout the campaign of 1857-58, has been appointed to the command of the East India regiment at Dacca.

RAJPOOTANA.—The mutiny of the Jodhpore Legion at Erinpoora, in the summer of 1857, was followed by a serious outbreak in the territory of our staunch ally, Maharaja Takht Singh, the Sovereign of Marwar, during which the political agent of Jodhpore fell a sacrifice to his zeal for the public service, having been killed during the attack by Brigadier-general Lawrence's column upon the Awah fort. Much as the fate of this able and deservedly popular officer was lamented by his friends and his country, no one felt his loss more deeply than the Maharaja himself. Beset by enemies from among the powerful and turbulent chiefs of his own territory, surrounded, as all independent chiefs at that time were, by hostile influences, working secretly though none the less perseveringly, to introduce the prevailing element of discord between them and the British Government, tempted by all the allurements the rebel leaders could hold out to renounce his allegiance to the paramount power and side with the disaffected, Takht Singh held on to the last, and tided over the crisis. His army was routed at Awah, and scattered to the four winds of heaven; his favourite general and most trusty counsellor Anar Sing slain, probably by treachery; yet the Maharaja still showed the best front he could, kept himself in constant communication with the Governor-general's agent, and protected the wives and families of the English officers, to whom he had in the commencement of the rebellion offered an asylum till arrangements could be made for their safe transport across the desert into Sind. It is not too much to say that, except for the bold and determined conduct of the Maharaja, those families would have fallen victims to the same fate that overtook Major Burton and his sons in the neighbouring State of Kotah. These services have never been duly acknowledged by our Government. Not only has Takht Singh not been by any means adequately rewarded, but he has been slighted, and to this day has been allowed to remain a severe sufferer by the policy he adopted during that trying period. When the Awah Thakoor was seized, not long ago, after a protracted course of rebellion against his own sovereign, instead of giving him up, as they ought to have done, to the Maharajah to be dealt with according to the law of his own states, our political officers kept the rebel, whose life was fairly forfeited, not to the British Government, though it had a heavy account with him, but to his own sovereign, and by means of a sham trial, and the hocus pocus of Courts of Enquiry conducted under political influence, managed to let the murderer and rebel off scot free, and held up Maharaja Takht Singh to the scorn and contempt of every chief in Rajpootana. The iron entered into his soul, but his humiliation was to be still deeper. Emboldened by the cold shoulder turned towards the King, in spite of his good service in 1857, encouraged by the immunity afforded to the arch rebel of Awah, a number of other rebellious Thakoors who have been in arms against their sovereign ever since the disturbances we speak of, have defied his power and laughed at his threats. These are the men we hear of from time to time, as appearing in various parts of Rajpootana, now in the Jeypoor territory, and now in Bekaneer, now in Shekhawatee, now in Meywar, making raids upon the royal villages of Marwar, and then retreating across the boundary for refuge. Secure in the almost trackless deserts of Rajpootana, with no one to oppose them but the undisciplined and not over zealous troops of their own sovereign, who, a victim to the petty jealousy of political officers, has been prevented either from carrying out his threats or fulfilling his promises—these rebel chieftains have it all their own way. The troops of other States than their own do not care to run much risk in an encounter with outlaws, who are only dangerous when driven to bay, and only to be feared by those against whom their animosity and cupidity is excited, viz., the peaceable inhabitants of the royal estates of Marwar. They content themselves, therefore, with doing pretty much as our Rajwaree allies generally did in the mutiny when taken out against the mutineers, that is, they trot them out of their own territory and then leave them to their devices. That these rebel Thakoors have grievances is not denied. The Maharaja of Jodhpore is a hard master, and an exacting one, and consequently most unpopular with his chiefs and subjects. He has, however, learnt a lesson since 1857, and were he to receive the aid he is justly entitled to as the very smallest return for the neglect and ingratitude with which our Government has treated him, he would doubtless be glad enough to listen to any suggestion that might be made to him for a more liberal and conciliatory policy towards his feudatory nobles and dependants.—Delhi Gazette.

A PRINCIPLE FORGER.—We can understand that if a person has been educated in the belief that it is meritorious to make one rupee do the ordinary work of two, or two blades of grass grow where but one grew before, he may arrive at the conclusion also that to get a thousand rupees for a bank-note of just one hundredth part that value is worthy even of greater commendation. But the perverse law interferes at times with what appear to be logical sequences, and we are afraid that Prince Kumroodeen Khan, one of the great grandsons of Tippe Sultan, may be put to inconvenience in consequence. It appears that about ten days since Major Herbert, Superintendent of the Mysore Princes, sent a letter to the Secretary of the Bengal Bank, enclosing what purported to be a bank-note for Rs. 1,000, which he requested might be cashed in favour of the Shahzadah in question. The note was blotted all over with ink, except in one corner where the number appeared, and the explanation which Kumroodeen gave to Major Herbert was, that his brother, a boy of tender age, had been playing with it and caused the defacement. A moment's examination satisfied Mr. Dickson that the note was one for Rs. 10, clumsily altered in the numbering to represent the figures upon a genuine note for Rs. 1,000, issued at the same time from the Bank to a certain known individual. The facts were, of course, communicated to Major Herbert, who had been completely duped by the statement made to him, and that officer called Kumroodeen at once to account. The latter insisted that the note was a genuine one, and said that his father having received from Prince Gholam Mahomed Rs. 15,000 towards payment of his debts, had given him Rs. 1,000, with which he proposed to build a house for himself. The note he averred had never been out of his possession except to be clutched for a few minutes by the child, during which time it was defaced, and no one could have had the opportunity to tamper with the number. Unfortunately for Prince Kumroodeen, the Rs. 1,000 note had found its way to the Bank and been cashed some days previously, so that even had the forgery not been so clumsy an affair, it would have been detected when a second note having the same number was presented for payment. When Major Herbert communicated the result of his inquiries, the matter was placed in the hands of the police, by whom the investigation has been remitted to Mr. Montresor, the magistrate of the 24-Pergunnahs. The Shahzadah is, we suppose, under surveillance.—Englishman.

DEATH OF MRS. MULLENS.—The Harkur records the death of the wife of the Rev. Dr. Mullens, of the London Missionary Society, and daughter of the late Rev. A. J. Lacroix, after an illness of 30 hours' duration. "With her died the hopes of many a Hindoo wife, whom she sought to raise from the depths of her social degradation. Mrs. Mullens was one of the best Bengalee scholars of the day, and since her last return from England she has devoted every leisure hour to the visiting of native dwellings, and teaching the females to read and do needlework. Slowly and silently, but surely, she pursued her task, often encountering the bitterest hostility and almost as often subduing it by a rare grace of persuasion. Husbands who scouted the bare idea of their wives and daughters adopting the hated customs of the English were frequently won over to become her firmest allies. The women hailed her visits and her lessons with eager thankfulness, and at the time of her death we believe that there were nearly a hundred families where she was welcomed as teacher and friend."

HEAD QUARTER'S CAMP, Nov. 24.—We marched out here yesterday, and are halting to-day, being Sunday. The Commander-in-Chief went out yesterday to pay a visit to the Kupoortula Rajah, and from thence goes on to Hooshiarpore, Kangra, Durumsala, and Dalhousie, rejoining his camp at Umritsur. I hear he is much pleased with Jullunder, and it is believed it will, as a station, be enlarged, and other stations further up the valley will be rendered available for European troops, while Lahore will be reduced to a small command. The troops at Jullunder were out twice in Brigade, the second time under the Chief personally. Colonel Prior gets the Goorkas at Durumsala, in the room of Graham, going to retire. There were a number of frozen-out gardeners present at the Chief's levee, but what they got will be seen in due course.

THE INDIGO SEASON opened on Saturday by the sale of forty-five chests of the indigo of the Bubbnow concern in Goruckpore, at Rs. 252.8, which is Rs. 40.8 above prices realised last year.

SIR SYDNEY COTTON.—We are sorry to see it stated that this gallant officer has been suddenly attacked with severe illness, and advised to proceed to England immediately.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE COMMANDER IN CHIEF will, after thoroughly inspecting the Station of Peshawur, the surrounding country, and the mouths of the passes, &c., prolong his tour down the frontier, examine all the military posts and positions, the rivers, and all the strategic features of that most important portion of our territories in the extreme north-west; and we believe it is probable that his Excellency will make some changes in the military occupation and defence of the frontier line in that direction. The Commander-in-Chief's camp is expected to leave Lahore about the 6th Dec., and thence his Excellency will traverse the Punjab to Peshawur, which he will probably reach by the end of December. We believe that his Excellency wishes to visit Cashmere at the commencement of the hot weather, should he have finished his tour of work in time.

MISCELLANEOUS.

COLONEL IMPETT has been appointed Sheriff of Madras for the ensuing year.

CAPTAIN GILLILAN, Pay Master Hyderabad Subsidiary Force, has been summoned by electric telegraph to the Presidency, for the purpose of taking charge of the office of Examiner of Commissariat, Clothing Remount and Barrack department accounts, about to be vacated by Colonel Budd.

THE REV. W. W. G. COOPER, at present officiating at Vepery, is to be appointed officiating Chaplain at St. Thomas Mount, consequent upon the removal of the Rev. J. Richards to Coonoor and Jackatalla; the Rev. A. Pearson, it is understood, will be appointed to officiate at Vepery.

PENSION TO MR. J. H. BULLOCK.—Sir Charles Wood has sanctioned an additional pension of £100 to Mr. J. H. Bullock, late Deputy Commissioner, Hyderabad Assigned Districts, in consideration of the services rendered by him, in addition to the military pension granted to him by the Government of India.

THE BONUS SCHEME.—The following officers retire from the service on the bonus and retiring scheme:—Col. Halpin, 25th N.I.; Col. Logan, 6th N.I.; Col. Coates, 6th N.I.; Col. Dunlop, 50th N.I.; Col. Carr, 16th N.I.; Maj. Phillot, 26th N.I.; Maj. Jackson, 14th N.I.

HYDERABAD, Nov. 18.—His Highness the Nizam has sent to the Resident about Rs. 3,000 to be distributed among the guards who escorted the presents to his Highness. A road is to be constructed for the Godavery traffic, and orders have been issued by the native Government to the talookdars to make over to the British officers the lands required for the purpose. The minister, Salar Jung, has been thanked by the Madras Government for his prompt compliance in regard to the ground required for the Madras Irrigation and Canal Company. The system of municipal taxation, I understand, has been introduced into East Berar. Weather exceedingly cold.

BANK OF BOMBAY.—At the annual general meeting of the proprietors of the Bank of Bombay, held on the 9th Dec., Mr. James Fleming and Mr. Cowasjee Jehagjee Readymoney, were elected directors, in the room of Mr. Henry Scott and Limjee Manockjee, who retire by rotation.

ARTILLERY BRIGADES.—The new brigades of Royal artillery are now formed, and Colonel Foster commands the 4th brigade of horse artillery, Lieut. col. Fuller, the 18th brigade of foot artillery, and Col. Wormald the 21st brigade.

INSTALLATION OF THE BISHOP OF MADRAS.—The Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of the diocese of Madras was duly installed in St. George's Cathedral in the forenoon of Wednesday, the 27th Nov., by the acting Archdeacon and Commissary of the diocese. The Madras Times says:—"His lordship, attended by twenty-eight clergymen in their canonicals, entered the cathedral from the vestry at the west end, and being in plain clothes retired to the vestry commonly known as the archdeacon's. Divine service was then commenced, prayers being read by the Rev. C. D. Gibson. After the second lesson was read, the acting Archdeacon and clergy proceeded to the vestry occupied by the Bishop, and his lordship then arrayed in his episcopal robes was conducted to his seat adjoining the reading-desk. The archdeacon briefly addressed the Bishop and declared him duly installed in the Cathedral Church of his diocese, presenting to him the keys of the edifice. This simple ceremony concluded, the service proceeded as usual, the Communion service being read by the Rev. Messrs. Alcock and Richards. A very appropriate sermon on the Christian ministry was preached by the Rev. F. G. Lugard, and service was concluded by the administration of the Lord's Supper. The Bishop does not seem to be in robust health, but his whole manner and appearance are most prepossessing, and are calculated to leave a very favourable impression."

BOMBAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE HEAD QUARTERS OF H. M.'s 33RD REGIMENT, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Collings, arrived in Bombay on the 31st Nov. from Deesa, via Surat. They relieve the detachment of H. M.'s 56th regiment at Colaba. Two companies of the latter regiment will leave for Surat en route to Deesa, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Heyland, C. B. The remainder of the regiment will await the arrival of the detachment, which is on its way down from Sattara.

DR. SHARP, of H.M.'s 83rd Regiment, who came down in charge of H.M.'s 18th Regiment from Belgaum to Bombay, is about to be tried by a General Court-martial for intemperance.

THE HON. MR. REEVES, member of Council, will retire from the service, we are informed, and proceed to Europe in February next. Col. Pope will also retire about the same time.

H.M.'s 18th REGIMENT N.I., under the command of Maj. Westbrook, arrived at the Presidency on the morning of the 30th Nov. by rail from Belgaum.

COLONEL LIDDLE, of the 3rd European Regiment, is appointed to the command of the Bombay Garrison, in succession to Sir C. Stewart, who proceeds to Europe by the present overland mail.

NUSSEERABAD, Nov. 21.—This station has been the scene of an act of savage atrocity, which has struck every one with horror and consternation. Lieut. W. A. Steward, of H.M.'s 28th regiment, returned from parade on the morning of the 19th. He lay down upon his bed and fell asleep. He lay upon his right side, his arms folded upon his bosom. His mussaul entered, put the muzzle of his own double barrelled gun to the back of his head, fired, blew the roof of his skull and the greater part of the face off, scattering the brains over floor, walls, and ceiling, then retreated to an out-house, lay down, placed the mouth of the other barrel under his chin, and shot himself dead! All this must have been the work of a minute. Nobody was on the spot, the butler was at the bazaar, and the first discovery was made by the barber on entering to shave the hapless deceased. A court of inquest assembled, but as yet no adequate cause has been discovered for this fiendish act. Lieutenant Steward had been until lately second in command of the Mhair regiment at Ajmeer, and whilst there had been robbed by this man of some rupees, which he discovered, and warned him that he would turn him off. Unfortunately he did not do so at once. The mussaul was a Mussulman, and, it is said, a discharged sepoy. That he was acquainted with fire arms is shown by the fact that a soldier of the 28th stated on the previous day he had cleaned this gun and a revolver, and put both up in their cases. The ruffian must have taken the gun out, put it together, loaded it, as well as the revolver, which was found beside his dead body with its five chambers charged also, but with the bullets put the wrong way. The man was known to have "saints" of his caste about him, and there is a surmise that the act may have been the result of a deep laid fanatical plot. The deceased is universally regretted by all who knew him. He was a good officer and a perfect gentleman, and the sorrow of his brother officers is heartfelt. On the very day of his death, the general order appointing him interpreter to his regiment was received. His death must have been instantaneous, for as he lay in calm sleep, with folded arms, so he was found. He was buried yesterday morning, followed to the grave by the brigadier's staff, the regiment, and all the officers of the station. I have briefly stated the facts of this deplorable catastrophe; no words could convey the shock it has been to the whole cantonment. P.S.—I omitted to mention in its place there were two bullets in the barrel. The shot was fired downwards, for the balls passed through the bedding and were picked up flattened on the floor beneath the bed.—Times of India.

BANK OF BOMBAY.—The proprietors of the Bank of Bombay were to meet on the 20th December, when the following important propositions would be submitted for decision:—"1. That the Directors be authorised to enter into, and make such arrangements with Government, as may appear expedient and advantageous to the Bank for taking over the business of the General Treasury at Bombay, and for the management of the currency here and in the Mofussil, under the provisions of Act 19 of 1861, intitled, 'An Act to provide for a Government paper currency,' and Act 24 of 1861, intitled, 'An Act to enable the Banks of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay to enter into arrangements with the Government for managing the issue, payment, and exchange of Government Currency Notes, and certain business hitherto transacted by the Government Treasurers.' 2. That the directors be authorised to establish branch banks at such places as they may deem expedient and advantageous for the interests of the bank. 3. That the directors be authorised to take such steps for varying, altering, or annulling all, or any of the provisions of the Acts under which the bank is at present constituted, and for obtaining the re-incorporation of the bank as to them may seem expedient for securing the efficient working of the bank."

THE NANA SAHT.—A person answering to the description of the Nana was apprehended on the morning of the 3rd of December, in a banian's shop in the town of Kurrachee, at about eleven o'clock, by a moonshee of the Kardar's establishment, on the information of Mr. De Souza, of the Customs department. He corresponds in height, complexion, marks on his toes—four of which are burnt—to the description we have of the Nana. A follower of his, too, has half of one of his ears cut, and this strengthens the identity of the man. The prisoner was taken to the Kardar's office and examined, thence to Major Goldsmith's for further examination, and is now well secured. He attempted to get a passage to Dwarka, as we stated he would in our last. The prisoner pretends ignorance of the English and Marathi languages, and states that he was for twelve years a ministering priest in a temple at Mandavie. The authorities, however, had decided upon setting him free, when Mr. Nugent Sullivan, apothecary in charge of the general hospital, learned from one of the patients under his care that the Nana was known to him, he having been in his employ at Bithoor for a long time, and having parted from him just before the mutinies broke out. Mr. Sullivan immediately put the man in a dooly, and accompanied him to the place where the prisoner was confined, when a number of purvoes and others were presented to him, and he was called on to state if the Nana was among them. After a minute examination, he declared that the miscreant was not there. Subsequently another batch, among whom was the apprehended man, was brought forward, and he at once singled him out, declaring that was the "Nana of Bithoor." He was thereupon questioned, and stated that he had served the Nana, eaten of his salt, and seen him for some years regularly every day; he could not be mistaken, "that man was the Nana of Bithoor." Mr. Sullivan had his patient carried off to the hospital, and by four o'clock in the evening, Mr. Ingle, the Deputy Magistrate, the Foudjar of Kurrachee, and a number of others, came up to the hospital with the prisoner, and it was proposed to question the sick Poorbeeah again. Mr. Sullivan suggested that the prisoner should be disguised as a purvoe to make assurance double sure, which was done, and the sick man was brought out to meet the party; he was asked if the Nana were there, and looking around immediately pointed out the man, declaring that "that man is the Nana of Bithoor and the adopted son of Bajerow. I would recognise him in any disguise." A bystander observed, "the Nana has a hole in the top of his ear." "If so," said the Poorbeeah, "that man must have it, for here is the Nana, look for yourselves." The ear was examined and the hole was there.—Our Paper.

WYNAAD, Nov. 12.—Crop gathering fast out Culputty way, and in the North; not so fine as the blossom led us to expect. Lots of Coolies in lately, and estates that a short time ago were smothered in weeds are now dressed as if for a holiday. We are having a thorough foggy November, much mist and light showers almost every day, although during the last fortnight I do not suppose three inches of rain have fallen. I passed through an estate a short time ago (Culputty), where I saw a large field of young coffee, as young coffee ought to be; planted out on Bomboo land with balls, it has never ceased growing, and being beautifully lined, and free of weeds, with the surface all trenched, it looked like thorough cultivation, and reflects great credit on the manager.

COLONEL SWANSON being about to retire from the office of Comptroller of Military Finance, Colonel Barr has been appointed his successor. No better selection could have been made; having held the office of Deputy Auditor-general and Presidency-paymaster for several years, and latterly that of Military Accountant, he has succeeded to the position with more than ordinary qualifications, and we are sure the appointment will give general satisfaction.

MR. MANACKJEE CURSETJEE has been appointed acting second judge of the Small Cause Court; and Mr. Spencer, who has filled the office of clerk of the court ever since its institution very acceptably to the public, has been nominated acting third judge. Mr. J. V. Johnson will be acting clerk of the court for the present.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.—The Deccan Herald states that by the death of Generals Kemp and Sir W. Richards, K.C.B., Colonels Hobson and Honner, C.B., of the Bombay Army, will be promoted to Major-General, and will in consequence have to vacate their brigade commands. The following Lieutenant-Colonels of the Bombay Army have applied to retire on the extra pension granted by the Queen's Warrant:—Sir P. M. Melville; D. Scobie; J. Keily; J. Shortrede; J. Holmes, C.B.; C. Munro; C. R. Hogg; W. Lye; G. C. Stockley; E. Andrews; C. A. Honner; W. G. Arrow; and E. Baynes.

INCOME-TAX.—The amount of income-tax for the town and island of Bombay for the year commencing 1st of August, 1860, and ending 31st of July, 1861, has been Rs. 1,158,000. Nearly the whole of this amount has been realised, there being little short of a lac of rupees still remaining to be recovered.

IMPORTS (Bombay, Dec. 12).—Cotton Piece Goods.—During the past fortnight a moderate business was transacted in Grey Goods. For Grey Shirtings an active demand existed at advanced rates; the prices of 40-in. 6 lbs. had gone up as high as Rs. 4-7 to 4-8, of 7 lbs. Rs. 5-4 to 5-6; but they have now declined, and offers are made at a reduction of 2 to 3 annas; sales could not be obtained unless at those reduced quotations. 45-in. 9 to 9½ lbs. was in good request at Rs. 6-13 to 6-14, but offers are now made at Rs. 6-8 to 6-9; others remain as last quoted. 50 and 44-in. had also participated in the advance, and are now quiet. Grey Longcloths of 36-in. by 40 are inquired for, but the value is firm and nominal. Drills of good makes are in good request; other kinds remain dull. Grey T Cloths of 4 to 5 lbs. makes are in better request than other descriptions, and are easily saleable at advanced rates. Bleached Goods still attract but little attention. Among Turkey Red Goods, plain fabrics are the only goods at present in favour. Cambrics are in fair demand. Dimity is less inquired for than before. Twills are scarce, and eagerly sought after. Jaconets slightly improved in inquiry, though not in value. Mulls remain much the same as last. Prints of all styles are quite unsaleable except at ruinous prices. Yarns.—An active and increased demand has prevailed for both Mule and Water Twists, and prices for some counts have gained a further advance. Holders, however, are very firm in their demands, and consequently a small business has taken place during the fortnight. Turkey Red and Dyed Yarns are moderately inquired for. Metals.—For Copper the demand is very active, and a fair amount of business was done in Braziers and Sheathing at advanced quotations.—British Bars are dull and have receded in value; Nail Rods are inquired for.—Hoop and Sheet show a little improvement in demand. Yellow Metal has improved in inquiry and value. Steel, both in tub and faggots, is in request, but the value remains unchanged. Lead in demand. Tin Plates are in moderate inquiry. Quicksilver in demand.

EXPORTS (Bombay, Dec. 12).—The export market continues active, but the excitement which previously prevailed has very much abated. A pretty extensive business has been done during the fortnight. Dharwar is eagerly sought for, but being scarce, it is held for very high prices. New Cotton, however, is less inquired for. Stocks are moderate. Speculation among natives is very active, and all sorts of persons—clerks, shopmen, priests, &c., who have no business interest in the affair, are investing their hard-earned little savings in Cotton, and speculating for a further rise. Wool.—The demand continues active, and the price shows a further rise. Oilseeds.—Linseed is actively inquired for, and there being many sellers prices have declined a little in favour of buyers. In Rapeseed there is nothing doing; prices are unchanged. Sesame has many inquiries, and is bought at higher prices. In other seeds there is nothing doing. Coffee.—The market continues bare of stocks, demand is very good. Pepper.—Little or nothing doing, stocks light. Saltpetre.—The inquiry has improved, and prices have advanced a little. Madder Root.—Light stocks, and held for at advanced quotations. No sales reported. Elephant Teeth.—Stocks very large, with but slight demand. Opium.—Our market seems to have touched its lowest point, and there now appear to be some signs of a reaction setting in, prices having risen during the past fortnight from Rs. 1,430 to to-day's quotation of 1,450, owing chiefly to the absence of importations from Malwar; the latest official returns not showing a single chest having been passed under the new excise, which came into force so far back as 1st October last.

Official Papers.

CHIEF COMMISSIONERSHIP OF THE CENTRAL PROVINCES.

(From the Calcutta Govt. Gazette, Nov. 30.)

1. RESOLUTION.—The Governor-general in Council having had under consideration the administrative arrangements of the Provinces of Nagpore and those of the Saugor and Nerbudda territories, resolves that the time has arrived for consolidating these several districts under one central jurisdiction.

2. The existing form of administration does not present that unity, completeness, and efficiency which are requisite in order that justice may be done to the condition and prospects of territories so largely capable of improvement. The Nagpore province has heretofore been administered by a commissioner acting under the direct orders of the Supreme Government. But, with a province situated as Nagpore, the control exercised by the Supreme Government is necessarily remote, and therefore slow; whilst the commissioner, being occupied with details—political, fiscal, and judicial—cannot devote his full care to greater measures of improvement and to matters of general importance. The Saugor and Nerbudda territories have at various times been transferred from one Government to another. They were originally under the Supreme Government, subsequently they were placed under the Lieut.-Government of Agra. Again, in 1842, the general control of them was vested in a commissioner and Gov.-gen.'s agent in direct communication with the Supreme Government, while the supervision of fiscal and judicial affairs remained with the Sudder Board and Sudder Churt at Agra respectively. Again, at a later date, the general jurisdiction was once more entrusted to the Government of the North-Western Provinces, under which it has continued up to the present time.

3. The position, however, of the Saugor and Nerbudda Territories is such as to prevent their receiving from any existing local government that measure of care and attention which territories more favourably situated have never wanted. Their geographical situation separates them, more or less, widely from the headquarters of all the local governments in India, excepting only that of Nagpore. Between them and all other nearest British provinces there intervene, at most points, either foreign country or hilly waste tracts rendering access difficult. In all directions, save one, there is a want of good lines of communication to connect them with neighbouring British territory. Such comparative distance and isolation not only cause delay in reference and correspondence, but preclude these territories from being visited by the head of the local government and by the inspecting authorities of the several departments so frequently as other places more centrally situated. No amount of activity and energy on the part of a Lieut.-Governor of the North-Western Provinces, or on that of his chief officers, can altogether overcome this disadvantage.

4. On the other hand, the Saugor and Nerbudda territories, conjoined with the province of Nagpore, form a compact area of about ninety thousand square miles, with a population of more than six millions of souls, and revenues amounting in the total to about three quarters of a million sterling per annum. And although within the limits of this area some varieties of race, language, and custom exists, yet many of the districts, tribes and classes which it comprises are either quite homogeneous, or have a strong resemblance and affinity to each other; whilst they differ for the most part from those which are found in the other province of the Bengal Presidency. Moreover, all the districts of this united area, though many of them are inconveniently segregated from the Local Government under which they are at present placed, possess comparative facility of communication with each other, and with a centre of Government which shall be common to all.

5. Therefore, the Governor-general in Council, holding, firstly, that it is desirable that the Saugor and Nerbudda Territories should cease to be administered as an adjunct to the North-Western Provinces, and that they should possess an administration sufficient in itself, and permanent in its nature; and, secondly, that these territories may be joined with the province of Nagpore under one local Government with the greatest advantage to the management of the resources and to the development of the capabilities of the whole area, has resolved to constitute a separate Chief Commissionership from the Nagpore Province and the Saugor and Nerbudda territories, to be designated the Chief Commissionership of the Central Provinces, and to be administered by a Chief Commissioner and agent to the Governor-general under the orders of the Supreme Government, on a system similar, in most respects, to that which exists in the Punjab and in Oude.

6. The following districts, as they now exist, will be comprised in the Central Provinces:—

Nagpore Provinces.—Nagpore, Chanda, Chundara, Chindwarra, Raepore (Chutteesgurh), Seroncha, with dependencies of Bustar and Khonde.

Saugor and Nerbudda Territories.—Saugor, Dumoh, Jubbulpore, Mundlah, Seonice, Baitool, Nursingpore, Hoshungabad.

7. The chief commissioner and agent to the Gov. gen. for the Central Provinces will be assisted by a secretary, a judicial commissioner, three divisional commissioners, and a staff of deputy commissioners, assistant commissioners and extra assistant commissioners, according to the subjoined scale:—

RETROSPECT OF 1861.

THE year that has just passed away has been to India one of peace and progress. Here and there slight disturbances have occasionally occurred, but so utterly insignificant as rather to heighten than to mar the general sense of security and repose. Owing to the almost childish insolence of the Sikkim Rajah, and in some degree, also, to the indiscretion of Dr. Campbell, the Superintendent of Darjeeling, it became necessary to make a military demonstration in the Eastern Himalayas. At the head of a small force of Europeans and Sikhs, Lieut.-Colonel Gawler invaded the territories of the mountain chieftain who had ventured to defy the British power, and without much difficulty convinced him of his folly. Another expedition on a still smaller scale inflicted summary chastisement on the Kookies, who, descending from their wild fastnesses, had destroyed and plundered several villages inhabited by British subjects. On the North-Western frontier our troublesome neighbours, the Wuzerees, have again been severely punished for their inveterate indulgence in border raids, and a similar remark will probably be made at the close of many a future year. The Wagheers, however, have profited by experience, and refrained from their usually troublesome courses. In two opposite quarters of the empire temporary riots have been occasioned through misapprehension of the nature and object of the income-tax; at Surat and Bassein respectable tradespeople acting as ringleaders of the mob, while in Assam a British officer fell a victim to the ignorance and passions of the populace. Such trifling outbreaks, however, have no more significance than air bubbles, and no more affect the interests of the people than did the barbarous murder of Prince Kutub-ood-Deen by his own servants.

But if India has been spared the scourge of war, she has not been equally fortunate in escaping from famine and pestilence. Probably not fewer than one hundred thousand human beings have perished from starvation, while vast numbers have not only been reduced to penury, but will carry with them to an early grave the indelible consequences of their recent sufferings. Happily the area visited with this terrible affliction was so situated as to admit of a large application of remedial measures, by means of which many myriads of men have been saved from a lingering death. The munificence of the Government and the open-handed liberality of private individuals greatly tended to mitigate the inevitable evil. Remissions of land-tax were made to the amount of £370,000, while a further sum of £150,000 was expended in relief works of a comparatively unremunerative character. The English public at home nobly responded to the appeal made to them on behalf of their starving fellow-subjects, and in an almost incredibly brief space of time upwards of £110,000 was subscribed and remitted to India. Nor were the English residents in that ungenial land deaf to the supplications of the afflicted community. Without casting a single glance at the past, they at once magnanimously condoned the cruel wrongs that had been done to their kinsmen, and with no stinted measure gave food and clothing and money to all who stood in need of them. Some years, however, must elapse before the dire effects of such a fearful visitation can be entirely removed. But good often springs out of evil, and in the present instance great benefits are likely to accrue to the people from the calamity they have so patiently endured. Works of irrigation will be completed with all reasonable despatch; the means of communication will be rapidly improved; and a permanent settlement of the land-tax will give an extraordinary impulse to agriculture, and encourage each occupier of land to lay out his capital to the greatest advantage. Abundant rains have since produced a bounteous harvest, and in the enjoyment of present plenty the memory of the recent trial is gradually fading away.

Treading closely upon the footsteps of famine came the scarcely less dreaded demon of pestilence. Enfeebled by extreme destitution, the natives of the Doab became an easy prey to cholera, and its victims each day were counted by hundreds. Nor was its virulence confined to the natives. At Lahore upwards of five hundred Europeans, men, women, and children, succumbed to its attacks; H.M.'s 51st Regiment especially swelling the lists of mortality. Taking its usual course to the westward, the plague next rested at Cabul, and, within a few days, seven thousand persons are reported to have perished. A Commission has since been appointed to inquire into the origin of the disease, with a view to its prevention in the future, as if, since its first appearance in 1817, there had not been ample experience afforded as to its causes, if not as to its successful treatment.

No more truly memorable year than the one whose memorial stones we are feebly endeavouring to set up has yet been recorded in the annals of British India. It has been pre-eminently marked by acts of wisdom and beneficence, and for the first time since the establishment of British power in the East has the Government displayed a really unselfish and paternal policy. Rejecting effete traditions and prejudices, it has adapted itself to the exigencies of the times and the character of the people subject to its sway. At the very commencement of the year the Viceroy announced in public durbar that the right of adoption was thenceforth conceded alike to subjects and feudatories, and that the British Government would shun rather than seek any further territorial aggrandizement. The announcement was received with deep-felt gratitude, and from that moment every prince and potentate was assured that he had nothing to fear from the ambition of the paramount Power. The mitigation of the various sentences of punishment awarded to the less guilty mutineers and rebels was another evidence not only of the moderation but of the strength of a Government which dared to pardon as well as to punish.

The civil war in North America having caused a stoppage of the usual supplies of cotton to Liverpool, hopes were naturally entertained that India might be made to take the place of the Southern States. It is to be feared, indeed, that such sanguine expectations are likely to be in some degree disappointed, though some good will be done by the increased energy exhibited in the improvement of roads and in the vigorous prosecution of railway enterprise. Nor is this all. The necessity of European superintendence being recognised on all hands, it was evident that steps must be taken to induce respectable Englishmen to bring their capital, intelligence, and perseverance into a country the climate of which was unfavourable to health, and where the administration of the law had been hitherto peculiarly offensive to European settlers. Lord Canning has, therefore, wisely acceded to the earnest petitions of the non-official residents, and has sanctioned not only the sale of waste lands, but also the redemption of the land-tax, on liberal and equitable terms. It may now fairly be expected that an extraordinary impetus will be given to the cultivation of tea, coffee, and cinchona, and, perhaps, also of cotton. Nor have the indigo planters been forgotten. The institution of Small Cause Courts in the Mofussil, the registration of Nij-jote lands, and the forthcoming measure for the enforcement of contracts, will remove many of the grievances of which they have so bitterly complained. The appointment of honorary magistrates in the North-West Provinces as well as in Bengal is likewise a graceful recognition of the honourable character of many native and European gentlemen not otherwise connected with the Government.

Measures of imperial significance add to the legislative achievements of the year. The local European regiments have been definitively amalgamated with the rest of her Majesty's forces, and a General Staff Corps organised in a manner to secure efficiency, without injury to the rights and privileges of individuals. Liberal inducements, too, have been held out to field officers to retire from a service no longer in accordance with their habits and feelings, while the glorious regiments of Engineers and Artillery will be left in the undisturbed enjoyment of their distinctive honours until the last survivor of the old system has been gathered to his gallant comrades. The reduction of the native army within reasonable limits is not only a cause of diminished expenditure, but likewise of increased security to the State; but the extinction of the military police has been reserved for one of the good deeds of a future year. The abolition of the Legislative Council—or, rather, its transformation into a Governor-general's Council—is variously regarded as an improvement and as a mistake. Very much will, of course, depend upon the tact and intelligence of the Viceroy for the time being as to which of these opposite judgments shall prove the best grounded. The fusion of the Supreme and Sudder Courts, however, admits of no variance of opinion, while the promised appointment of Circuit Judges cannot fail to produce unmitigated good. The opening up of the Civil Service to uncovenanted and military men may possibly be injurious to the Funds of that Service; but, on the other hand, it will enable Government to make use of the right man for any particular duty; private interests must therefore yield to considerations of public utility. The early introduction of a paper currency is another measure from which great commercial advantages may be derived, though it commences on a scale ludicrously inconsistent with the gravity attached to its operation. Retrenchment being the order of the day in every department of the State, it is not surprising that the Indian navy has been swept away as a source of unnecessary expenditure, however galling the fact may be to the experienced mariners who have given it a world-wide reputation. It cannot be questioned, however, that the British navy is quite competent to undertake the defence of the empire in its remotest regions, nor is it desirable for the sake of mere sentiment to perpetuate divisions and distinctions in one common service.

Not the least gratifying event of the past year is the restoration of the financial equilibrium. So vast and judicious is the reduction of expenditure that has been effected, that there is every reason to anticipate a small surplus at the end of the ensuing year. Although a Finance Minister has been specially selected from among English "Economists" to revise and superintend the Indian Budget, it is not to him that the chief credit must be assigned for producing this desirable effect. To the Governor-General himself is due the merit of steadily checking the outlay of each separate department, and of compelling his subordinates to regulate their outgoings by their income. But, mindful of his "high estate," his Excellency has never fallen into the error of practising a sordid economy when it was expedient to impress the native princes with an adequate conception of the power and splendour of the British Government. Whether making a viceregal progress through the wide territories committed to his trust, or holding public durbars at Jubbulpore, in Benares, or Calcutta, he has never omitted to surround himself with all the accessories of pomp and circumstance, bearing himself as the very image and representative of the majesty of England. On the 24th of May, the anniversary of the Queen's birthday, the first drawing room ever known in India was held at the Government House, in the presence of an illustrious lady whose untimely death has since cast a gloom over India. On another occasion the chief officers of the Government and the "beauty and fashion" of the presidency town were assembled to do honour to the investiture of the Commander in Chief with the insignia of the Exalted Order of the Star of India. At different times and places the same proud distinction has since been conferred on the worthiest and most loyal of the native princes, who have ever been treated by Lord Canning with marked deference and courtesy, combined with a dignified self assertion. The experiment of administering justice by means of native gentlemen has been successfully tried in Oude, where the Talooqdars are evidently in earnest in the discharge of their honourable duties. By a spontaneous movement they have now pledged themselves to the suppression of infanticide within the sphere of their influence, and we may now hope also soon to hear the last of the barbarous practices of Suttee and Thuggism.

Painful disputes between the Indigo Planters and the Bengal Government raged through the first half of the past year, and were brought to a height by the indiscreet publication of the Nil Durpan, and its free circulation by the authority of the Bengal Secretariat. The conviction of the Rev. J. Long on a charge of libel, and the subsequent imprisonment of the reverend gentleman somewhat allayed the wrath of the planters, who were finally pacified by the severe rebuke administered to Mr. Seton Karr by the Governor-General. The contradictory reports of Messrs. Morris and Montresor on the Indigo districts naturally tended to protract and envenom the controversy, but as it appears that the ryots have at length discovered who are really their best friends, it is probable that amicable relations will again be restored between them and the planters.

On another point both natives and Europeans united in raising a fierce outcry against the ill-timed extravagance of the Secretary of State for India. For a while Sir Charles Wood was the best abused man of the times, for settling the sum of half a million sterling upon the ex-royal family of Mysore. The arrangement, however, will in the long run prove advantageous, though it must be confessed that Sir Charles acted injudiciously in diminishing the authority and prestige of the Governor-General. A loud clamour also arose from a section of the native community when Sir Mordaunt Wells declared that perjury and forgery were crimes of frequent occurrence and were looked upon as comparatively venial. The accusation, however, is fully borne out by facts and by the experience of half a century. British officers, alas! have, in one lamentable instance, shown themselves but little superior to the natives, or, rather, they have descended to their level. The Commissioner appointed to investigate the charges made against certain officials in Oude, who were accused of buying up Government Paper in a highly corrupt and improper manner, was compelled to admit that the evidence established their guilt; and public disgrace, with loss of emoluments, has been attached to their names. Courts-martial, too, have been so frequent as to indicate great laxity of moral tone among the officers, and a corresponding deficiency of discipline among the men. It must be remembered, however, that the European forces now in India are three times more numerous than previous to the mutiny. The establishment of military workshops, in finding them employment, will wean the soldiers from the canteen, and rouse them from the demoralising effects of a listless apathy. The rejection of natives and Eurasians for general service may, perhaps, be justified on medical grounds, though it is undeniable that there are many officers of mixed blood now holding commissions. The distribution of the Delhi and Lucknow Prize-money is not one of the events of the year under notice; and unless greater despatch is used than has hitherto been displayed, the same remark may be made twelve months hence.

The visit of Maharajah Dhuleep Sing to his aged mother at Calcutta is creditable to his Highness's filial piety, but from a public point of view is even less worthy of note than the death of the Sultan of Bokhara. Several notable individuals have departed for ever from the stage of human affairs. General Sir Alexander MacLaine, K.C.B., who was desperately wounded at Seringapatam, died in the fulness of years and honours in the month of March, as also did Dr. Dealtry, Bishop of Madras. Mr. George Barnes, for a short time Foreign Secretary to the Government, but best known as Commissioner of the Cis-Sutlej States, was a great loss to the Service as a just, able, and industrious man. An old and valued servant of the East India Company, Sir James Cosmo Melville, K.C.B., closed his useful and honourable career on the 23rd July, and later in the year died Colonel Sir Claude Martin Wade, who played a prominent part in the ill-omened invasion of Afghanistan. On the 29th October a gallant and chivalrous knight, Colonel Sir Richmond Shakespear, was cut off in the prime of manhood, just as he had accepted the post of Chief Commissioner of Mysore. Even more sad was the event that occurred on the 18th November, when Countess Canning breathed her last, regretted by all and mourned by very many.

There remains little more to be said. The sales of the India House, the Military College of Addiscombe, and the Civil College of Hailbury, nearly complete the effacement of all traces of the glorious old Company who endowed Great Britain with an empire. Their library has been removed to Cannon-row, their museum to Scotland-yard, and the lawyers have wrangled over the possession of the Fund bequeathed to them by Lord Clive in trust for the benefit of his comrades and their successors.

A British Minister has taken up his residence at Pekin, and now at last the Chinese are slowly awaking to the value of friendly relations with foreign nations. The existence of a cruel internecine strife in the very heart of the empire is a calamity that can only be removed by the intervention of European troops. However much we may regret the necessity of any departure from our self-prescribed neutrality, it is incumbent on us in the interests of humanity to put an end to a state of things too horrible to be any longer endured. The death of the Emperor may prove a blessing to the country, if Prince Kung be able to hold his present position.

The murder of Mr. Heusken, the Secretary to the American Minister, and the murderous assault on the British Legation at Yedo, have chilled our intercourse with the Japanese; nor does it appear that the trade with that ingenious people is likely to be either extensive or profitable. The more they are known the less do they appear worthy of the trouble of knowing them. Thus the old year has gone its round of failures and successes, of joys and sorrows, of actions noble and ignoble, of motives honourable and false. Neither wholly good nor wholly bad, it is a year to be remembered with mournfulness, for it bereaved our gracious Queen of both a mother and a husband. Let us hope, with the Emperor of the French, that the present year may be more favourable to Kings and to peoples.

The public appreciation of the facilities and accommodation afforded by this splendid line of steamers appears, from the above facts, to continue undiminished; and the Indian public, as would appear from their papers, are equally favourably disposed towards the undertaking, and are sanguine as to its ultimate prosperity and success. We may mention that the Golden Fleece was fully armed and manned with naval reserve seamen, and thus quite prepared to show a bold front to any antagonist hardy enough to assail her, and, from her well-known sailing and steaming qualities, would be enabled to elude pursuit if attacked by any superior force.

THE RANA OF OODEPORE (JYROOP SINGH) is dead. His demise has been expected for several years, and there is, therefore, no improbability in the account received in Agra of his death. He not long ago adopted his grand-nephew Sambhoo Singh, son of the late Sadhool Singh, and grandson of the late Maharaja Shere Singh, his eldest brother. This event will probably take the agent of the Governor-general in Rajpootana to the capital of Meywar. The camp will march vid Bhoondee and Jalra Patan, and return by Nee-much, Deolee, and Ajmere. During the present marching season the Governor-general's Agent will probably make the usual tour through Rajpootana, visiting the various capitals, Tonk, Jeypore, Kerowlee, Alwar, Bhurtpore, and Dholepore, in succession.—Delhi Gazette.

COTTON FROM CENTRAL ASIA.—The Englishman says that "the advance in the prices of cotton, and the stoppage of the supply from America, has induced Russia to look to other countries for the means of meeting the demand from her own manufacturers, whose consumption is large and daily increasing. Even from Khiva and Bokhara they are drawing supplies, and the cultivation of the staple in those countries has been very largely extended. The value of that sold recently at the fair of Novogorod was estimated at £150,000.

THE MAHARAJAH SCINDIAH has ordered a remission of six annas in the rupee to the ryots who suffered by the late overflow of the Chumbul, a worthy example to native landowners.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

URGENT APPEAL.

THE DIRECTORS OF THE STRANGERS' HOME FOR ASIATICS having been permitted to attain, under most pressing pecuniary difficulties, the principal moral and social objects for which the Institution was established, in ameliorating the condition and alleviating the temporal and spiritual destitution of hundreds of helpless Asiatic and African Strangers, find themselves at the close of another year without sufficient funds to meet the current expenses of the Institution.

The work has invariably been carried on with the strictest economy, and the Directors are thankful for the support they have hitherto received, but they do not consider themselves justified to borrow money to meet the current expenses of the Home, which amounts (including £250 interest on debt) to about £1,100 annually.

They therefore once more appeal to their friends, supporters, and the Public for Subscriptions or Donations, and would ask them, SHALL THE DOORS OF THE HOME BE CLOSED through the insufficiency of pecuniary aid, or because, under temporary circumstances, the number of inmates in the Home are insufficient to render the Institution self-supporting?—Shall the metropolis of Christian England again subject itself to the reproach, that Oriental strangers visiting her shores, find a reception worse than that in a heathen land—no friend, no Christian sympathy—nothing to prove we value the immense blessing the Gospel of the Lord Christ has given to us?—Shall the streets of the metropolis once more be inundated with Eastern mendicants?—Shall the jails, workhouses, and hospitals be again unnecessarily occupied by Asiatics?—Shall the labours of the last four years be thrown away, and the work suspended?—Shall Christian sympathy, assistance, and advice no longer be shown or given to helpless strangers?—Rather is it not imperative on the Directors to continue their appeal to the public for funds to carry on a work which has been such a blessing to hundreds, and acknowledged by the philanthropist and Christian to be both needful, useful, and advantageous in all its objects?

The Directors cannot believe that the public will permit their labours to be suspended, or the Home closed, and casting all their difficulties on Him from whom they have received such tokens of favour, would go on in faith, earnestly pleading with all into whose hands this paper may fall that each one will provide his share of the means wanting for carrying on the work.

R. M. HUGHES, Lieut.-Col.,
Honorary Secretary.

DENTAL SURGERY, 9, GROSVENOR-STREET.*MR. EPHRAIM MOSELY'S IMPROVEMENT in the CONSTRUCTION of ARTIFICIAL

TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES, on an INDIA-RUBBER BASE, are secured by Letters Patent, dated December, 1852, whereby the continual outlay of new teeth is avoided, alterations from the absorption of the gums, or any other cause, being easily remedied, and the first outlay no greater than for ordinary kinds. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted as under:—It consists of one continuous piece of Prepared India-rubber. The Artificial Teeth present an uniformly even surface to the action of the tongue, preventing lodgment of food and all secretions, so much complained of in the present system. No gold or any other metal being required, all springs, wires, and fastenings are wholly unnecessary; sharp edges are avoided, a greatly-increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity hitherto wholly unattainable, and a fit perfected with the most unerring accuracy, are secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums. The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the prepared india-rubber; and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may be retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being at the same time provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of letters or newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE most important news received by the Calcutta Mail of the 9th December is the confirmation of the telegram lately received by way of St. Petersburg, announcing a coup d'état at Peking. Under the nominal regency of the two Empresses, Prince Kung is now the virtual ruler of the Chinese Empire. Should he succeed in maintaining his present position, there is little doubt of the continuance of friendly relations between the Central Flowery Land and the outside barbarians.

From India the intelligence is almost a blank. Some slight disturbances are again reported from the Indigo districts, which have served to revive the dormant antipathy of the local press towards Messrs. Grant and Herschell. In the absolute dearth of subjects to write upon, some allowance must be made for exaggeration, and for the too facile yielding to every temptation to abuse "the authorities."

After much vacillation, the Nizam finally consented to accept the insignia of the Star of India, and was duly invested on the 25th November by the Resident, Colonel Davidson. His Highness is reported to have informed that gallant officer that certain placards had been publicly posted up to the effect that the Feringhees were making a Christian of him, and that he was going into bondage, and generally denouncing both himself and his Minister. But, added his Highness, it needed no angel to expose the fallacy of these statements.

The Bengal Government has lost one of its ablest officers by the death of Colonel Baird Smith, C.B., which took place at sea, a few days after leaving Calcutta. Scarce any name has of late been more frequently before the public, or more honourably distinguished.

Deputations from the Chamber of Commerce, the Landholders' Association, and the British Indian Association, waited upon the Hon. Samuel Laing, on the 6th December, to congratulate him on his return to his duties in renovated health. We are indebted to the Hurkaru for the following condensed report of the address presented by the representatives of these influential bodies, with the exception of the Landholders' Association, of which we shall have occasion to speak more fully in our next issue:—

"The address was read by Mr. Fitz William, the President of the Chamber of Commerce. After congratulating the honourable gentleman on his return to India, and his restoration to health, it expressed the great satisfaction of the public with regard to the energetic efforts made by the Government of India to restore equilibrium of the finances. The vast reductions already carried out, and those which Mr. Laing encouraged the public to hope would soon follow, induced them to think that those customs duties which weigh so heavily upon commerce, and which were imposed in a time of great financial pressure, will be speedily abolished. The cash balances already showed an increase over those of last year, and the recent wise measures and concessions of the Governor-General, it was believed, would add largely to the increase of the revenue, and place the credit of the country upon a sound basis. The address then alluded to the all absorbing cotton question. It observed that if those interested in the subject would put their shoulders to the wheel, they would receive every assistance in this country, both from Europeans and natives; that cotton to any quantity can be produced in India, but that it was uncertain whether it would find a profitable market in Lancashire. Mr. Laing returned thanks for the kind wishes expressed in the address. He thought that they too highly appreciated the services he had performed. It gave him great pleasure to find that the representatives of important interests applied the term of 'wise measures and concessions' to the recent policy of the Government, and to the other great measures which would render the closing career of Lord Canning so memorable in the annals of Indian history. It afforded the best proof that the policy had been successful, the object of which was to reconcile the European and native interests in developing the intellectual, the social, and the material improvement of this great empire. Mr. Laing next adverted to the importance of encouraging European capital and enterprise in India, and to the expansion of European commerce, which he observed was so obvious, that the man must be stricken with 'judicial blindness' who did not perceive its advantages. At the same time he said that it was not less clear that the welfare of the one hundred and fifty millions entrusted to our care demanded our primary object and attention. Mr. Laing believed that these two objects 'are not only compatible, but, if rightly understood, identical.' With reference to the import duties which the aforesaid bodies had recommended for abolition, Mr. Laing remarked that however desirable such a change was, he could not, with so large a revenue depending upon so fluctuating an article as opium, hold out anything like a pledge at present upon the subject. He thought the first duty of a Chancellor of the Exchequer was to resist the desire to gain popularity by remitting taxes, until he was assured that he had obtained a solid surplus. He saw the desirability of a reduction of the taxes, and he would spare no efforts to accomplish the measure, consistently with financial prudence. He thought that the permanent substitution of Indian for American cotton could never be brought about until the quality of cotton in India had been improved. The only means to bring this about were improved communications for the conveyance of cotton from the interior to the seaboard, and the presence in the cotton districts of European agents to make advances."

The apparently interminable series of Questions and Answers on the subject of the Amalgamation Scheme is continued in another page. It may not, perhaps, be amiss to explain that the long list of promotions and alterations of rank in H.M.'s Military Indian Forces, which was published in the Times of the 9th instant, has already appeared at different times in the Indian Mail. Indeed, we shrewdly suspect that it has been compiled from our own columns.

THE SECOND PERIL OF CALCUTTA.

The existence of Calcutta, as the greatest commercial port of Asia, is threatened by two dangers, the pestilence which, it is to be feared, the drainage of the city into the salt water marsh will create, and the silting up of the river Hooghly, which now carries its vast trade to and from the sea. The first we have exposed, and the completion of the main sewer now under construction will throw some light upon it. The second has periodically been a subject of discussion. It led to the construction of a railway to the Mutla river, now nearly completed; it was the cause of the appointment of a Committee in 1853 by Lord Dalhousie, the members of which came to the conclusion that the fear of deterioration in the channel of the river was well-founded; it was the ground of a movement in the same year for the establishment of a company to construct a railway to Diamond Harbour, below the dreaded "James and Mary" shoal.

As a rule, the pilots, men of intelligence and education, the late Mr. Piddington, and some engineers, such as Mr. Leonard, c.e., are of opinion that the river is not deteriorating, but that the annually increasing number of casualties is owing to the greater depth and size now given to ships. If a channel silts up in one spot, another is opened near it, and on the whole uniform facilities of approach from the sea are preserved. On the other hand, Major W. S. Sherwill and others, who have surveyed the mouths of the Ganges, believe firmly in the silting up of the Hooghly and its feeders. This was the opinion of the Committee of 1853. The alluvium brought down by the Adige and the Po has so changed the north-east coast of Italy, that Adria, where Augustus moored his fleet, is now twenty, and Ravenna, that once glorious capital, six, miles inland. It is impossible that a proportionately large deposit should not have taken place in the case of the Ganges, which discharges a hundred and fifty times more water, holding in solution a hundred times more mud than the Po. And if ship-building and the necessities of commerce are to progress as they have done, Calcutta must accommodate itself to them. Moreover, we cannot get over the fact that above Calcutta the Hooghly has changed enormously for the worse. At one time the whole Ganges passed down direct to the Bay of Bengal, through what is now the channel of the Hooghly. Nuddea, which is now the centre of the indigo cultivation, and several hundred miles from the sea, was in 1203 an island washed by the salt waves as Saugor is at this day. Its name is the Nava Dwipa, the new island, and Augurdeep below it, is Agra Dwipa, the foremost island, both as sacred spots for suttees, infanticide and human sacrifices as Saugor has since become. Even in the days of Sir W. Jones, the bore reached Nuddea, but now it ceases thirty miles further down. With three frigates of the line Admiral Watson bombarded Chandernagore a century ago, and the great Dutch ships of those days sailed higher up to Chinsurah for the piece goods which Bengal then exported. Is there any reason why this deterioration should stop at Calcutta, unless artificial means are employed to clear the channel? It is the subject of general remark that, in spite of a rain fall continued for six months, and fifty per cent. greater than usual, the Hooghly was never so low as at present. Opposite Chinsurah new churs are being thrown up across the whole channel. For years we have watched the river from our window, and have never known it so low or its water so free from the muddy solution which the Ganges pours into it. What is the state and what the prospects of the Hooghly are all important questions to Calcutta.

The Hooghly consists of three affluents on the north—the Bhagurutte, Jellinghee, and Matabanga, which the main Ganges throws off not far from Kooshtea, the terminus of the Eastern Bengal Railway. It is fed from the west by such mountain streams as the More, Adjai, and Bansloi, over which the railway traveller passes on his way to Rajmahal. Their waters are clear and sparkling, except in the rains. The Ganges pours its main stream through the Gorai, which the river steamers from Calcutta use, except when the rains permit them to take the short route by the Hooghly and Matabangah. The three Nuddea rivers, as they are called, could they be kept open, are thus the best, and the Gorai the next best path to the Upper Provinces. Were the latter shut the detour to reach Calcutta by river would be nearly doubled. Now even the Gorai is said to be threatened. The high flooding of the present year has tempted the Ganges opposite Kooshtea to move away from the Gorai into its old bed at Pubna. The safety of that valuable stream, however, fortunately depends on another cause. The Teesta river, which flows from Sikkim, not fifty years ago entered the Ganges, but suddenly took a freak and fell into the Berhampooter, the waters of which were so increased that it opened up the Jumoonah, which discharged itself up the Ganges, where shoals were formed of such an extent that it is fordable in some parts. This caused the Gorai on the south to increase to its present dimensions, so that it depends for its volume more on the Teesta and Jumoonah than on the Ganges. Communication then between Calcutta and the North-West, by the Gorai, we believe to be meanwhile safe, but the course of the Teesta and the Ganges at Kooshtea should be carefully watched.

A question of more importance is the state of the river from Calcutta to the sea. The Hooghly consists, we have said, of the three offshoots from the Ganges on the north, and the hill streams of Beerbhoom on the west. In time of flood each set contributes in equal proportions to its volume. Over the whole year the Ganges rivers pour in three-fourths, and the Beerbhoom streams the rest. But during the dry season, Mr. Leonard tells us, there is literally no water entering the rivers. Last season the whole of the water passing Calcutta was from infiltration from the banks and beds. This year it is probable there will be a small supply by the mouths of two of the rivers. But it is a fact that less water now enters the Hooghly from the Nuddea rivers than before, owing to an increase in the size of the Coomar, which has taken the supply the Ganges usually gave to the Matabangah. Unless it be possible to increase the volume of water contributed by both sets of rivers for the eight dry months of the year, we fear the Hooghly opposite to and below Calcutta will deteriorate more and more. And, it is said, no engineering in the world will improve these streams. Can anything, then, be done below Calcutta to clear away that great obstruction which can be passed by the mail steamers only at high water? As it is the invariable tendency of all tributary rivers entering others to throw up shoals up stream, the Damooda is the cause of the Fulta Sand and the Roopnarain of the "James and Mary." Twice within the last half century has the Damooda visited the Hooghly at Serampore. If it could be induced to flow into the Hooghly in that way permanently, as it certainly used to do, not only would the Fulta Sand disappear below, but the volume of the Hooghly would be increased above Calcutta. The canal from the Damooda, 7½ miles to Oolabarish on the Hooghly is in progress, but its benefit will be only commercial. This much is certain, that if the James and Mary can be removed, money should be no object. It is likely that this might be effected by turning the Damooda into the Roopnarain at a point four miles below Koila Ghant, and then turning the combined river into the Huldea. The Fulta Sand and James and Mary would disappear. The volume of water is too large to allow of another shoal forming at the mouth of the Huldea.

Our conclusion is that the Hooghly is deteriorating, that it is impossible to increase the volume of water poured into it by the northern and western rivers, and that as it silts up ships will increase in size and bulk. One remedy is the diversion of the Damooda into its old bed between Serampore and Chinsurah, and the diversion of the Roopnarain into the Huldea, or of the Damooda also if that plan be preferable. Thus the shoals would be swept away, and the volume of water above Calcutta be increased. We trust the day will never come when the Mutla or Diamond Harbour, with a railway to each, will be more than auxiliary ports to Calcutta. But it is well that the Mutla railway is nearly completed, and will be opened to the public in a few weeks. We draw attention to the perils that beset Calcutta only that its motto may ever be—Watch.—Friend of India.

THE MATERIAL PROGRESS OF BENGAL.

It is well that Bengal should see itself as others see it. The hand which painted its financial condition in the Gazette and administered a sly rebuke to the Punjab two weeks ago, was that not of a Bengal but of a Bombay civilian. The sketch was skilfully and truthfully done on the principles of the Pre-Raphaelite school. But even the Bombay member of the Government of India, who has twice stood in the breach during the interregnum of English financiers, was constrained to admit that, after making an allowance for every consideration, "there is a larger proportionate surplus of receipts as compared with disbursements in Bengal than in any other province." Into the causes of this material progress it is not our intention at present to inquire. They may be roughly summed up as two—the permanent settlement and the rich alluvial soil of the Gangetic valley, both of which have attracted English capital and energy, in spite of misgovernment, which resembles in all essential particulars, except deliberate cruelty, that of the Bourbons of Naples. Our object is rather to marshal the facts which will show the character of that progress, and to draw one or two of those very obvious and practical lessons which must soon be learned, if our success is not to prove our ruin.

The whole revenue of Bengal in the year 1860-61, which expired on 1st May last, was £14,000,330, an increase of a million and a half on the previous year. In the current year it is estimated a little higher. After deducting the expenditure a clear surplus is left for imperial purposes of four and a half millions. This gigantic leap, one would fancy, is a sufficient argument to meet the objections of the few fossilised writers, who, like the Protectionists that expired with Colonel Sibthorp, still cling to the belief that short settlements are better than perpetual assessments of the land revenue for the State if not for the people. Dividing the revenue into the results of direct and indirect taxation, what do we find? Of direct taxation we have the Land revenue, Sayer and the Income-tax. As if to show that, even under a permanent settlement, the Land-tax will increase, it has risen from £3,545,616 in 1845-46, to £3,787,064 last year. The right of the State as zemindar in 410 estates has been sold for £183,249, or eight years' purchase of the gross rental, and an area of 205,359 acres of waste land, chiefly in the Soonderbuns, has been disposed of. It is not generally known that the redemption of the Land-tax has for years been possible in Calcutta, and in the case of trifling estates, such as those of Chittagong. Redemption was effected, chiefly in the former, to the extent of £1,822, at an average of fifteen years' purchase. Henceforth we expect to see the purchase price of wastes bulking largely in the annual balance-sheet. For Income-tax the whole province was assessed at £485,426, or nearly twice the sum expected from Madras or Bombay. Of this only £126,525 was collected during the year for two quarters. If the results of May be added, the gross collections amount to about half of the whole sum assessed. Calcutta, with its suburbs, is assessed at £107,054, of which two-thirds were collected up to the end of May, and of this a full half was assessed by the Special Commissioner, showing the desire for secrecy. Direct taxation given in Bengal:—

|--------------------|------------|------------|
| Land Revenue...    | £3,749,014 | £3,787,064 |
| Sayer...           | 34,738     | 44,766     |
| Assessed Taxes ... | —          | 187,568    |
|                    | £3,783,752 | £4,019,398 |

Far more gratifying is the progress in the revenue from the less objectionable indirect taxation. In the Customs the net revenue has risen from £137,400 twenty years ago, just five times, to £2,215,234. This includes imported salt, but for which the revenue of last year would have shown a falling off as compared with its predecessor, owing to the depressed state of trade. When we come to salt we find the progress more remarkable. The annual consumption has risen from an average of 201,040 tons twenty years ago to 318,141 tons last year, while the rate of duty is as it was then. Yet wages have more than doubled, and to this enormous extent the poor have benefited. There is here a clear case for another four annas of duty. Salt, which sold at Rs. 425 per 100 maunds in 1841, is now only Rs. 388, while tobacco has increased from Rs. 2-8 to 5, gram from Rs. 1 to 2-7, dhol from Rs. 1-13 to Rs. 2-9, paddy from annas 11 to annas 16, cow's ghee from Rs. 15-8 to Rs. 28-8, and mustard oil from Rs. 4-10 to Rs. 10,—in all fifty, and in many cases more than a hundred per cent. The price paid to the Molunghees who make the salt was raised to a shilling a maund, and that given to the cultivators of opium to four shillings a pound. The net receipts from opium have more than doubled since 1844, being now £3,609,361, against £1,783,145 in that year. In excise the net revenue has just doubled in fifteen years, being now £416,257. The doubling of the duty on gunjah, that most deleterious of drugs, has increased the revenue and the use of opium at the same time, while it has largely diminished the consumption of the drug. But perhaps the most remarkable rise was in the sale of stamps, and that will go on largely increasing. In fifteen years the revenue has grown from £243,515 to £169,347. To sum up these results. During the year there was an increase in these indirect taxes:—

|                |          |
|----------------|----------|
| Customs ... .. | £122,272 |
| Salt ... ..    | 672,310  |
| Excise ... ..  | 34,070   |
| Stamps ... ..  | 169,374  |

Adding miscellaneous receipts from the police-courts and public works, the whole indirect taxation of Bengal was £9,980,932, while, as we have seen, the direct was £4,019,398, or 72 and 28 per cent. respectively, so that Bengal quoad taxation is before some of the civilised countries of Europe. The relative proportion of indirect to direct taxation in the United Kingdom is 81 to 16, and in Prussia 54 to 46. What will not all India become with a permanent settlement like Bengal, which is already better than Prussia and almost equal to Holland? So far as figures are available the following will show the material progress of Bengal for the last fifteen or twenty years:—

|                              | 1840-41           | 1860-61            |
|------------------------------|-------------------|--------------------|
| Land Revenue, 1845-46 ...    | £3,545,616        | £3,787,063         |
| Income-tax ... ..            | —                 | 187,568            |
| INDIRECT.             |                   |                    |
| Excise, 1845-56 ... ..       | £212,986          | £438,129           |
| Customs (excluding Salt) ... | 260,000           | 1,264,252          |
| Salt ... ..                  | 1,616,253         | 2,430,189          |
| Opium, 1844-45 ... ..        | 1,783,145         | 3,609,361          |
| Stamps, 1845-46 ... ..       | 243,515           | 469,347            |
| Total ... ..          | £7,651,515 | £12,185,909 |

Thus, even in these great items, the revenue has increased four and a-half millions in fifteen or twenty years. A population, officially estimated at forty millions, and covering 253,000 square miles, of only 158 to the mile, pays per head of indirect taxation five, and of direct taxation two shillings. The total civil expenditure is £4,245,405, or, deducting the cost of manufacturing salt and opium, £2,933,708.

We have no particular affection for Bengal, more than for any of the other provinces. The object of all interested in the welfare of India must be its glory as an empire. But this will be effected only through the prosperity of the federal parts of which it is composed. And when we see these facts that, notwithstanding the confessedly enormous surplus of Bengal, only £105,142 was spent in education, only £768,628 on the administration of justice, and only £578,176 on roads and public works, it is our duty, in the interest of the Empire, to complain. We take it that Bengal is a good investment. The more spent on it the more it will yield. Two shillings of capital laid out by the State in Bengal will go as far as half-a-crown in the other provinces. As personally the members of the Government of India would prefer Bank of Bengal shares yielding eight per cent. to Government paper which gives five, both being equally secure, so, as a government, they should use the public money in the best investment. But there are higher considerations. Bengal has the fewest schools, the worst roads (except Bombay), the most disgraceful courts and the most abominable police in India, and the result is gross misgovernment. It is thus, and not by English settlers, that the peasantry are injured. There is ground for the cry, even a Bombay financier being judge, of justice to Bengal.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE EXHIBITION FOR 1862.—The bonded warehouse was thronged with visitors on Monday, November 25th, to see the first portion of the contributions from India to the Exhibition of 1862, but we fear that the generality must have been as much disappointed as we certainly were. None of the fine textile fabrics of Dacca, of the rich brocades, silks, and embroideries of Benares, of the silver flagee work of Cuttack, and of the ivory carvings of Berhampore being expected before the beginning of January, the collection on view was limited to such specimens of products and manufactures as have already reached the Presidency, and which are being got ready for shipment round the Cape. They comprise silks and tussers from Beerbhoom, Maldah, Burdwan, Midnapore, Hooghly, and Assam. Cotton fabrics from Patna, turnery from Monghyr, shawls from Loodianah, pottery from Sevan, bidree ware from Purneah, with a variety of gold embroidered dresses, turbans, shoes, &c., presented by some native Princes of Oude. With regard to the manufactures in silk and cotton, we must admit that they afford an undeniable proof of considerable improvement, and some of the fabrics from Maldah, Burdwan, and Midnapore are superior to anything we have seen from those districts. With the shawls we were most of all disappointed; they are decidedly inferior to those sent to the London and Paris Exhibitions, and corroborate the fact lately stated by our Punjab correspondent, that the manufacture of shawls has greatly deteriorated. From the labels attached, they appear comparatively cheap; but this is a direction in which European machinery can beat any hand labour out of the field; and a five-guinea Paisley is far before any thing that India can produce for fifty rupees, both in beauty and usefulness; and we would rather have seen specimens of the looms of Cashmere commending themselves by superior workmanship and quality than cheapness of cost. The work in steel inlaid with gold from Goojerat is very fine, and so are the paintings on ivory from Delhi. The jewellery from the latter place shows a marked improvement of workmanship, but loses much of its character by being an imitation of English and French designs. The paintings, armour, and other articles, presented by some native gentlemen, have probably been received on the principle of the old adage that you "must not look a gift horse in the mouth," but their sale in England will contribute something towards paying the piper. The most interesting part of this instalment of the Exhibition appeared to us to be the collection of the various cereals, pulses, gums, resins, dyes, and oils, which certainly is got up in an excellent manner, each specimen being exhibited in a glass stoppered phial carefully classified and labelled with its botanical name. Of these we understand there are to be not less than two thousand specimens, and it is to these that we look for a practical advantage in preference to local manufactures which have to stand the test of competition from at home, until machinery can supply the place of manual labour, and railways and canals increase and cheapen the present means of transport. We have only to add to our notice, that the embroidered handkerchiefs, collars, &c., which were on view, excel anything hitherto produced here, and cannot fail to attract notice at the Exhibition of 1862.—Englishman.

LADY CANNING.—The Bengali press, as translated by the Reformer, pays its tribute to the memory of Lady Canning with much of that grace and little of that hyperbole which are the characteristics of the Asiatic. The Soma Prakash says:—"We have had many Governors-general, but the lady of not one took so lively an interest in the welfare of India as Countess Canning. Her death must be regarded as a great calamity to Hindu women. She commiserated the degraded condition of the females of this land, and endeavoured to elevate them. We have heard that she contributed Rs. 100 every month to the fund for the remarriage of Hindu widows. Mr. Bethune's girls' school has been hitherto sustained and kept up only by her liberality. If spared to return to England, she would doubtless have pleaded there the cause of the women of this country. One of the chief objects of her life seems to have been to remove the distress of womanhood, whether of India or elsewhere. She was unwearied in well-doing. We are greatly distressed on account of Lord Canning. From the day that his lordship set his foot in India he has not spent one happy day. The revolt of the sepoys, the mutiny of European soldiers, the indigo dispute, deficit in the revenue—with all this he has been sorely vexed. Just at the moment when about to enjoy ease, happiness and fame, he is deprived of his better half." The Paridarshak speaks of the humanity, candour, clemency, and greatness of her character. The Prabhakar, after some imaginary statements, says, "So highly was she adorned with the attribute of mercy, that she not only contributed to the furtherance of every scheme which aims at the improvement of the country, but was unwearied in the performance of every good work. Born in a noble family and wedded to an equally noble lord, she had not the slightest tincture of pride, and her pure heart was at all times disposed to be merciful. In consequence of her premature death, countless people, plunged in the waters of distress, are setting up a loud lamentation." The Bhaskur asks:—"What rocky heart will not melt into sorrow at the premature death of so excellent a lady? Lord Canning, like Lord Dalhousie, must go home with a heart full of sadness." And the Sajjana Ranjanu writes, "the heart of Lord Canning has been struck with the thunder bolt of grief. Alas! how vain are human expectations!"

ST. ANDREW'S DAY IN CALCUTTA.—St. Andrew's Day having fallen on a Saturday, the Scotchmen of Calcutta held their annual dinner on the previous Friday in the Town Hall. Upwards of two hundred and forty sat down, nearly a hundred more than on previous occasions. Letters were read from Sir B. Frere and other members of Government expressing their regret that they could not be present owing to the recent bereavement of the Viceroy. Mr. Sandeman, C. S., discharged the duties of Chairman most effectively. After grace had been said, thanks returned, and the usual loyal toasts disposed of, the Chairman proposed the "Army and Navy," for which Lieutenant-colonel Douglas, of the Telegraph Department, replied. The toast of the "Pious Memory of St. Andrew," introduced by the Chairman, was drunk in solemn silence. Mr. P. P. Gordon, the Croupier, proposed "The Land o' Cakes;" Dr. Bird, of Howrah, "The Lasses," for whom Mr. F. J. Fergusson responded; Mr. Dunlop, the honorary secretary, "The Memory of Bruce and Wallace;" the Croupier, "The Poets of Scotland," and Mr. Mackintosh, "The Bench and the Bar," for which Mr. Goodeve replied. Mr. Maitland, merchant, proposed "The Civil Service," for which Mr. Wauchope returned thanks, and Mr. Eglinton, barrister, "The Press," for which Mr. George Smith replied. Colonel Douglas proposed "The Merchants of Calcutta," whom Mr. Balfour represented, and Mr. Balfour "The Trades," for whom Mr. Laurie spoke. "Our Guests" was proposed by the Chairman, "The Chairman" by Mr. Fitzwilliam, and "The Croupier" by Mr. Money. The dinner was the most successful that has been held for many years.

LORD ELGIN'S MEDICAL ATTENDANT.—The Englishman admits that he was in error in stating that "Surgeon Hardy, of the Royal Service, would come out as personal surgeon to Lord Elgin; the medical officer who has finally been chosen by his lordship being Staff Surgeon Anthony Home, who served in this country during the mutiny in charge of H.M.'s 90th Light Infantry, and, for his conduct at the relief of Lucknow, received the decoration of the Victoria Cross. Before nominating Surgeon Home, Lord Elgin referred the matter to this country for information as to whether he was empowered to select his own medical attendant, or was limited in his choice to a company's officer, and the answer being that nothing more than precedent was against a royal officer, the appointment was made as above notified. As far as any limitation to Lord Elgin's choice of a medical attendant is concerned, we do not believe that he is restricted to either service; but that he may select who he likes, civil or military, and nominate accordingly."

COLONEL BROOME'S SCHEME.—A large meeting of the royal artillery, late Company's Bengal officers, has taken place in Calcutta, at which almost every officer stationed at and near Calcutta, and many temporarily here, attended, to take into consideration Col. Broome's scheme for the Artillery Retiring Fund, and to appoint a committee for carrying out its provisions in the regiment, should they be approved, in conjunction with their brother officers up country and elsewhere. At the meeting Col. Broome's scheme was universally approved and accepted, all the officers present giving in their hearty adhesion, and promising their steady and united support to the measure. The thanks of the meeting, and of the late Company's Bengal artillery officers as represented by it, were warmly and unanimously voted to Col. Broome, for the labour and ability expended and displayed in drawing up the Artillery Retiring Fund scheme; and we believe that it was resolved to present the gallant author with a still more substantial testimonial of the approbation and gratitude of his brother officers, for his untiring zeal in their service.—Englishman.

NAGPORE.—A correspondent of the Poona Observer says the price of cotton in Nagpore this year is higher by fifty per cent. than it was in 1856-57. Upwards of 2,00,000 acres of land are annually under cultivation, and the produce at an average is about 1,000 lbs. per acre, and is sold by wholesale dealers at 3d. per lb. Raepore is the least suited of all the districts of Nagpore for cotton, but it abounds in teak and ebony. Chindwara is the most fertile and healthy district, and its chief town is at present used as the sanitarium of the province, though for this purpose Mohoor is said to be preferable. The cultivation of hops, tea, and coffee, would succeed there. Coal and iron are found. "Sironcha (two hundred and ten miles from Nagpore via Chanda), is the smallest district at the junction of the Pranhitta and Godavery rivers. The Agra and Bombay line branches off near Saugor, and winds up to Narsingpore (throwing out at some miles off a cart track to Baitool), and on to Chindwara, where it enters the Nagpore province, and runs on through Nagpore and from thence to Chanda, where a communication will or has been opened for traffic to Sironcha." When will the Commissioner's Annual Administration Report appear? Since the amalgamation of the province with Saugor and Nerbudda has been decreed, it is more than ever wanted. The results of Mr. Temple's inquiries should be published.

THE NATIVE "ALSATIA" AT GARDEN REACH.—Mr. Wauchope, the Commissioner of Police, we are informed, a short time since brought to the notice of the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal the state of things existing in Garden Reach, the police of which has fallen into his jurisdiction. Mr. Wauchope stated that the ex-King of Oude has purchased a number of the houses, with the grounds surrounding them, in Garden Reach. Within these premises thousands of persons have located themselves, consisting not only of the ex-King's immediate followers, but of thieves, prostitutes, gamblers, and others of disreputable character. Gambling, drinking, thieving, and every kind of debauchery are carried on within these grounds, but being private, the police have no power to enter them, and can exercise no control over their inmates so long as they remain quiet. In fact, the lower part of Garden Reach has become a perfect Alsatia, in which any person escaping from justice may take refuge and set the police at defiance. If these acts were confined to the premises the commissioner observed he should say nothing; but the annoyance caused by these persons to their neighbours is considerable, and the police have no power by law to stop it. Besides their favourite amusement of letting off guns and fireworks, no one can tell that some of the bad characters living on the ex-King's grounds may not extend their depredations beyond his premises; and indeed there is every reason to believe that several thefts which have taken place in that neighbourhood have been committed by them. The ex-King of Oude is many lacs of rupees in debt, and his expenses are so great and so reckless that it will be impossible for him much longer to borrow money and live at the rate he does at present, and it may be feared that when his expenditure stops those now preying on him will be let loose in Calcutta and its neighbourhood. The Commissioner had been in communication with Major Herbert, the agent of the Governor-general with the ex-King, on the subject, and was told by him that he has the power only to advise, and that his advice is altogether unheeded. Some other means must therefore be adopted to remedy this state of affairs. The Commissioner is of opinion that it is absolutely necessary that the police should have access to the ex-King's premises, and that the inhabitants should be assessed to pay for the additional police which will be required to look after them. This, however, cannot be done without a special enactment to meet the particular case, and such a law may be considered objectionable; for, if passed, it will destroy the privileges and rights of private property which the ex-King has purchased; and whether the Legislative Council would pass an Act for this purpose is doubtful, even although those rights and privileges have been most lamentably abused. The Commissioner would certainly not recommend it if he knew any other means by which there was a chance of reforming the present state of misrule and disorder. The commissioner has stationed at Garden Reach a strong force of thirty-six policemen, who preserve the semblance of decorum on the roads, but are quite unable to interfere with the riot and debauchery carried on within the grounds of the ex-King of Oude. The Bengal Government, in submitting the above to the Supreme Government, observed that although all reasonable consideration would always be paid to the ex-King's position, yet, by law, the police have, of course, the same right of entering the houses and grounds of the ex-King and his servants in pursuit of thieves and other offenders that they have in other cases. Perhaps some good might be done if the agent of the Governor-general with the ex-King were moved to explain this to Wajeed Ally Shah, and make him understand that if the grounds of his villas are converted into a populous town full of people of questionable or disreputable character, it will be impossible to treat them in any exceptional manner; and the visits of the police may become so constant as to be very disagreeable and discreditable. The Lieutenant-governor thought that a recommendation proceeding from his Excellency the Viceroy as to the propriety of his keeping better order in his grounds, of restricting the number of the residents, and of removing all bad characters, might have some effect. And he was further of opinion that should this recommendation be disregarded, there would then be no improper interference with private rights if a law were passed which should make the regulations providing for the streets of a town applicable to the grounds which have been converted from the ornamental grounds of a suburban villa into what is, in fact, a very populous town. We further learn that a number of rebels who took prominent part during the late disturbances at Oude, whom the Governor-general amnesty, are still in the employ of the ex-King. Altogether the state of this modern Alsatia is clearly one demanding prompt remedy.—Englishman.

INDIGO DISTRICTS.—Things are getting worse instead of better in the indigo districts. At the Bamondy factory, while the Gomastah, an Ameen, and a Burkundaz were engaged with the factory coolies in sowing down lands which had twice been decreed by the courts to the factory, they were attacked by the villagers. The ploughmen escaped by jumping into the river and swimming across it, but the Gomastah, the Ameen, and the Burkundaz were knocked down and dragged away to the village. The Gomastah's life was spared at the intercession of a Brahmin who knew him, but the Ameen was murdered and his body thrown into the river, whence it was afterwards recovered. Messrs. Thomas and Co., agents for Mr. Kenny, the proprietor of the factory, have over and over again appealed to the Government for protection to this factory, prophesying what has taken place, but have always received, instead of what they wanted, answers in Mr. Grant's most logical style refusing to interfere. But it is not only native servants who take their lives in their hands when they consent to serve Europeans. An assistant of Messrs. John and Robert Watson, of the name of Logan, was "lately nearly murdered, dragged by the heels for miles over the clods, his nose nearly cut off, thirty wounds on his body from lathes, &c., and then thrown on board his boat, which was sent adrift, his crew having bolted." This gentleman was attacked while merely sowing the factory land. It is not likely that these outrages will be put a stop to by such punishment as has been awarded in this case—six months' imprisonment.—Hurkaru.

SMALL CAUSE COURTS.—The year 1860-61 was the most successful in the history of the Calcutta Court of Small Causes. The average number of cases before the three judges was 125 daily, and the clear profit to the State £3,238. Of 31,094 cases set down for hearing 17,247 were actually tried, 13,048 having been decided in favour of plaintiffs, and 4,199 having been either dismissed or non-suited; 10,404 were compromised before being called on for hearing, 3,443 were struck off for non-appearance of the parties, and 179 remained undecided. If only trained judges could be procured, a Court of this kind should be established in every trading district in India.

SIR C. WOOD'S RETIRING SCHEME.—The acceptances of the pension and retirement offers of Sir Charles Wood are now fast dropping in at the military secretary's office. Amongst a considerable number lately received from England is that of Colonel W. B. Thompson, C.B., Commissary General of Bengal, whose acceptance vacates that high and important appointment, and gives a move up in that very slow department. Colonel Champneys, late auditor-general of the army, is also amongst the recipients of the enhanced pension on retirement, whose names have come out from England; and those who are determined to hold on in the service, and see the worst that can come of it, are likely, as far as present appearances go, to find themselves an isolated minority on the 16th of this month. We believe that Major J. C. Scott, deputy-commissary-general, now on sick leave in Europe, succeeds Colonel Thompson as commissary-general in Bengal.

THE 1ST PUNJAB VOLUNTEERS are still keeping up the credit of the movement in India. They had another match on the 14th Nov. The competitors were classed as married and single, 13 on each side. The ranges were, 200, 300, 400, and 500 yards, the last two kneeling. The best of the married men was Capt. Egerton, who scored 20 points out of 20 shots. The best of the single men was Sergeant Mahon, who made 22 points. The aggregate of the married score was 155, and of the single 183. The average of two matches was in the 1st married 9.2, single 9.8, and in the 2nd married 9.8 and single 14.7. The Lahore Chronicle notices that Corporal Bennett, of the 1st Bombay Fusiliers, is characterised as the best shot in the British Army, because he scored 21 points at a match, being 1 in excess of the number of shots, and points to Sergeant Mahon's score as better than the best, being 2 points in excess, but omits to notice that the range in the former case was up to 900 yards and in the latter up to only 500.

AN AWKWARD QUESTION.—The Soma Prakash, as translated by a local contemporary, very cleverly answers several arguments of a correspondent in favour of polygamy, and thus sums up: "The prohibition of polygamy might prevent the pinda from being offered to the manes of ancestors. The objection would have been irresistible, if we believe that the offering of a pinda by a man's son, after his death, in any way promoted his eternal welfare. Suppose a man marries one wife first; she being childless he marries a second, who also becomes childless. In the mean time, the man dies also, while in suspense whether his second wife was likely to give birth to children or not. We ask, what would be the fate in the next world of the man in the case supposed?" A question like that of the Sadducees of old.

UNCOVENANTED SERVICE.—The Phoenix very properly warns the Uncovenanted Service that the Staff Corps will now encroach on the preserves hitherto held sacred to themselves. The appointment of Lieutenant-colonel Bishop to the Superintendency of Stamps and Stationery, preceded not long since by that of Ensign Money to a subordinate office in the Department of Public Works Accounts, is the beginning of encroachments. The reign of merit, not of services and seniority, has begun—of merit with, we fear, a spice of patronage, and the Uncovenanted Service, especially the East Indian community should prove themselves equal to hold what they have got and aspire to higher posts. The success of Messrs. Hollingberry, Kellner and Simpkins is an example to them.

A CHRISTIAN VILLAGE.—A writer in the Oudh Gazette describes the native Christian village at Bareilly. It was established by Mr. Cowie, the chaplain, after the mutiny, as a refuge for Christians who might be in hiding. He was assisted by the Lieutenant-governor and his own congregation. Twenty-three natives came in and formed a nucleus. The village is neat and looks prosperous, being inhabited by one hundred and twenty-five persons in twelve houses, for which they pay rent, with chapel and school-house. "I had often heard before of the great contrast observable by the traveller as he passes from the Protestant to the Roman Catholic cantons of Switzerland, so favourable to the former, and the same remark is true in my observation of the difference between a street or valley in London occupied by Protestants, and one by Roman Catholics, although they may both be equally poor. I had little idea, however, that I should see this essential difference realised in the far-off land of India, and among the much-doubted fact of converted Christians. Another proof, if any were wanted, that the regenerating power of Christianity is the same in whatever soil, and among whatever natures it takes root." Such is the estimation in which the village is held in different parts of India, that embassies are often sent to obtain wives for the Christians of other Settlements.

CHERAT SANITARIUM.—The Lahore Chronicle contains a letter describing the proposed sanitarium of Cherat. The spot in question is about 23 miles E.S.E. of Peshawur and about 4,300 feet above the level of the sea. It is intended as a resort for the European convalescents of Peshawur chiefly. "As a trial a party of about 200 men in all from H.M.'s 98th regiment has been encamped since last Sept. in the Cherat Basin, which is sufficiently large to accommodate with ease a regiment of one thousand strong. The men, who were generally in a very sickly condition, have benefited much by their residence at the sanitarium, though their stay there scarcely exceeds a month and a-half." The men are now under orders to join the head-quarters at Nowshera.

COLONEL LAUGHTON REDIVIVUS.—We (Englishman) are glad to have the power to correct the announcement of the death of Colonel Laughton, of the Bengal Engineers, which we announced in our last Overland on the authority of a letter from the Hills, where the gallant officer still lies ill; but we are happy to say, as stated in a letter received yesterday, with a fair prospect of recovery, which we hope will be realised. We may observe that, in this case, the intelligence of the casualty was apparently as authentic as is the contradiction; but we are glad the merit of truth rests with the latter.

FORGERY.—A young man of the name of Ross, in the employment of the People's Bank, was recently charged with embezzling certain sums of money, the property of the bank. He is now further charged with having forged two cheques, one for 750 and the other for 2,000 rupees. They purported to be signed, one by Dr. Smith, of Smith and Stanistreet, and the other by the firm itself. The cheques had been presented through the medium of a native servant, who has revealed the whole of the circumstances and identified the forger.

VOLUNTEER CAVALRY AT LUCKNOW.—The Governor-general in Council has ordered that the members of the volunteer cavalry, under the command of Colonel Barrow, C.B., shall share in the Lucknow prize.

MISSING JEWELS.—It appears that some of the most valuable of the Tanjore jewels have disappeared from the Palace at Tanjore, where they were sequestered by the British Commissioners and secured under their seal. The value of the missing articles is estimated at nearly six lakhs of rupees.

THE LAST TRANSIT OF MERCURY commenced somewhere about thirty seven minutes past ten, but we have not yet been fortunate enough to ascertain the exact second of time. It lasted about four hours, that is, the centre of the planet passed off from the sun's disc at two hours thirty-nine minutes forty-six seconds P.M.

A GERMAN TRAVELLER IN BURMAH.—The Rangoon Times mentions that Dr. Bastian, a German traveller and scientific explorer, has gone to Mandalay. He intends making a tour all through Burmah, and if practicable, penetrating to Yunnan.

RIOT AT MASULIPATAM.—Another of these caste riots, so common in South India, took place at Masulipatam during the last Dusserah festival, and is remarkable for the audacity of the assailants in telegraphing direct to Government to prevent the magistrate's orders from taking effect. The goldsmiths of the town resolved to white-wash their houses, and tie wreaths to their gates, but the Right Hand caste people objected. Their petition was justly refused by the magistrate, who stationed a strong police force in the goldsmiths' bazaar during the poojah. Notwithstanding, night after night their shops were bespattered with dirt, and on one occasion a riot took place and some ten or fourteen were broken open. The ringleaders were apprehended, and sentenced to only six months' imprisonment. The telegrams are curiosities. "The goldsmiths here endeavour to introduce innovations not allowed to their caste, magistrate upheld them, obtained a party armed with shot. We fear much that this will attend with loss of lives, &c., as done in 1820. Shops closed two days. Magistrate took interference with caste prejudice contrary to usage and to her Majesty's proclamation. Magistrate refused our prayer—vide Government Order, 11th July, 1820. Please relieve us of this calamity by taking immediately notice." "If our telegram of 12th be not attended to, greater ravages might be committed than those done on 13th and 14th; please keep peace. Our objections to goldsmiths white-washing street walls and tying wreaths to their gates are given in detail by to day's post; we pray no orders be passed pending its receipt. Magistrate however removed fennellages from goldsmiths' gates on the 22nd and not chunam." Government fully approved of the magistrate having upheld the undoubted right of the goldsmiths, in common with other members of the community, to whitewash their own houses.

A DAKH ROBBERY has occurred near the village of Uttalee, between Bolarum and Nagpore. The runner carrying the Banghy mail was attacked by five men during the night. One seized him by the arm, another snatched the basket which he was carrying. The runner and Jawan who accompanied him were then taken into a thick jungle about a quarter of a mile off the road, where they were maltreated by the robbers, who then made off with the booty. Some of the mail was recovered and forwarded to its destination but the contents of two parcels were lost.

STREET RAILWAYS.—Messrs. Samuel, Bruce, and Co., of London, have offered to construct street railways in Madras, the gauge to be the same as the Madras railway, five feet six inches; the rails to be flush with the road; the lines to be worked by horses or bullocks; the working of the railway to be protected by police regulations; the concession to be for seven, fourteen, or twenty-one years, at any of which periods the Government may buy out the proprietors, or the proprietors move their materials and plant; and the first section to be laid down and working in twelve months, or the concession to be forfeited.

THE GODAVERY AND KISTNA DELTAS are to be resettled on the principle of an assessment of the land according to its natural capabilities without irrigation, and a separate water assessment levied according to certain rules. We presume Colonel Baird Smith's recommendation will be carried out.

BOMBAY.

THE GOVERNOR OF BOMBAY AND ENGLISH INTERFERENCE.

The Western Presidency is not yet to lose the services of Sir George Clerk. We believe he has finally abandoned his intention of resigning the governorship. For the last six months he has been maintaining a controversy with the home authorities, in which he has been finally successful. He is condemned in London for his "ridiculous sensitiveness," and in other circumstances we should have been disposed to concur in the condemnation. Official subordination is the first necessity of responsible Government. But it is precisely because the Government of India by the Home authorities is not responsible that we are inclined in this case to approve of Sir George Clerk's determined opposition to an interference in details with his administration, which would reduce him, as the Viceroy is fast being reduced, to the position of a mere secretary, with neither will nor policy of his own. By precedent, as well as by the theory of the constitution of British India, the Governors of Madras and Bombay are responsible in all imperial questions to the Governor-general, otherwise the Government of India would be impossible. The tendency since the mutiny has been to lessen that responsibility in such matters as expenditure and public works, by assigning limits to Madras and Bombay, within which their Governors may act as they please. In a few days the proclamations which will be issued, giving to each an open Legislative Council, will still further, in practice, transfer the power from the Imperial Government, not to the Governors but to the public opinion of the Presidencies. There can be no doubt that India is fast tending towards federalism, and we see no reason to regret it. The principle of federalism lies at the bottom of the last financial resolution, which pointed out the proportions each territory should contribute to the imperial expenditure. Thus only will every part of the Empire bear its fair share of the burden of taxation, and thus only will its resources be fully developed, as settlers flock in and make their wishes known through open Councils.

The contest between Sir George Clerk and the home authorities, which has now come to a close, is another reason added to such interference as the contract law and Mysore job, why an effort should be made in the next session of Parliament to define the powers and responsibility of the Governors, the Governor-general, the Secretary of State for India, and the Indian Council respectively. All have more or less come into collision with each other since 1858, and the result has been most detrimental to the good of India. Our Eastern Empire for the past four years has been the mere football of political experiments, which have grievously failed and have been the source of endless heart-burnings. Parliament should distinctly determine who is to govern India, the Viceroy or the Minister; and if the latter, as is now really the case, limits should be set to his power, and means should be taken to make him responsible to the nation. The presence in England of Lord Canning, who has himself suffered so severely from the sarcasms of Lord Ellenborough, and the dictatorial insolence of the very inferior clerk who now acts as Secretary for India, will be favourable to the wise settlement of this question. Mr. Laing, too, will return before the Session is over, and words more emphatically denouncing the evil than his to the men of Manchester have never been spoken. Indian reformers, who have already achieved so much, should now direct all their attention to enlighten Parliament on this evil. The tendency of our policy has been to give the colonies self-government and to reduce the Colonial Office to be a mere depository of records. Are we to pursue an opposite course with India—a course which lost America to Great Britain? The conditions of India and those of the colonies are very different; but what we ask for is not that all power be lodged in the hands of the settlers as in the latter, but in the hands of the Governor-general. India must be governed in India and by an absolute ruler, influenced by, but not legally subject to, the power of public opinion.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE PARSEES IN LONDON have resolved to raise a fund to be called the "Charitable Fund for Zoroastrians in Europe," for the purposes of burying their dead, enabling poor Zoroastrians in Europe to return to India, purchasing works treating of the Parsee religion, and translating them, furnishing means to such Parsees as might wish to study in England their ancient faith in the Zend and Pehlvi languages, and to prosecute researches therein, and to build a house of prayer for Parsees in some convenient locality.

COTTON AND ROADS.—The Deccan Herald says Sir George Clerk has directed the Executive Engineer at Ahmednuggur to adopt immediate measures for metalling at a cost of some forty thousand rupees that portion of the Aurungabad road which is between Ahmednuggur and the foot of the Inampoor Ghat, with a view to facilitate the transfer of cotton from Aurungabad. The Nizam has been requested to modify and remove the existing tolls which are oppressive to the cotton trade, and to promote the extension of the cotton cultivation within his own territories with the establishment of agencies for the purchase of the staple for the Bombay market.

CHINA.

HONG KONG, Nov. 30.—The London mail of October 10th had not arrived up to the time of our going to press. It is now more than six days overdue.

A coup d'état has just been made at Pekin by the party that Prince Kung represents, and it has resulted in the entire overthrow of the Council of Regency nominated by the late Emperor. The exclusion of the Prince of Kung from that Council was the subject of general remark at the time, and the well-known anti foreign tendencies of certain members of the new Council gave rise to considerable anxiety. The Council now dissolved consisted of eight individuals, five of whom have been sentenced to banishment, one has been beheaded, and two have been allowed to commit suicide in prison. The prime movers in this coup d'état appear to have been the young Emperor's mother and the Prince of Kung; but very ample reasons are adduced for the adoption of a measure so bold and decisive. The charges preferred against the members of the late council, and investigated by a special court at Peking, were various and striking; among others we hear of the following:—Tampering with the late Emperor's dying manifestoes—perverting the declarations of the successor to the throne—excessive and unreasonable assumption of power and authority—defiance of the young Emperor and the Empresses of the deceased monarch—maladministration of affairs last year, especially in connection with foreign countries—advising the treachery practised upon the foreigners last year, which led to the sacking of the Summer Palace—withholding from the late Emperor information about the successful treaty ratified at the metropolis—and frightening him with fabulous and alarming stories. The regency is now held by the two Empresses, widows of the late Emperor—one having been his principal wife, and the other the mother of the youthful emperor, Tsai Ch'un. Prince Kung is chief adviser of the Crown, and Kweiliang, Hwanliang, and others of good repute, are members of the Cabinet. It is worthy of notice that the three members of Council who were condemned to death were those most immediately connected with the disastrous act of treachery by which so much suffering was caused to some of our brave countrymen. Altogether, the present aspect of affairs at Peking is a matter of the most sincere gratulation. The governing energy, which it was feared our advance on the capital had entirely prostrated, is still there, and putting forth fresh vigour; the reins of Government are out of the feeble hands that formerly held them, and have passed into those of the statesman who alone has shown himself equal to the age; the Councils of State are no longer distracted by a divided policy, but rendered strong by the overthrow of those who would have used a position of power and authority for their own selfish ends. Under the new Prince-minister, the relations between England and China will, in all likelihood, acquire a solidity they never could boast of before; and if we rightly judge the turn matters have taken, the recent coup is worth to England many battles and much treasure.

The news from Japan is vague and scanty. The opening of Yedo to trade in 1862 is naturally causing some talk among the merchants at the other ports; the late crisis, however, has left the matter in considerable doubt and uncertainty. Mr. Harris, with the strange coolness that characterises him, intends, it is affirmed, to claim the privilege in behalf of his countrymen. The admiral is cruising among the Japanese Islands, according to the last accounts.

From the three Northern Ports (Tien-tsin, Newchwang, and Chefoo) we have no further news of importance. The following extract from a letter addressed to the Shanghai Daily Times will show the indications of danger from the northern rebellion, as it has been called, though the movement is only that of one or two hordes of licentious banditti:—

"Yesterday we heard of a literary graduate of the 2nd degree, native of this place, who recently fell into the hands of the rebels, and had, in virtue of some former acquaintance of an influential man amongst them, been permitted to return. It was reported that he had some information as to their future movements. Nevins and Danforth went to see him. Found that he had not yet returned from the place in which he fell into their hands, having been badly wounded. Saw his son, who gave the following items of intelligence:—That his father was a man over sixty years of age. Was eighty li from Tangchau when the rebels came upon him. Received several severe wounds, and was left for dead. When in this state, one rebel on horseback, recognising him as an old friend, alighted and bound up his wounds. They had been formerly acquainted in some way in Peking. The rebel told the wounded man that he had better return at once to Tangchau, that he had nothing to fear this year, but that by the second month of next year he had better make his escape from this place. On returning from that interview they accidentally came across a man who had just arrived from the rebel camp. Had been carried off a great distance—was seventeen days returning. Had been with them over half a month. The party which carried him off was the 'White and Yellow' flag company. The party that came near here was the 'Black' flag company. Was much larger and more destructive than the other. He described these rebels as without number, having no firearms, and being much afraid of an enemy that has. Can only take a city by sitting down around it and starving it out. Says that they will certainly be back next year, and it may be, that another band will this year. Of course, these are all Chinese reports; there may, however, be some truth in them, and perhaps it is well for us not entirely to disregard them; but still I am of opinion that we need not work ourselves up into any feeling of uneasiness just yet. If the Tangchau people had only the smallest degree of enterprise and courage, they could defend their city against the rebels with the greatest ease. Without boats it would be impossible for them to surround it. The sea and the city communicate. The boats from the sea come right into the city—not the main city, but what is called the 'Water-city'; we have two cities here entirely distinct from each other."

From the Yang-tsze-kiang we learn that the prospects of commerce improve in proportion as the rebels disappear from any given district; affairs at Hankow are more peaceful and flourishing than was reported last fortnight.

At Shanghai preparations are being made with great care against any mishap that may arise from the proximity of the rebels; the probability is, that no attempt will be made to molest the foreign settlement, but even that emergency is being wisely provided for.

At Ningpo, the alarm mentioned in our last summary still continues; it is said to be carefully fomented by those who are interested in keeping up the high rates which were being obtained for the carriage of passengers to Shanghai.

From Amoy and Fuhchau we have no news of interest. At Swatow some men belonging to the gun-boat Firm were attacked while on shore surveying; they retired with a man or two slightly hurt.

The long-deferred Canton claims have at length reached the stage of liquidation, and all whose claims had been allowed are now at liberty to apply for payment, which is being made by a cheque for one-half on the military chest and the other half in scrip payable twelve months hence.

At Whampoa an English sailor, named Joseph Burton, belonging to the ship Haddington, was murdered on the 7th ultimo by a French tavern-keeper, who is now in custody.

There is no local event of much interest to record. The Chief Justice, who is undoubtedly the most over-worked officer in the colonial service, has withdrawn from the Executive Council, his place being supplied by Mr. Smale, the recently appointed attorney-general. The Ville d'Agén coolie kidnapping case was before the Supreme Court last week, and the two prisoners, Helguira and Pastor, were indicted on ten counts, but were found not guilty on every one; the latter was re-arrested, and is to be delivered over to the Chinese authorities at Canton.

The weather is now pleasantly cool, the thermometer averaging about 70 degrees in the shade. To-day, being St. Andrew's day, is duly acknowledged by various assemblages of festive Scotchmen.

Captain Blakiston, R.A., departs by this mail, on special leave of absence for England. He has in his possession the material for a chart of the upper Yang-tsz-kiang, for over 900 miles, as surveyed by him, which he intends to publish as soon as it can be prepared. In it will appear the coal and gold districts of that river, besides much information of the highest value concerning its navigation, the physical and geological nature of the country, its production, trade, and inhabitants, of which hitherto so little has been known. —Overland China Mail.

Similarly non-commissioned officers and men of the royal artillery wishing to remain on staff or civil employ, on the departure of their batteries from India, must procure a transfer to another battery remaining in India.

Questions and Answers.

No. 1,118.—H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council directs the publication of the subjoined question on a subject of general interest, and the answer given by Govt., in continuation of those published in G. O. O. No. 1,047 of Nov. 15 last:—

Question 130. An officer proceeded to England on medical certificate in 1857, and, according to the new furlough regulations, was entitled to retain his appointment for a period of 15 months.

As he did not return on the expiration of that period, and consequently lost his appointment, are the 15 months thus passed to be considered as staff employ, so as to bring that officer under the operation of paragraph 73?—or, as he did not rejoin his appointment at the expiration of his leave, and can hardly be said to have held an appointment within the last three years, is he debarred from entering the staff corps?

Answer 130. This officer is entitled to reckon for staff service the period of 15 months during which he was on leave.

No. 1,120.—In continuation of G.G.O. No. 960, of Oct. 22, 1861, H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to publish, for general information, the foll. observation, by the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, on an answer given by the Govt. of India to a question connected with the late changes in the Indian army, and published in G.G.O. No. 681 of Aug. 22, 1861:—

Question 89. Is an officer entitled to count for service on the staff from the date he was appointed to the staff, notwithstanding that he did not join the appointment immediately in consequence of being required with his regt. on foreign service?

Answer 89. His service on the staff will count from the date of the G.O. appointing him.

Remark 89. No; he must join first.

No. 1,121.—H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to publish, for general information, the following observations by the Rt. Hon. the Sec. of State for India on decisions given by the Govt. of India under date the 15th July, 1861 [see memorandum of decisions not for publication], on questions connected with the late changes in the Indian army, and which questions and decisions it was considered unnecessary to publish in govt. gen. order.

Question 18. [Paras. 72 and 90.] With reference to paragraph 72, which states that officers now holding staff appointments of any description may continue in staff employment, whatever their regimental rank may be, without joining the staff corps; and that in such case they will not, as heretofore, be required to vacate their appointments on the attainment of certain regimental rank, is it to be understood that officers "who do join the staff corps" will have to vacate their appointments on attainment of such advanced rank?

Answer 18. [No. Vide paragraph 90.] "The appointments and promotions in the several departments will rest, as at present, with the Government of India, and will be made irrespectively of the rank which an officer may hold in the staff corps."

Remark 18. Add "with the exception of the appointment to regimental staff, which will be, as heretofore, restricted to subalterns."

Question 27. [Paragraph 74.] Officers of H.M.'s British regiments joining the staff corps, necessarily, while in it, forfeit the power of selling out and of recovering the value of their commissions, in lieu of which they obtain other privileges. Will such officers recover the full power of selling out (the same as if they had never left and been promoted in their regiments) on their again exchanging from the staff corps into a British regiment, though in an advanced grade?

Answer 27. Whether an officer would necessarily forfeit the power of selling out under such circumstances depends upon the rules which may be laid down from time to time by her Majesty's Government. Officers of the British army going into the staff corps vacate their regimental place; on returning to regimental duty they regain the privileges of such position.

Remark 27. Officers of her Majesty's British regiments who have joined the staff corps, and afterwards again exchange into a British regiment, though in an advanced grade, will regain the power of selling their commissions, subject to her Majesty's pleasure, provided the regiments into which they exchange are subject to the system of purchase.

Question 28. [Para. 74.] In the event of a captain (native infantry), a district inspector of musketry, volunteering for general service, and being posted to one of the new line regiments, could he retain his permanent appointment of district inspector?

Answer 28. He can retain his appointment if the C. in C. can spare him for the unexpired portion of a period of five years, unless his regiment should be meanwhile ordered out of India.

Remark 28. A district inspector of musketry volunteering for general service, and being posted to one of the new line regiments, may retain his permanent appointment of district inspector provided his services are not urgently required for duty with any regiment to which he may be posted, and provided that such regiment is serving in India.

R. J. H. BIRCH, Maj. gen.
Sec. to the Govt. of India.

Military Letters.

CLAIMS TO COLONEL'S ALLOWANCE.

No. 1,078 of 1861.—The following paragraphs of a military letter from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 396 of Oct. 16, 1861, are published for general information:—

1. I have received and considered in Council your military letter, No. 161, dated Aug. 8, 1861, stating that doubts have been entertained whether the lieutenant colonels who may be selected to hold the rank of lieutenant colonel in the new line regiments will have to give up all claims to colonel's allowance, unless they may be eventually selected for the appointment of colonel of a regiment, and proposing that officers of the Indian army generally may be allowed to record their readiness to serve her Majesty anywhere without prejudice to their position in the cadres of regiments, or in the staff corps, as the case may be.

2. With reference to lieutenant colonels of new line regiments, I observe that among the questions submitted to, and replied to by your Government, copies of which were forwarded to me with your letter, No. 135 of July 16, 1861, one question (15) refers to this subject, and has been correctly answered by you, viz.:—"that he will forego all claims to colonel's allowance in the Indian line," to which reply I propose to add, "but will become eligible to a regiment under the regulations of the British army."

3. With regard to Sir Hugh Rose's suggestion, in which you concur, that the officers of the Indian army generally might be allowed to volunteer for general service, I would observe that the officers of the Indian army have already had the opportunity afforded them of recording their willingness to serve out of India by paragraph 50 of the G.O. by the Gov. gen., No. 332 of April 10, 1861, and the term within which officers may elect for general or local service has been expressly extended to Oct. 21 in your reply to question 6, published in G.O. of July 9, 1861, No. 598.

It was not intended by this answer to debar officers from volunteering for general service after Oct. 21, but I do not see what further permission to do so is necessary; and, indeed, I am of opinion, that any further invitation by the Government to volunteer for general service may lead to expectations of employment on the part of officers which it may be impossible to meet, and would, therefore, only end in disappointment.

RETIRING CONDITIONS.

No. 1,083 of 1861.—The following paragraphs of a military letter from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 443 of Oct. 17, 1861, are published for general information:—

2. I have decided upon admitting to the benefits of the retiring scheme referred to, all officers of cavalry and infantry on the effective list, who may have accepted the additional £50 pension offered in my despatch, No. 60, dated Feb. 4, and who may have retired before the publication of the last retiring scheme.

3. I request, therefore, that you will cause to be prepared and transmitted to me, as soon as possible, nominal rolls of officers so circumstanced, showing the exact position held by each at the time of his retirement upon the general list of regimental officers in their respective presidencies, and the date of such retirement.

4. These officers will severally receive the annuity now allotted to those holding on Oct. 1 the place which they held at the time of their retirement, and it is to be understood that the officers receiving annuities under these circumstances are not to be reckoned among the 300 mentioned in paragraph 24 of my despatch, No. 320 of Aug. 10, 1861.

FAMILY ALLOWANCE.

No. 1,079 of 1861.—The following paragraph of a military letter from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 398, dated Oct. 16, 1861, is published for general information:—

Letter dated June 15, 1861, No. 102.—48.—The period fixed for the receipt of applications for the special allowance granted to officers of H.M.'s service towards the expense incurred by them for the passage of their families to India, as announced in the London Gazette of Jan. 10, 1860, having long since expired, no further claims can be entertained.

THE RETIRING SCHEME—EXPLANATIONS.

No. 1,080 of 1861.—With reference to G.G.O., No. 807 of Sept. 12, 1861, the following paragraphs of a military letter from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 399, dated Oct. 16, 1861, are published for general information:—

1. It has been brought to notice that paragraph 22 of my despatch, No. 320 of 10th Aug. last, has been misunderstood in some quarters as giving to officers of the new line regiments and of the staff corps the privilege of retiring with annuities, according to the scale forwarded with the despatch, with or in virtue of any rank they may have attained after joining those corps.

2. The passage referred to does not seem to me to be susceptible of such interpretation; but to prevent the possibility of mistake, I desire to point out that it was duly intended to give to officers so circumstanced, the opportunity of reconsidering their position, and of availing themselves of the annuity to which they would have been entitled had they not elected for either the staff corps or the new line regiments.

FURLOUGH ON PRIVATE AFFAIRS.

No. 1,073 of 1861.—The following paragraphs of a military letter from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 388, dated Oct. 8, 1861, are published for general information:—

1. I have received and considered in Council your despatch, No. 158, dated August 8, respecting the amount of leave on furlough or private affairs which officers under the old furlough rules are permitted to count as service for pension, such leave being beyond the limits of their own presidency.

2. I concur in the opinion given by you, that, in the case of regiments serving beyond the limits of their own presidency, officers should not incur a forfeiture of service to the extent of all leave on private affairs in excess of three months, except taken in their own presidency, and I approve of your so far modifying the present rule as to permit all leave taken by officers of any presidency in any other presidency in which they may be serving to count as service towards pension in the same manner as leave taken within the limits of the presidency to which they belong. The modification of the former rule will only affect officers placed under the old furlough rules.

Financial, No. 73.

India-office, London, Oct. 31, 1861.

SIR,—I have to acknowledge the receipt of your letter in this department, No. 11, dated 25th July last, from which it appears that you have understood my despatch, No. 45, dated June 7, 1861, authorising the grant to civil servants who have completed 25 years' service, or 22 years' residence, of the option of retiring immediately on an annuity of £500, as referring only to civilians who have already completed the prescribed period of service and residence, or who will do so by 1st May next. You consider such a restriction inadvisable, and request that the concession made may be extended, so as to allow the benefit conferred to be of general application, available at any time to any civil servant who may have conformed to the condition specified.

2. The despatch in question was not intended to bear so limited an interpretation as that placed on it by your Government, and, without guaranteeing the permanence of the arrangement, I authorise, until further orders, the grant to any civil servant who may complete the prescribed period of service and residence, of the option of taking his annuity in the manner specified in that despatch.—I have, &c.,

TEA CULTIVATION.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Hurkaru gives some useful information respecting the tea-growing capabilities of Cachar. At present it takes on an average ten or eleven days to proceed thither from Calcutta, but there is no reason why in a very brief space of time the journey should not be performed in half that time. Already considerable progress has been made in the cultivation of the tea plant. Whereas in 1856 there were only four Europeans in the district, and these servants of the Government, there are now at least one hundred engaged in agricultural and horticultural pursuits. The revenue, too, has risen from £5,000, with an expenditure exceeding double that amount, to £20,000. Some thousands of coolies, too, have been imported at the charge of the planters, but scarcity of labour is still the chief obstacle to a dazzling success. Better means of communication, too, are wanted, though they have greatly improved during the last five years. Under existing circumstances, however, it is scarcely desirable that young men should begin on their own account. By far their wisest plan is to join some experienced hand as assistant, or junior partner, until he is fully acquainted with the people, their language, and mode of treatment. For such Assam is preferable to Cachar, as labour is there more plentiful, though it is doubtful how long this will continue to be the case under the competition caused by the numerous French and English Agencies for procuring coolies for foreign colonies. There are in all fifty tea plantations in Cachar, varying in size from 500 to 5,000 acres, but not quite 6,000 acres have as yet been brought under cultivation. The produce up to the close of 1860 was 128,112 lbs., but in 1861 it rose to 197,830 lbs., and for the ensuing year is estimated at 382,360 lbs. Only black teas are manufactured, varying in price from eightpence to four and ninepence per pound in Bond in London, but averaging two shillings per pound. Now, as a single acre should yield 320 lbs.,—equal in value to 320 rupees—and as the expenses per acre are a little above half that amount, it follows that the net profit on the acre is about £15. The tea plant has also been cultivated with moderate success in the district of Darjeeling, but in severe seasons the action of the frost is altogether fatal. The best prospects, without doubt, are afforded in Assam, where upwards of 20,000 acres are now under cultivation. The out-turn has gone on rapidly increasing year by year. Instead of the 1,380,999 lbs., which constituted the produce of 1858-59, it is estimated that 1860-61 would yield fully 1,705,130 lbs., showing an increase of 23½ per cent. in two years. The number of coolies employed is very great, the Assam Company alone giving occupation to over 6,000. A rapid fortune is not to be expected, but any sober, industrious young man, with a capital of £2,000 may look forward to an income of £1,200 to £1,500 per annum in five years. Thus far the tea plant appears to possess one material advantage over the coffee plant, in that it is never molested by bugs or other insects. The life of a tea planter is, moreover, one of the most joyous in the world. If a sportsman, he may play the Nimrod from one year's end to the other. If a naturalist, he cannot stir out of his bungalow without meeting with objects to interest him at every turn. The climate is delightful, the occupation clean and healthy, little risk, and a handsome profit. Is not this a better pursuit for a stout, hale, manly young fellow, than to be cooped up in a shop, or condemned to labour for years at a fatiguing and unremunerative profession, in which the expenditure is diurnal, and the incomings rather hoped for than expected?

A NOBLE MEMORIAL.

ANXIOUS to perpetuate the memory of the amiable and accomplished lady who has so suddenly been cut off in the bloom of womanhood, our fair countrywomen residing in India have come to the resolution of establishing in Calcutta an institution of Nursing Sisters, with which the name of the late Countess Canning shall be indissolubly associated. There can be no doubt that properly trained sick nurses are nowhere more wanted than in India, and nowhere are they more difficult to be obtained. There are some, indeed, after the fashion of Mrs. Gamp, but even these charge so exorbitantly for their miserable services that it is only the rich who can afford to engage them. Ten rupees a day, besides their keep and numerous extras, is the ordinary cost of these Harpies, whose attention is usually much more directed to their own comfort than to that of their unfortunate patients. It is evident that such terms as these are quite beyond the means of the majority of English residents, nor have those who can allow themselves this luxury much reason to congratulate themselves on their superior advantages. The native servants, it is true, are excellent nurses to a certain extent. They move about without noise, and are gentle and sympathetic, but they are utterly useless if left to themselves. They will carry out the instructions they receive with commendable precision, but they can do nothing off-hand for the temporary relief of the sufferer. Besides, the sick man in a foreign land yearns for his own people. No alien can fully enter into his sorrows, or feel for his pain. Friends may be kind and attentive, but it is the soft touch and the softer voice of woman that are wanted, and the thousand little loving offices that few men are capable of rendering. Of late years attendance on the sick has become almost an art. A systematic training is found to be necessary to regulate impulses and emotions, and to make the intelligence co-operate with the feelings. Something more is required than mere compassion, and the most assiduous tenderness may be of less avail than the calm, orderly services of the practised nurse. But it is altogether superfluous to dilate either upon the gentleness of woman, or the devoted beneficence of Sisters of Mercy. It must be obvious to all that nowhere is their presence more longed for than in that distant land, the graveyard of so many of our kindred. At last measures are about to be taken to supply this great want, and, in the first instance, the ladies of Calcutta appeal to their fellow-countrywomen in India to aid them in raising the most appropriate memorial to the virtues of the late Countess. We cannot doubt as to the eager readiness with which subscriptions will respond to this admirable suggestion, but the English ladies resident in India are neither numerous nor wealthy, and their utmost exertions will fall short of the end they have in view. Nor is it unreasonable on their part that they should look for aid from their more fortunate sisters who "sit at home at ease." The Countess Canning was for many years one of the brightest ornaments of London society, and will long be mourned by all who enjoyed the privilege of being acquainted with her. And what family is there that has not a relative or friend in that clime so fatal to Europeans? Who knows how soon it may be the lot of the nearest and dearest to be stricken down by sickness in the midst of comparative strangers, far away from those who would make any sacrifice to promote his recovery? Let the ladies of England, then, lend their aid to this good work. Let the rich give of their abundance, and the poor deny themselves some passing pleasure for the sake of their absent kinsfolk. Englishmen are not often deaf to the voice of charity, and surely Englishwomen will not permit the national character to suffer in their hands. The first thing to be done is to appoint a committee, and funds will soon be forthcoming for Lady Canning's monumental institution of Nursing Sisters.

THE INDIAN BYZANTINIUM.

THERE is only too much truth, we fear, in the ill-omened rumour that it has been determined to transfer the seat of Government from Calcutta to the Hills. So many men of mark have of late been cut off while in the full enjoyment of their faculties that India has come to be regarded as a second Sierra Leone. As Calcutta naturally furnish the largest quota to the bills of mortality, a bad pre-eminence has been assigned to that city. And yet it was not there that Lord Frederick Fitzclarence died, nor there that Sir Henry Ward fell a victim to cholera. But let it be conceded that Calcutta is an unhealthy town by reason of its low situation, and of the filthy and crowded state of the native quarter: the question, however, presents itself, whether that unhealthiness is altogether irremediable. Within a very few years an excellent system of drainage will be completed, by means of which one fruitful source of miasma will be almost entirely removed. Then, police regulations might be introduced to secure a sufficient ventilation in the native town by prescribing a minimum breadth for new streets, and by cutting through the densest maze of existing hovels. Something, too, might be done by Europeans themselves, in their individual capacity, by conforming more exactly to the elementary principles of the art of health. Obedience to sanitary rules would have saved many of the valuable lives that have been unnecessarily sacrificed. So long as men wilfully ignore the common requirements of a tropical climate, they have only themselves to thank for the advent of illness, and the prostration of both mental and physical powers. The old adage about doing at Rome as the Romans do is founded, as usual, upon a long experience, and even the conquerors of India may learn "something to their advantage" from the conquered population. Early hours, a comparatively light diet, and abstinence from excessive exercise of mind or body, will be found to conduce to the preservation of health and to the mitigation of disease. There are other considerations also to be taken into account. The safety of the empire is at least as important as the comfort of individuals. Surely it is not now for the first time that the inconveniences attendant on the experiment of governing India from the Hills have come under notice. What would have been the consequences had Lord Canning, as well as the Commander-in-Chief, been disporting himself in the bracing climate of Simla when the Sepoy mutiny broke out? Was not his presence in Calcutta at that critical moment beyond all price? It may be objected, indeed, that there is little chance of a second mutiny; but who will answer for the fidelity of the Sikhs, of Jung Bahadoor, of the Hill chieftains generally? There is nothing more certain than that the Sikhs confidently look forward to the year 1863 as the era of their restoration to power, and of our expulsion from India. That they will succeed we do not for a moment anticipate, but a sudden rising of that warlike population is not the less within the bounds of credibility. In a single night the wires might be cut, the rails broken up, the roads rendered impassable, and the Governor-general with his Council isolated in the Hills, or captives in the hands of the insurgents and their allies. And even in time of peace the task of governing such a vast empire from one remote extremity will be attended by immense loss of time and an enormous accumulation of correspondence. Were all India wrested from us by native force, or wile, it could be recovered from the basis of Bengal, whereas its loss would be accelerated by the impotence of a Government dependent on the electric wire, the most uncertain and the most easily destroyed of all known means of communication. Calcutta is virtually inaccessible either from the sea or from the interior, and is situated in the midst of a population inseparably bound to us by their own interests. With the command of the Hooghly reinforcements may be poured into the country without let or hindrance, which would not be the case with Bombay, for instance, whither some would remove the seat of Government. The two great rivers, the Ganges and the Jumna, must always continue to be the foundation of our commerce, and where the commercial community is placed, there must be the Treasury and the Bank. The Bench and the Bar, too, must remain where their business calls them; and where unless in the heart of the European population should we look for the Bishop and the leading Clergy? And what becomes of the liberal reforms introduced into the constitution of the Council if it be located at Simla? Whence are the European and Native members to be obtained? The more the question is considered the more hopelessly insane does the project appear. If it be really the case that any difficulty is experienced in inducing the best men to proceed to India in the exalted position of Viceroy, we can only mourn for the degeneracy of modern Statesmen. Englishmen are not usually chary of their persons when duty and honour call upon them to incur some little risk. There is no difficulty in obtaining able men to accept the government of Jamaica or even of worse colonies, though they may not be Dukes or Courtiers at an advanced period of life. But if it be absolutely decreed that Calcutta shall cease to be the head-quarters of the Government, there is Allahabad in a most central position, at the junction of the two great rivers, and freely communicating with all points of the empire. The climate may not be so salubrious as that of the Hills, but it is at least superior to that of Calcutta, and the strictest sanitary rules may be rigidly adhered to in the construction of the new town. With the Governor-general at Simla—so long as the weather will permit him to be, for in the winter he must again descend into the plains, if he would not be entirely cut off from his subjects—India would be divided into so many pashaliks, virtually independent of all control, and regarding each other with a certain degree of jealousy. How long such a complicated piece of machinery would keep in good working order it is needless to speculate, for we have the experience of other oriental empires to guide us. As the Roman Empire greatly fell through the transfer of the Government to Byzantium, so will our Indian Empire totter to its downfall when its viceroy issues his edicts from the heights of the lower Himalayas. We trust, however, that Parliament will yet interpose and prevent a measure fraught with present inconvenience and future peril.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NEW COMPANIES.—A prospectus has been published of the India Freehold Land, Colonization, and Trust Association, to be formed with the view to acquire portions of the freehold lands now offered by the Indian Government, under the new law, at 5s. and 10s. per acre respectively for waste and cleared. Properly managed there is no reason why an undertaking of this kind with regard to India should not yield results equal or superior to those obtained by the Australian and Canadian Land Companies. The proposed capital is £100,000 in shares of £1 each. A prospectus has also been issued of the East India Cotton Agency, with a capital of £500,000, in shares of £10 each. The object is to promote the exportation of cotton from India by providing the best appliances for storing, cleaning, and packing, and also by establishing inland agencies for its purchase at prices in conformity with those that can be realized at the ports of shipment. The provisional committee contains some good Manchester names, in addition to others in India and London.

PERSECUTION OF CHRISTIANS IN CHINA.—The first martyr to the cause of Protestant Christianity in China has fallen, and the circumstances attending his death remarkably illustrate the utter disorganisation of this overgrown and effete empire. Six years ago a native named Ch'ea, living in the city of Poklo, which is about one hundred miles from Hong Kong, visited the missionaries at the latter place, and asked for instruction in the truths of Christianity, of which he had heard something from a colporteur. In each succeeding year he came again to Hong Kong, bringing other converts with him, and Dr. Legge and the Rev. John Chalmers have in their turn visited him at Poklo, and been greatly gratified by the intelligence and good conduct of the Christian community which he had gathered round him. Up to the middle of last year they had been unmolested by their heathen neighbours, but then a spirit of persecution arose, and, as the interference of the Governor at Canton seemed to have no effect, Dr. Legge started for Poklo on the 14th of October with a special officer deputed by the Governor. As soon as the local magistrates heard that he was on his way, they set themselves to do that which the Governor's despatches had been quite ineffectual in bringing about. Their behaviour to Dr. Legge was most obsequious, and they agreed to all that he said to them with only too great facility. The gentry, too, were all smiles; and the doctor left Poklo with the belief that the peace and safety of the Christians were secured. Scarcely, however, was his back turned when a horde of countrymen, constituting a new army of rebels, were gathered at a neighbouring village, and, vowing vengeance on foreigners and Christians, they seized some of the magistrates, captured Ch'ea, and, after two days of torture and insult, threw him into the river. The Christian converts have all been obliged to fly, and some have made their way to Canton. The rioters were led by Soo-Hoyu, who had all along been the opponent of the Christians; and their flag bore the inscription of "Security to the Government and extermination to the barbarians." The movement seems to be extending, and the authorities at Canton are in no little alarm about it.

SPECIE FOR INDIA.—The outgoing steamer with the Bombay mail on the 12th took the large amount of specie of £306,850, of which £3,900 in gold is for Alexandria, and £20,500 in gold and £282,450 in silver for Bombay.

PERSIA.—Some trade reports from British Consuls have recently been issued by the Board of Trade, and among them a report from the Acting Consul-General at Tabreez giving an account of Azerbaijan, the most important province of Persia. Its capital, Tabreez, of which the population is estimated at 200,000, is the principal emporium of Persian trade. The imports through and from Turkey into Azerbaijan amounted, in 1859, to nearly £2,000,000, dyed and printed cotton goods being the largest item (comprising several descriptions of British coloured cotton manufactures), and British gray calicoes the next; large quantities of the latter are cut up at Tabreez into small pieces, dyed blue, and then sent to Russia as Persian manufactures. Broadcloths and most of the miscellaneous goods are from Germany. Indigo is an article of great consumption in Tabreez, and is imported direct from India. The exports to Russia amounted in 1859 to nearly £800,000, half of them smuggled: they include the higher qualities of British prints, Swiss manufactures, European and Persian silks, tea, and rum. A small quantity of silk pieces is manufactured in Tabreez, coarser, but more durable than European silks; felt carpets also and other coarse carpets. The growth of wheat and barley is large. The cotton is of inferior quality. There is coal, but it is not used; and copper and iron veins, but they are almost entirely neglected, and a supply obtained from Russia. The climate of the province generally is healthy and bracing, the soil fertile, and the inhabitants hardy, active, and industrious. The revenue is nearly £500,000, but this sum is said to be far from representing the amount really collected from the tax-payers. The revenue of each village is farmed or assigned to a Government officer in "teeool" (a kind of fief), but the taxes are underrated to him; two-thirds are taken by him and one-third by the proprietor of the village. The taxes include one-third of the grain produce, a tax on gardens, and on fields used for the cultivation of tobacco, cotton, or madder roots, a house-tax of 10s. 2d. on every family, a tax of 2s. 3d. on mares and mules, and of 4d. on sheep and goats; besides which the villagers have to furnish gratis to the teeool-holder a certain quantity of lambs, fowls, eggs, milk, wood, &c., and a certain number of labourers if required. But the peasantry are patient so long as they are not reduced to absolute starvation. The internal transit duties are a serious obstacle to the extension of commerce; every small town levies its duties on the goods that pass through it. The want of cart roads is also a great hindrance; everything is transported on mules, horses, camels, or asses. If these things were remedied, cart roads constructed, and a moderate duty made payable once for all on importation or exportation, the trade of Persia would rapidly develop itself to a very considerable extent; and next to Persia Great Britain would derive most benefit from these reforms. As it is, the consumption of British manufactures in Persia has increased nearly fourfold within the last twenty years.

ATTEMPTED ASCENT OF KINCHINGUNGA.—The Englishman hears from Darjeeling that the party of gentlemen who attempted the ascent of Kinchingunga have returned from Sikkim, having been unable to attain their object. "After ascending some nineteen thousand feet of what they supposed to be the mountain itself, they suddenly found themselves on the brink of a ravine which defied all their efforts to cross, and effectually cut them off from their main aim. The results of the expedition, however, are not entirely blank, as it has been ascertained beyond dispute that the river Rummam does not take its rise where it has hitherto been supposed to do, although its actual source has not been determined."

ADVERTISEMENTS.

URGENT APPEAL.

THE DIRECTORS of the STRANGERS' HOME FOR ASIATICS having been permitted to attain, under most pressing pecuniary difficulties, the principal moral and social objects for which the Institution was established, in ameliorating the condition and alleviating the temporal and spiritual destitution of hundreds of helpless Asiatic and African Strangers, find themselves at the close of another year without sufficient Funds to meet the current expenses of the Institution.

The work has invariably been carried on with the strictest economy, and the Directors are thankful for the support they have hitherto received, but they do not consider themselves justified to borrow money to meet the current expenses of the Home, which amounts (including £250 interest on debt) to about £1,100 annually.

They therefore once more appeal to their friends, supporters, and the Public for Subscriptions or Donations, and would ask them, SHALL THE DOORS OF THE HOME BE CLOSED through the insufficiency of pecuniary aid, or because, under temporary circumstances, the number of inmates in the Home are insufficient to render the Institution self-supporting?—Shall the metropolis of Christian England again subject itself to the reproach, that Oriental strangers visiting her shores, find a reception worse than that in a heathen land—no friend, no Christian sympathy—nothing to prove we value the immense blessing the Gospel of the Lord Christ has given to us?—Shall the streets of the metropolis once more be inundated with Eastern mendicants?—Shall the jails, workhouses, and hospitals be again unnecessarily occupied by Asiatics?—Shall the labours of the last four years be thrown away, and the work suspended?—Shall Christian sympathy, assistance, and advice no longer be shown or given to helpless strangers?—Rather is it not imperative on the Directors to continue their appeal to the public for funds to carry on a work which has been such a blessing to hundreds, and acknowledged by the philanthropist and Christian to be both needful, useful, and advantageous in all its objects?

The Directors cannot believe that the public will permit their labours to be suspended, or the Home closed, and casting all their difficulties on Him from whom they have received such tokens of favour, would go on in faith, earnestly pleading with all into whose hands this paper may fall that each one will provide his share of the means wanting for carrying on the work.

R. M. HUGHES, Lieut.-Col.
Honorary Secretary.

Donations and Subscriptions will be thankfully received by Messrs. Barclay, Bevan, Tritton, & Co., 54, Lombard-street; Messrs. Coutts and Co., 69, Strand; Messrs. ## ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

The objects of this Association are:—

1. To purchase Freehold Lands in India, as now offered by Government for the first time, at an upset price of five shillings per acre for waste land, and ten shillings for cleared land.

2. To advance money on mortgage, or otherwise, to assist parties in purchasing or in promoting the cultivation of estates.

3. To act as agents in India for capitalists and non-resident proprietors in the investment of moneys, collection of rents, or other trust and agency business.

The advantages which the Association presents are:—

1. The large profits accruing from the transactions in land, with a high rate of interest upon mortgages, and commissions on agency operations.

2. The additional interest derived on capital borrowed in this country on guaranteed debentures and lent out by the Association in India.

3. The limitation of the liability of Shareholders to the amount of the shares held.

Hitherto the opportunities for developing the rich resources of India have been hampered by the unwillingness of the Government to grant the security of a Freehold tenure, and by want of proper means of communication; the former has now been conceded, and the latter are being opened most rapidly.

The cultivation of Tea has already been most successfully carried on, and is capable of almost indefinite extension in Kangra, Kumaon, Gurhwal, Cachar, Assam, and the Neilgherry Hills; while in the Neilgherry, the Wynand, the Shevaroy's, Mysore, Coorg, and on the whole of the Western Coast of India, Coffee planting has long been known to be one of the most profitable occupations that can be undertaken in India.

In many parts of India there are large tracts of land suitable for producing the finest possible description of Cotton, the profitable culture of which may be carried on to any extent, if capital is forthcoming to encourage such enterprises; and since the disruption of the United States of America, India is likely to become one of the largest Cotton exporting countries in the world.

In India there are also lands admirably adapted for the cultivation and growth of Sugar, Olives, Cinchona (Quinine), Spices, Indigo, and Silk; also Flax, Jute, Rice, as well as all other kinds of fibre; together with every known variety of grain, seed, and vegetable, as well as fruit.

In addition to the agricultural resources of the country, India possesses valuable mineral fields, such as Coal, Iron, Copper, Lead, Silver, and Gold, with Precious Stones of great value.

Such an agency as this Association presents, will give increased confidence to all settlers, providing them in case of need with responsible representatives; whilst to trustees and executors it will afford equal advantages, in enabling them to dispose of estates, or to hold them for the benefit of families under a secure agency.

The Directors have already met with great encouragement from a numerous class of retired Anglo-Indians, who are well acquainted with the real resources of the country, and are desirous of setting the younger branches of their families on estates in India; to such, indeed, it will afford immense facilities, as they can always learn by reference to the register to be kept, what estates are on sale, with full particulars as to nature of soil, &c.; and they may, if not prepared with ample funds, enter into arrangements with the Association for the purchase of property, allowing a portion of the money to remain on mortgage; thus gentle men of skill and energy, but with small capital, will be able to settle in the country, and it is this description of emigrant that is above all suitable for India, where labour is cheap and abundant.

The Scottish, Australian, Land Company, whose shares stand in the market at 40 per cent. premium, and have for many years divided 10 per cent. to the shareholders, is a prosperous example of a company formed on a similar basis, as is also the Canada Agency Association, whose dividends are upwards of 117 per cent. per annum, and whose shares stand at 400 per cent. premium in the market; likewise the Canada Land Company, whose shares, with £32. 10s. paid, are quoted at £105.

The Association may also extend its operations to Ceylon. Arrangements will be made for the transfer of shares and the payment of dividends in India as well as in England. Prospectuses and Forms of Application for Shares may be had of the Brokers, and at the offices of the Association, 2, New Broad-street, E.C.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF MISS CORNELIA KNIGHT,

LADY COMPANION TO THE PRINCESS CHARLOTTE OF WALES.

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"We can heartily recommend the entire work to our readers as one of the most curious and authentic disclosures of State affairs in this country, and one of the most interesting and graphic journals of travel which the literary world has for a long time been called upon to notice."—Press, June 22, 1861.

"Before concluding a notice of a very pleasant book which, while it is full of what may be called private history, contains no prurient, scandalous, or positively frivolous gossip, it should be stated that the materials from which it has been compiled were placed by the family into whose possession they passed on Miss Knight's death into the hands of Mr. J. W. Kaye, who undertook the office of editing the work. Mr. Kaye, however, states that his time was so much engrossed by other occupations, that he knows not when these volumes might have been prepared for the press if it had not been for the assistance very cordially rendered by his friend Mr. James Hutton, of whose intimate acquaintance with the social history of the Georgian Era no better proof could be afforded than that which speaks out from his interesting volume on English Life, 'A Hundred Years Ago.' To that gentleman is to be assigned the main part of the credit of editing the work, and there are evident marks of a successful struggle with that most trying of all editorial difficulties—a superabundance of materials. Much intelligence, industry, and care have been bestowed upon the production of the book, and such literary conscientiousness will, no doubt, meet with its reward in the public favour."—Illustrated London News, June 22, 1861.

"The matters which will secure popularity for the Autobiography are those which resuscitate the stories that excited the curiosity of our forefathers, and made them invent other scandals, scarcely any one of which, fiction as they were, exhibited half the strangeness of the facts themselves, as they are now recorded."—Bell's Messenger, June 15, 1861.

"Our authoress writes clearly and sensibly, and will, we think, be found, on the whole, a much more amusing and agreeable companion than Madame d'Arolay."—Daily Review, July 1, 1861.

"The work of an acute and sensible woman of the world, a woman with a good head and a good heart. It does not, like the late Lady Charlotte Bury's 'memoirs,' deal with matters of scandal and of passing notoriety, nor does it bring forward into ill-natured prominence the weak points of dukes and duchesses of fifty years ago. We perceive in the entire two volumes not a single prurient or indelicate passage (a great thing to say of a work which treats of the court of the Regency), but attempts, like equity itself, to put the best possible construction upon events as they arise."—Universal News, July 6.

"Emphatically a readable book is this autobiography. Indeed, having once opened it, the reader cannot easily lay it aside until he has got through the whole. Not the least interesting part is the collection of miscellaneous anecdotes of persons and events which are clustered together as a sort of appendix at the close. It is a book fit to be read, but fit also for something better than a casual reading; worthy of a higher repute than an evanescent popularity, merely founded upon the great names it introduces, and the amusing scraps of gossip it contains."—Morning Star, July 22, 1861.

"Of the popularity of these volumes, on account of their historical as well as gossiping merits, there can be no doubt whatever."—Athenæum, June 8, 1861.

"The journal of a clever and lady-like woman, who saw many men and many cities, and whose testimony is not heightened by the warmth of too lively an imagination, nor blackened by the tints of malice, must be—what we have found it to be—unusually interesting reading. It is, moreover, put before us in a form which must be considered exceedingly creditable to its publishers, and to those to whom they have entrusted it. Due editorial care, and a proper judgment in selection and annotation, are so extremely uncommon among those who generally prepare books of this class for the public, that we feel bound to express our cordial thanks to Mr. Kaye and his coadjutor, Mr. James Hutton, for the complete, and, at the same time, unobtrusive fashion in which they have performed their task. A short foot-note is applied to all names, with regard to which a reader of the present day is likely to feel curiosity; and where the Autobiographer refers to published books, their full title is given. In these and all similar points nothing is left to be desired by the most lazy or ignorant of readers."—Spectator, June 22, 1861.

"These volumes will be read in every country seat, at every watering place, this autumn. They are fresh; full of most attractive anecdotes and interesting revelations. Miss Knight, whose anecdote books and journals have supplied these two handsome volumes, was Lady Companion to poor Princess Charlotte: she was an observant and shrewd woman of the world, also. Among the great people who were her constant companions, she appears to have been an inveterate collector of lively anecdotes. Her learning and womanly accomplishments secured her the brilliant position she held. In Mr. James Hutton the 'far-famed Cornelia Knight' has found a most discreet and accomplished editor."—Weekly Newspaper, June 16, 1861.

"These are highly interesting volumes. . . . There is hardly a page of the pleasant memoirs now published of this remarkable woman that will not be read with interest, but the attention of every reader will of course be most strongly directed to those passages of the work which serve to throw an additional light upon the relationship that existed between the Princess Charlotte and her unfeeling father and unhappy mother during the brief but eventful period of eighteen months—from January, 1813, to July, 1814—that Miss Knight retained her office of lady companion. No one will rise from the perusal of that part of the work without a feeling of the deepest sympathy for the persecuted—and, as it would seem, systematically tortured—Princess; and of the warmest indignation at the unmanly spitefulness, not to say absolute malignity of the father's treatment of the generous, noble-hearted child. Miss Knight, speaking in the fulness of the knowledge derived from her confidential position in the princess's household, more than confirms what has been previously asserted of the prince's cruelty; and presents us with a picture of royal littleness in the father and of royal wretchedness in the daughter, such as we hope may never again be exhibited within the walls of an English palace."—Observer, June 30, 1861.

"The volumes are, indeed, a mine of anecdote."—Critic, June 22, 1861.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via Southampton, on the 13th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Bombay Mail of the 27th December announces the existence of perfect tranquillity throughout British India, illustrated rather than broken by a slight commotion among the Bheels of Candeish. The despot's formula, "order reigns," may be applied to that vast empire, with this important difference, that this happy state of things arises from the enjoyment of a just and paternal Government, and not merely from the fear of military coercion. Lord Canning, we rejoice to learn, has decided upon remaining at his post until the arrival of his successor, to whom he will be able to explain in person the essential points of the sound and sagacious policy inaugurated by himself. There may be yet time, therefore, for the permanent settlement of the land assessment in the North-West Provinces—a measure which will constitute an appropriate termination to his wise and beneficent sway.

Although the new Legislative Councils have not yet been proclaimed, it is supposed that the Governor-General's Council will consist of the Viceroy himself, Sir B. Frere, Sir R. Napier, Mr. S. Laing, Mr. Cecil Beadon, Mr. W. Ritchie, and Sir Hugh Rose, as the Executive Department. In the Executive Department will be found the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal—when the Council sits in Bengal—Mr. Harington for the N. W. P., Mr. Forbes for Madras, Mr. Erskine for Bombay, Mr. Seton-Karr for Bengal, and Mr. Brandreth for the Punjab; while the non-official members will be the Maharaja of Puttiala for the Punjab, the Maharaja of Gwalior for Hindustan, the Maharajah of Burdwan for Bengal, a Calcutta barrister, and Messrs. Mackinlay and Bullen.

Sir Charles Wood's retiring scheme appears to be rising in favour, the following ninety-six field-officers in the Bengal Army having accepted the annuity and pension:—

BENGAL CAVALRY.—Lieut.-Colonels: Wheatley, Clayton, Master, Campbell, Carmichael Smyth, Moore, Hall, Macdonell, Apperley. In all 9.

INFANTRY.—Lieut.-Colonels: Sewell, Jenkins, Wintle, Kennedy, Sandeman, McCausland, Sherer, Lennox, Bygrave, Houghton, Dickey, Graham, Mitchell, Halkett, Boyd, Birch, Riddell, Hicks, Taylor, Hannyngton, Spottiswoode, Jamieson, Campbell, Knyvett, Sanders, Champneys, Bush, Rice, Wilkie, J. H. Hampton, Vetch, Thomson, Robbins, Burn, Drought, Mayhew, Smith, Wollen, Gordon, Simpson, Morrison, Cooper, Williams, Moir. In all 44.

CAVALRY.—Majors: Drummond, Beatson, Cantley, Tucker. In all 4.

INFANTRY.—Majors: Sisamore, Baker, Martin, Stokes, McCulloch, Oakes, Marriott, Cope, Johnston, Metcalf, Ferris, M. E. Sherwill, Daniell, Timins, Ewart, Nation, Ryley, Lamb, Birch, Browne, Walsh, Robertson, Pownall, Chambers, W. W. Davidson, Ramsay, Pieroy, Lydiard, Gausse, Legard, Thatcher, Waddilove, Hall, Phillips, Bird, Tombs, Richards. In all 89.

In the Madras army about eighty field officers, and in the Bombay about thirty, have also decided upon availing themselves of this tempting opportunity of retiring from a service no longer agreeable to their feelings. A considerable sprinkling of senior captains, however, will be required to complete the number of retirements contemplated by her Majesty's Secretary of State. The selection of Sir Robert Napier as the future War Minister of India will give general satisfaction; nor is there any fault to be found with the appointment of Lieut.-colonel E. K. Elliot as Chief Commissioner of the newly-organised Central Provinces, though we might have preferred to see that important post entrusted to the ripe experience of Mr. Temple. Probably that able officer has been reserved for the Chief Commissionership of Mysore.

Two French ships of war, the Hermione, 51, and a gunboat, were lying in the Bombay roads, but not a single vessel belonging to the Royal Navy: the Sybil, however, was shortly expected.

"The Indian Army and Civil Service List" for January, 1862, is now procurable at every respectable bookseller's.

THE AMALGAMATION OF THE MEDICAL SERVICES.

For the last six months it is difficult to say whether Indian surgeons have been more harassed or amused by the confident announcements as to the nature and the date of the impending amalgamation with their brethren in the Royal army. When last we wrote on this subject, protesting against the delay, an official struggle was still going on between the War Office and the Secretary of State for India, which ended in the decision that the amalgamation should be thorough, that India should have no local medical service. Scarcely had this been settled, when the question was reopened by the claims of natives of India, who had studied in England, to enter the medical service by competition. These claims were disallowed by an application of the hitherto abstract theory of equality somewhat different from the dreams in which the orators of the Legislative Council have been in the habit of indulging. And now, the principle of thorough amalgamation having been decided on, the whole details of the measure have been referred to the Calcutta authorities, as being at once too intricate and delicate for settlement in England. Colonel Balfour is engaged in drawing up a scheme. Once approved of by Lord Canning, in whose hands we need not say the rights of Indian medical officers will not suffer, the plan will be submitted to Sir Charles Wood for his august approval. Part of it may be published by anticipation in India, but the most important details of the measure must first receive the sanction of the Home authorities. Probably by the beginning of next cold weather Indian surgeons may be asked to retire. It is not for us to anticipate arrangements which are still in embryo, but an expression of the wishes of the officers concerned and a discussion of their claims at the present time, might be beneficial to themselves and useful to the authorities. The fact that the Royal service, without great prejudice to their interests, is utterly unable to receive into their midst so large a body as the Indian surgeons, necessitates the offer of a liberal bonus to those who have approached their period of retirement. But Government should distinctly understand that what Indian surgeons cling to is their Fund. For the long delayed three hundred pounds pension which it offers, they wait on from year to year and make all their arrangements. The most satisfactory temptation to induce surgeons to retire would be to quadruple the number of annuities for the next three years. So far as the good of India is concerned, it is for the interest of the State to keep every medical officer now in their employment. It is sad that so much experience should be lost when those who possess it are in the full vigour of their physical powers and professional career. But the Royal service must not suffer, and so a liberal bonus will be offered to a certain number, not yet fixed, to retire. In order to get rid of the mismanaged annuity fund some arrangement will probably be made by which all officers who remain will be induced to surrender the subscriptions they have already paid for the advantages of the Indian and Royal services combined as to retiring and superannuation pensions. The tendency is to treat the medical officers liberally, but it remains to be seen if Sir Charles Wood will show the same generosity or justice.

There is a difficulty as to how civil stations, native regiments, and staff appointments generally are to be filled, as the present race of surgeons passes away. There are whispers of what we may call "free trade in medicine" in the case of the first. The question arises—why should Government maintain so many first class surgeons in the Presidency towns for instance? A more intelligent, skilful, and laborious body of physicians does not exist, and they deserve the prizes they gain at such cost of brain and body. But under the new system the prizes of the service must be military only.

It is just possible that civil stations may henceforth be supplied either by the local authority indenting on the army, or by its appointing uncovenanted medical officers, as may be cheapest. If fifty or a hundred of the senior medical officers are to be asked to retire, why should they not be offered, as an additional inducement, such civil appointments, when they are no longer in the service? But the whole scheme is as yet a rudis indigestaque moles, hardly removed from the region of discussion. We trust the delay that may yet be absolutely necessary in coming to a decision will be reduced to a minimum. There has been too much suspense already.—Friend of India.

ENGLISH EDUCATION IN BENGAL.

The continued indifference of the Government of India to the education of the peasantry in their own vernacular is a blot on that otherwise satisfactory policy which is now being carried out. The Educational Budget will be sent in to the local Government in a few weeks, and we trust it will take advantage to the full of the pledge given in the last financial resolution, largely to increase expenditure on schools. The sum allowed as grants-in-aid alone should be tenfold the pittance with which independent schools are now mocked, and private effort throughout the Empire discouraged.

Meanwhile we turn to the state of English education in the Presidency, as shown by the University examinations and the results of 1860-61, with some degree of satisfaction. It is true that the Government of India resembles that of Russia and the other despotic Powers of the continent of Europe, in positively discouraging all intellectual effort among the masses, and educating only the upper crust of native society. But for even this little we are thankful, and we see the dawning of a brighter day, when English education will be left to encourage itself, and the State will direct all its efforts to teach the poor. Turning to the University examinations this year, we find that 1,057 candidates, of the average age of 17.85 have applied for entrance, or more than four times the number in 1857. The age seems high in the case of lads who have come from schools somewhat similar to the High Schools and Gymnasias of the West. But we must remember that the youths are educated in a foreign tongue, and enter on their English studies at a comparatively late period in their boyhood. The English boy can read well at six, the Bengali boy does not attempt to learn English till ten, when his white brother begins Latin. The progress made by non-Government schools goes on annually increasing. Of the 1,057 candidates only 595, or little more than a half, are from Government schools. The rest are thus divided—aided schools, 77, non-aided private schools, 287, private students, 57, schoolmasters, 41. The day is not so far distant as is supposed when our reform will be achieved, in severing the connection between the State and English schools and establishing a purely grant-in-aid system. This year the First Examination in Arts, preliminary to that for the Bachelor's degree, will be held for the first time. There are 161 candidates of the average age of 19.63. Of these 141 are from Government schools and 15 from private schools, a proof of the injury done by the monopoly which the former enjoy. When we look at the faith and the languages of the Entrance and First Examination candidates, we find the following:—

| Faith.    | Entrance. | First Examination. |
|-----------|-----------|--------------------|
| Christian | 49        | 7                  |
| Mahomedan | 38        | 0                  |
| Hindoo    | 970       | 154                |
| Language. |           |                    |
| Greek     | —         | 1                  |
| Latin     | 39        | 6                  |
| Sanscrit  | 17        | 2                  |
| Persian   | 11        | 1                  |
| Urdu      | 90        | 4                  |
| Hindee    | 7         | 1                  |
| Oorya     | 12        | 2                  |
| Bengali   | 881       | 144                |

The proportion of Christians, and consequently of youths who profess Latin, is smaller than last year. The Mahomedans, as usual, lag behind, not one having gone up for the First Arts examination, though last year a Mahomedan held the highest place on the list of Bachelors. Inducements should be held out to students to profess the learned languages, Greek, Latin, Sanscrit, Persian, and Arabic, by allowing those who do so to pass on obtaining a relatively smaller number of marks. The intellectual effort to master one of these is surely worth more than that put forth in acquiring a knowledge of Bengali or any of the common vernaculars.

The mistake committed by Government in maintaining its own schools for teaching a language which Bengalees learn so greedily, with a view to obtain "situations," and in not developing the grant-in-aid system, is seen in the fact that in 1860-61 the number of all schools under Government inspection in Bengal was 816, with only 49,654 pupils. That is, there was one school to a population of 50,000, one-fifth of which consists of children who should be at school, and twelve scholars to a population of 10,000. Each pupil costs the State, taking official calculations, which are far from correct, Rs. 16 per annum, while each paid as fees only Rs. 5. Why should the tax-paying public see the pittance allotted for education thus squandered on a class who can pay for their own schools, and with such comparatively miserable results? Meanwhile the peasantry are uneducated, only three per cent. of the prisoners in our jails can read and write, and the degraded masses are the sport of oppressive usurers or designing "committee-wallahs," who incite them to rebel, and turn them against the only influences which can enlighten and enrich them after they have squeezed from them their last pice.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT. — Consequent on the retirement of Lieutenant-colonel Mayhew, Adjutant-general of the army, the following temporary appointments have been made:—Lieut.-colonel H. W. Norman, C.B., Deputy Adjutant-general, to officiate as Adjutant-general of the army. Captain G. L. Fraser, Officiating First Assistant, to officiate as Deputy Adjutant-general of the army. Major A. B. Johnson, Officiating Second Assistant, to officiate as First Assistant Adjutant-general of the army. Captain G. E. Holmes, Major of Brigade, Jullundur, to officiate as Second Assistant Adjutant-general of the army.

PAPER CURRENCY.—Mr. Laing, we see it stated, "brought out with him the first instalment of notes for the new currency. The whole are expected by the first week of January. But as a month's notice of the stoppage of the circulation of the Presidency Banks must be given in the Gazette, we do not expect to see the currency fairly launched till first February next. Money is so abundant in Calcutta that the Bank ought to be able to invest not less than three millions sterling in the notes, which the public will soon absorb. This will enable the State at once to go into the share market as purchasers of its own securities, and cause Government paper to approach still more closely to the rates which prevail in London. We are glad to see that the Bank of Bombay is about to establish branches throughout the Presidency. In a short time the branches of the Bengal Bank will extend from Rangoon to Umritsur. What is Madras about?"

HARVEST PROSPECTS.—According to the Delhi Gazette very favourable rains have fallen in the Central Districts of the Punjab, Lahore, Sealkote, Umritsur, &c., during the first and second weeks of December, and that they have removed to a considerable degree the anxiety naturally felt for the Rubee crops; one or two such falls in January and February, and the harvest in wheat, gram and barley is likely to be a most abundant one. Owing to the absolute scarcity of these grains, no material abatement in the price can be expected during the three months. Khurreef seed, such as joar, bajra, millet, &c., are, however, abundant, and selling at from 25 to 28 seers.

FEMALE SERFS IN BENGAL.—The Indian Mirror draws attention to the number of female serfs in Bengal, known as nuffers. They "are purchased to serve as maid servants, but are treated generally with such indignity, contempt, and cruelty, as to extract pity from every outsider. In America the slaves are disposed of by the auctioneer's hammer, in Bengal by bonds or mortgage deeds. Young girls and lads are generally sold at very low rates to parties desirous of engaging their services, and when a transfer of property takes place this bond is also transferred along with the unfortunate female slaves. In every village east of Jessore and west of Burdwan, if a gentleman or a lady goes to a relative's house unattended by one of these menials, he or she becomes the butt of ridicule for the next fortnight." "If any of them ever dare to escape from her master's house, the inhabitants of the whole village combine to capture her, and when she is brought back she is subjected to the most atrocious treatment." Some three years ago we (Friend of India) drew attention to this class, and to that of female slaves purchased by Mussulmans for purposes of prostitution, but no official inquiry has been made. How little do we know of the rottenness concealed under the surface of Asiatic society!

"MEMORIAL OF THE MUTINY."—The Christian Vernacular Education Society for India have issued a suggestive appeal in favour of a scheme for holding an annual service commemorative of our national deliverance from the Indian mutiny, during the anniversary week of the relief of Lucknow, November 17 to 23. The idea of missionary collections is included in that of a thanksgiving service. Whilst urging the pre-eminent claim of their own institution, itself expressly formed to be a "Memorial of the Mutiny," the Committee say—"If any of our brethren, in responding to this appeal, should devote the offerings of their people to the general work of Christian Missions in India, we shall rejoice that we were privileged to augment the resources of those Missions."

INDIGO MANUFACTURE.—The Gazette Supplement contains a letter from a Mr. McFarlane in Glasgow to Sir Charles Wood, describing an improved method of manufacturing indigo. At present the plant is steeped in water, and the liquor obtained is agitated with paddles till the yellow juice becomes blue and falls to the bottom in a solid form. The improvement proposed is "to reduce the leaves and stems of the plant to pulp or shreds by a cylindrical machine made wholly of iron, similar in construction to that used by paper makers in reducing rags to pulp. When the twigs are so treated in water, let them be put in a wire cloth cylinder made to revolve rapidly in water so as effectually to wash out all the colouring matter of the plants; the liquor then to be treated in the ordinary way with revolving paddles like those of a steam-boat, only suitably small, and to be driven either by steam, wind, or water power, as may be most convenient. If this method be adopted it will certainly add one-third to the produce of the Indigo crop." Dr. Forbes Watson thinks the suggestion worthy of consideration. Instead, however, of operating on the plant before the juice is extracted, he would obtain one vat full of liquor in the ordinary way and then subject the steeped plant to the action of machinery. The agitation of the indigo liquor is said to be better effected by men than by mechanical appliances.

PETROLEUM.—A correspondent of the Delhi Gazette says that a kind of petroleum exudes out of the ground in several places in the Jhelum district along the Salt range, at Kaffir Kote, at Jabba, in the Shahpore district, and in very small quantities at Shah-ke-Noor-poor, in the Rawul Pindee district. It has not become an article of commerce owing chiefly to the cost of carriage. A few bottles full were once sent to London. Price and Co., the candle makers, reported favourably on it, and asked for a large quantity for further experiments. Another consignment was recently sent to England.

PAID SERGEANT INSTRUCTORS OF MUSKETRY are to be appointed to all cavalry corps in India armed with breech loading carbines.

THE CUSTOMS REPORT of the N. W. Provinces and Punjab for 1860-1 shows that the revenue reached the large sum of Rs. 89,49,412, or Rs. 21,72,569 more than last year. The cost of collection—nearly 11 per cent.—though still large, is said to be little more than half that of last year. The items are:—

|            | N.W. Provs.       | Punjab.       | Total.    |
|------------|-------------------|---------------|-----------|
| Salt ...   | Rs. 53,11,643 ... | 31,48,089 ... | 84,59,732 |
| Sugar "    | 2,39,446 ...      | 2,19,091 ...  | 4,58,537  |
| Sundries " | 24,544 ...        | 6,599 ...     | 81,143    |

Total Rs. 55,75,633 ... 33,78,779 ... 89,49,412 This represents an enormous inland trade, of which the Customs officers should be able to collect statistics. The large increase is owing to the custom of the carts which poured grain into the Famine districts returning laden with salt; and to the prohibition of the indiscriminate manufacture of salt in Oude, which created a demand. There was a large decrease in the consumption of sugar from 7 to 4½ lakhs of rupees, owing to the failure of the sugar-cane crops and the diversion of capital to the grain trade.

THE INDUS TUNNEL is again in working order, after a partial stoppage during the summer for want of machinery, which has at last come to hand, and is in the course of erection. On the 1st of December the horizontal gallery under the river had reached on the east side 380 feet, and on the west side 260 feet; the deep water is all passed, and the remainder of the distance is under ascertained rock sounding; so that in an engineering point of view the practicability of the project may be considered settled, and the only point remaining is, whether Government will afford the money for its construction.

IRON ORE IN BERAR.—Dr. R. Haines, acting chemical analyser to Government, in a letter dated the 11th December, to the address of Colonel H. Rivers, Secretary to Government, railway department, has submitted a statement of the analysis of four specimens of iron ore found in Berar, on the branch line of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway. He says that the ore from Wore is a granulated red hematite, containing an average of 50 per cent. of metallic iron. A few veins of quartz run through it. It contains only 52 per cent. of water. The other three ores are brown hematites, with an argillaceous base; that from Manikgur is pisolitic, and the other two have a strong resemblance to laterite.

MAJOR-GENERAL SIR ROBERT NAPIER, G.C.B., Military member of the Supreme Council, is to be War Minister for India, says the Englishman, and "is busily engaged in organising the new department, which will swallow up or annihilate the present secretariate office and machinery, and thoroughly assimilate the management of our war and military affairs to that existing in England, and in other European countries ranking as first class military Powers. This innovation, the time for which has fully arrived, will impart a solidity to the management of our military affairs in India, and all over Asia, in which hitherto they have been very deficient; and as all the departments which have heretofore acted, to a great extent, separately and independently of each other, the Adjutants-general, Quartermasters-general, &c., will henceforth be under the orders and control of the War Minister, in conjunction with his excellency the Commander-in-Chief; the military administration will assume a homogeneity and unity of action that must be highly advantageous. We have heard mention made of the names of officers who are likely to get employment in the new department; but as we believe that these arrangements have not as yet been definitively settled, we refrain from publishing them."

BHAWULPORE, Nov. 27.—The cruel Nawab still remains unpunished for murdering his minister, Ahmed Khan, and his sons. The Punjab Government have not interfered in the matter. Only the surviving members of the deceased minister's family have been brought from Bhawulpore, and placed at Mooltan. A case is now pending here before the authorities, in which many eunuchs are implicated, for purchasing a number of children for their cruel and illegal purposes. A reference has been made to Government how to punish the culprits.

ACCIDENT TO SIR ROBERT GARRETT, K.C.B.—The Mofussilite regrets extremely to hear of a serious accident which happened to General Garratt (commanding the Umballah Division), on the 10th December. His charger fell with him, and two of the general's ribs and his collar bone were broken, and he has sustained other very severe injuries.

CALCUTTA SMALL CAUSE COURT.—From the annual report of the business of the Calcutta Small Cause Court for the year terminating on the 30th April, 1861, it appears that the aggregate number of cases instituted during the past year was 31,777, the average number daily being 125. The amount carried to the credit of Government on account of fees, &c., was Rs. 1,39,165-11-8, while the total expense of the establishment was Rs. 1,06,782-8-11, leaving a balance of Co.'s Rs. 32,383-2-9 in favour of Government. As the Court-house is Government property, the total expenditure, amounting to Rs. 1,06,782-8-11, mentioned in the foregoing sentence, does not include a sum of Rs. 5,500 on account of the rent of the premises occupied by the Court, which have been estimated, but not actually incurred. Although the number of cases instituted in the past official year is less by 510 than that instituted in the previous year, the amount litigated exceeded by Rupees 43,936 that of the previous year, and the net amount credited to Government, as above stated, is the largest since the establishment of the Court. Of the 31,777 cases instituted 31,094 were set down for hearing, of which 17,247 were actually tried, 13,048 having been decided in favour of plaintiffs, and 4,199 having been either dismissed or nonsuited; 10,404 were compromised before being called on for hearing, 3,443 were struck off for non-appearance of the parties, and 179 remained undecided on the 30th of April, 1861.

MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.—The Englishman says that "in future no exchanges, as hitherto effected between Royal Medical officers in this country, will be allowed by the Home authorities, military and medical; and all these arrangements must be made or sanctioned by Dr. Gibson, director general of the Army Medical Department in England. So determined is the director general to put a stop to medical officers in India effecting exchanges of regiments and appointments to suit their own views and convenience, that, as we hear, he has actually annulled one of these arrangements made in the commencement of the year, between the surgeon of the Carabineers and a medical officer on the staff out here, by which the former remained in the country and the latter went home with the regiment to England. We understand that these two officers have been ordered to resume their former positions, one coming back to India, and the other going to England. In future, whenever a medical officer leaves a regiment in India on sick leave or private affairs, or from any other reason whatever, he will not, on any account, be allowed to effect an exchange or make any personal arrangement; but the officer on the medical staff out here who has been longest on service in India will succeed to the medical charge of the vacant corps as a matter of right, if there is no valid reason for his exclusion. Only recently a Queen's medical officer, in charge of a regiment very near the presidency, expressed his intention of effecting an exchange and remaining in the country; but he was peremptorily informed that no such thing would be allowed, and that he must return with his corps to England. We think that the rule is just and requisite, though it puts an end to several very convenient arrangements which have hitherto ruled in these matters."

"CAVE CANEM."—By advices received from Indore, by the Englishman, "we learn a new device of the restless sowers of sedition in Central India. Two dogs have lately traversed a wide district, each with an i tahr or proclamation fastened round his neck, accompanied with an order to feed and pass the animals from village to village, a mission which appears to have been fulfilled for a length of time, and over a considerable extent of country, before the strange couriers attracted any attention from the authorities."

OFFICERS ABOUT TO RETIRE.—Lieut. Fitzgerald, 66th N. I.; Major Fooks, 50th N. I.; Lieut. Gordon, 7th N. I.; Major Blgrave, 26th N. I.; Col. Hicks, 69th N. I.; Major Richards, 25th N. I.; Col. Clarke, 25th N. I.; Major Shakespeare, 25th N. I.; Capt. Wallace, 51st N. I.; Col. Moir, 28th N. I.; Col. Landers, 9th N. I.; Capt. Trotter, 43rd N. I.; Col. Garrett, 64th N. I.; Col. Nowgong, Nov. 20.—You are already aware of the occurrence of a serious outbreak in the Nowgong district, attended with the murder of Lieut. Singer, Third Class Deputy Commissioner, and I may now add that in consequence the steamer Lucknow has been taken up for conveying Sepoys as well as reinforcements from Gowhaty to Nowgong. Lieutenant Singer's corpse was found in the Kulling River, and sent down to Gowhaty by the Darogah of Gazee. This outbreak reveals the weakness of the executive power in this Province, arising from the paucity of troops, caused by the reduction of the local regiments, and the absence of the means of transport and communication. Lieutenant Bartleman, 47th Regiment Native Infantry, has proceeded to Sonapore, to take the detachment posted there to Gazee, and eventually to Phoolgooree, in Nowgong. Lieut.-Col. Richardson, at Cherra, has been instructed to send a detachment to some advantageous position on the Northern borders of Jynteesh. The country a little way from the Station of Nowgong towards Phoolgooree is deserted; but the presence of the Deputy Commissioner there has restored confidence to the innocent, and it is expected that the guilty persons implicated in the late outbreak will soon be arrested and punished.—Englishman.

HEAD QUARTERS' CAMP.—The Delhi Gazette states, on the authority of a correspondent from Sir Hugh Rose's camp, that his Excellency expressed himself much satisfied with his visit to Umritsur, which place the camp had just left. Sir Hugh Rose minutely inspected the fort at Govindghur, and observed that he thought it was valuable as a place of refuge, but he objected to the walls on account of their height, which renders them not only liable to be easily destroyed by an enemy, but their debris would fill up the ditch and facilitate an attack. The question of places of refuge in case of disturbances for the Christian community at different stations will, we understand, be shortly taken up and settled. The letter adds:—"His Excellency finds the system of workshops getting on well in the regiments he has inspected, and when fully instituted it is believed they will give good employment to the men and decrease crime and drunkenness, which often besets men for want of something to do. On the 5th the camp reached Mean Meer, and will probably remain there till Monday. There are only the 27th N.I., the Mooltanee Horse, Wing of her Majesty's 94th Regiment, and two troops of Horse Artillery here. His Excellency is very minute in his inspections. We shall probably leave this on Monday for Sealkote, and eventually for Peshawur. His Excellency is about to give Col. Harris, of the 101st Regiment, a Brigade command. He is an old and good officer, and having elected for local service, vacates his present command on the new line regiment being fully organised and established. Lieutenant-Colonel Sarel, the new Assistant Adjutant-General of Cavalry, joined the camp the other day. His Excellency will make a very minute inspection of the cantonments here."

INCOME-TAX.—The new Act, which allows payment of Income-tax at the same rate as last year, is applied to the chief divisions of Bengal.

INDIAN JAILS.—The following table, compiled from Reports on Indian Jails, shows the number of convicts on any given day in the jails of India, their annual cost, and the value of their so-called labour:—

|                     | Number of Jails. | Number of prisoners on a given day. | Cost per Head. | Value of Labour. |

MR. T. D. FORSYTH, of the civil service, has forwarded to the Government a protest against the censure passed on him by his Excellency the Viceroy, in connection with certain note transactions in Oude.

MAJOR HATCH, Deputy Judge-Advocate of the Presidency Division, has been permanently appointed Deputy Judge-Advocate-General at Army Head Quarters, and is directed to join the camp of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief at Lahore. This is a new appointment, and not made before it was required, as it is obviously advisable that the Commander-in-Chief should have an experienced officer of every department permanently with him, and not be obliged to make distant references, and change his subordinates, whenever he may be on the move, as at present.

DEATH OF MR. NORRIS.—The Agra Weekly Register announces the death of Mr. Norris, the well-known pleader. No particulars are given, save that he died at Darjeeling. His connection with the famous Lucknow libel suit must be fresh in the memory of all.

LIEUT.-COL. C. PRIOR.—The command of the 1st Ghorka Regiment, vacated by the departure of Colonel Graham, who accepts the pension and retirement offer of Sir Charles Wood, has been conferred by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief on Lieutenant-Colonel C. Prior, of the late 64th N. I., who has hitherto been doing general duty at Jullundur. Lieutenant-Colonel Prior is a young and energetic officer; did excellent service as Assistant-Adjutant-General at Lahore in the trying time of 1857, and has previously served in Afghanistan and on the North-West frontier.

MEAN MEER, Dec. 3.—His Excellency General Sir Hugh Rose, G.C.B., K.S.I., Commander-in-Chief, arrived at Mean Meer yesterday morning. His excellency held a levee at noon, and inspected the troops later in the day. In consequence of Brigadier-general Ferryman, who has held temporary command of the division during the absence of Major-general Windham, having fallen under the displeasure of the Chief, and been in consequence remanded to his regiment (H.M.'s 75th), the next senior officer at the station, Colonel Gaitskill, C.B., commanded the brigade on the occasion.

THE QUEEN'S BAYS, on their march down country to embark at Calcutta for England, have been halted at Cawnpore, by orders from the Horse Guards, and been directed to stand fast for the present. The order has come out from England in consequence of the home military authorities having found out that the Bays are not required there, whilst the Indian military authorities know that they are not required here, and are anxious to get rid of an expensive European Cavalry regiment as a measure of financial economy.

DEROJET, Nov. 25.—The Commissioner of the district has proceeded to Tonk, to investigate the case of five grass-cutters killed by Mahsoods. General Van Cortlandt has returned from Cashmere, and assumed the charge of his former post at Hissar. The Punjab Government have asked the Mahsood chiefs for a certain quantity of alleged coal that has of late been discovered there, to examine whether it is likely to answer any useful purpose. The Punjab chiefs and Sirdars have been requested by the Supreme Government to introduce the cultivation of cotton into their respective territories.

THE FRONTIER COMMAND.—Major-General Sir Sydney Cotton, K.C.B., is about to vacate the command of the Peshawur Division, and returns to England; and we understand that the Government has selected the general officer in India most conspicuously fit, from every qualification, to succeed him in that most important and responsible post; Brigadier-General St. G. D. Showers, now commanding the Presidency Division, is going up to take possession of our North-Western frontier.

THE COMPANY'S EUROPEAN REGIMENTS.—Her Majesty has been pleased to direct that the 101st, 102nd, and 103rd Regiments of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay Fusiliers, shall have the honour of bearing the designation "Royal."

BUNDELKUND.—Letters received from Bundelcund state that there is an uneasy feeling among the Europeans regarding the released mutineers, and that their position has been brought to the notice of the supreme Government.

RAJPOOTANA.—We hear from Jodhpore that a severe fight has taken place between the Rajah's troops and outlaw Thakoors, in which several lives have been lost. The Thakoors' party, after much loss, have retreated; the Rajah's troops still hold the ground.

COLONEL ELLIOT, Commissioner of Nagpore, is gazetted as Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces. We had understood that Colonel Elliot's health would have prevented him from undertaking such very onerous duties.

OPIMUM SALES.—The particulars of the last opium sales are as follows:—

|         | Chests. | Highest. | Lowest. | Average.   | Proceeds. |
|---------|---------|----------|---------|------------|-----------|
| Behar   | 1,244   | 1,555    | 1,325   | 1,537-12-9 | 19,13,020 |
| Benares | 599     | 1,505    | 1,490   | 1,498-0-7½ | 8,97,325  |

Thus far the actual proceeds from the sales are not more than Rs. 10,60-20 below Mr. Laing's estimate.

SILVER FETTERS.—The Englishman states that the young Rajah of Cooch Behar, who apprehended a brother of the Nana, is so convinced of his identity that he put fetters on him, but of silver. The criminal is coming down to Calcutta under only native guards.

MISSIONARY PROGRESS.—The report of the Wesleyan Methodist Missionary Society records the success of the Rev. Mr. Pearson, their missionary to the soldiers stationed at Barrackpore. We have been witnesses of his success. One colonel of a regiment has repeatedly stated to the missionary that the change which has taken place in his men since they came to Barrackpore is almost incredible; that "instead of having forty or fifty men in the guard room every morning, they have now scarcely any." It is a pity General Wheler should commit himself to the opinion, and that Mr. Pearson should quote it so as to mislead his supporters in England, that "the work of converting India is almost hopeless unless something be done for the soldiers and Europeans." Let both works go on without injury to each other.—Friend of India.

MAJOR JOHNSON, of the 62nd N.I., one of the luckiest men in the army, as far as promotion goes, has consented to take the bonus of £200 a-year only, as he is not entitled to any pension. He entered the service in 1841, and was promoted to his majority on the 18th of December, 1857. He is now seventeenth on the list for promotion to lieutenant-colonel. His retirement will promote Captain Denniss and Brevet Captain Leven to higher grades.

COLONEL TOMBS, C.B. and V.C., is, we learn, to have a brigade very shortly. Probably he may take over that of Dinapore, on Colonel Burney's retirement.

DELHI, Dec. 10.—The 1st Bengal Cavalry marched in this morning under command of Colonel C. T. Chamberlain. The regiment appears in first rate condition, both men and horses. The 46th regiment resumed their march this morning. The cricketers of the 46th played those of the 82nd a friendly match yesterday; the 82nd won, with seven wickets to go down. A strong south-west wind has been blowing for the last day or two; sending up such clouds of dust as to render out of door amusement anything but agreeable, always except those that can be indulged in in the public gardens.

AKYAB AND DACCA TELEGRAPH.—The Myoc cable connecting Akyab with the Dacca line of telegraph has been laid. With the exception of a small patch still requiring to be laid down at Pudda, the line between that station and Calcutta is in excellent working order. A message has been received in Rangoon from Calcutta which had been only twenty two hours in transit. When all repairs are completed, it is expected that messages will be transmitted in six hours.

RANGOON AND MAULMAIN.—The following shows the trade of Rangoon and Maulmain for 1860-61:

|                | Imports and Exports. | Duty.    |
|----------------|----------------------|----------|
| Rangoon...     | Rs. 2,10,61,869      | 5,88,565 |
| Maulmain ..... | 97,66,059            | 1,00,481 |

If Akyab be added, we may consider the trade of British Burmah as four millions sterling, and its customs revenue at ten lacs.

FAMINE RELIEF FUND.—The total amount collected in Madras for the Famine Relief Fund was Rs. 74,392, of which nearly one third was contributed by natives. The surplus is Rs. 23,000, which is to be kept in hand as, thanks to the ryotwar system of Madras, there is a prospect of deficient crops and prices at famine rates. The London Committee have directed the surplus of their contributions to be reserved against a recurrence of similar evils.

NATIVE GIRLS' SCHOOL.—Lady Denison recently presided at the examination of the Native Girls' Schools attached to the Free Church Mission, Madras. The success has been so great that it is intended to double and in some classes quadruple the fees.

VISCOUNT HAMILTON AND LORD LISTOWEL have arrived at Madras, with the intention of proceeding on a sporting tour to Vizagapatam. We are glad to see that India has at last attracted the attention of tourists, who may subsequently make their knowledge conducive to her welfare. We believe it to be utterly impossible for any European to travel in this extraordinary country without ever afterwards taking a deep interest in the prospects and prosperity of its teeming millions.

VICAR APOSTOLIC OF MYSORE.—The Madras Examiner contains the text of the Pope's Brief, appointing the Vicar Apostolic of Mysore, Visitor Apostolic of all the missions in the East Indies, in the room of the late Bishop of Drusipare, Pondicherry, who died not long ago. The new Visitor is invested with "all the same faculties, prerogatives, and indults," and appointed to finish the Apostolic visitation. The document is "given at Rome, at St. Peter's, under the ring of the Fisherman."

SIR WILLIAM DENISON has been suffering from an attack of fever, which prevented his attendance both at the birthday ball and at the examination of Free Church Schools. The matter is scarcely to be wondered at, as his Excellency has frequently exposed himself to the sun; and, under such circumstances, an attack of fever is a mere question of time.

RANGOON INSTITUTE.—We notice the success of the Young Men's Literary Society of Rangoon, during the second year of its existence. It consists of forty-two members. Its debates and lectures during the year show no little intellectual activity. The Dalhousie Institute of Calcutta, the Institute of Howrah, and this Young Men's Society of Rangoon are the means of most extensive good.

THE INAM COMMISSION.—The number of cases decided by the Inam Commission during the month of October was 13,852 which raises the total number of cases decided, from the commencement of the undertaking to 2,21,321. Besides these 13,848 cases of village service Inams were registered during the month, of which 8,760 come under the head of Government village servants, which under the rules are enfranchised on 5-8ths of their assessment, and 5,088 under the head of Village Artisans. The total number of the several descriptions of service Inams registered up to the end of October is 94,752. The total number of titles confirmed to the end of October was 1,78,442; of which 30,027 were in respect of religious and charitable grants of a permanent character; 94,207 were personal Inams enfranchised at the option of the Inamdars; 50,294 were personal Inams enfranchised compulsorily; and 3,824 were personal grants not enfranchised and confirmed on present tenures. The total number of title deeds which had reached the hands of the Inamdars up to the end of last month was 1,10,083. The total amount of quit-rent payable to Government in addition to former Jodi is Rs. 2,04,860. The amount paid in redemption of the quit rent is Rs. 9,417-12-8. The combined quit-rent payable to Government for the future upon personal Inams confirmed to the holders amount to Rs. 4,85,221. Of the number of personal grants confirmed during the month under report, 67 were cases of Jangi Kattubadi and Kavilgar Inams, assessed at Rs. 872-0-0 and charged with a future quit-rent of Rs. 434, which being added to the number of this class of Inams previously disposed of, raises the total number of Police Inams enfranchised to 2,566, assessed at Rs. 64,598, and charged with a future quit-rent of Rs. 36,064.—Times, Dec. 13.

BOMBAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

KHAN BAHADOOR PESTONJEE SORABJEE, the well-known mail contractor of Poona, died early on the morning of the 25th December, at his residence in Poona.

ASSISTANT-SURGEON LORD, Civil Surgeon of Rajcote, has been appointed Superintendent of Mahableshwar, and we are informed that his successor in Kattywar is likely to be Assistant Surgeon Butler, of the 2nd Grenadiers.

THE BHEELS are again giving trouble in Khandeish.

THE REV. T. BOAZ, LL.D., has gone to his rest. Dr. Boaz was a missionary in India for twenty-five years, in connection with the London Missionary Society. He was for many years pastor of Union Chapel, Calcutta; and was also editor of the Cal. Chr. Advocate. He was a man of great activity and energy, and enjoyed in a high degree the respect of those that knew him.—Bombay Guardian.

MR. A. KINLOCH FORBES, Acting Secretary to Government in the Political, Judicial, and Educational Departments, has been appointed Acting Judge of the Sudder Adawlut, in room of Mr. R. Keays, proceeded to Europe on sick leave. By the elevation of Mr. Forbes to the Sudder bench we have now three of the ablest Civil Servants who have ever sat together in the Court, Messrs. Hebbert, H. Newton, and Kinloch Forbes. They are judicial officers of ripe experience, great industry, and extensive knowledge of native character. The nomination of Mr. Forbes reflects credit on Government at a time when the High Court is being organised.

FRENCH WAR-SHIPS AT BOMBAY.—Two ships of war of the French navy, the Hermione frigate, of 51 guns, bearing the flag of the Commodore of the African squadron, and a gunboat, are now lying in the port of Bombay. The Hermione is a fine ship, with a crew of 400 men, and a complete armament of rifled guns (32 pounders). The usual courtesies have been exchanged between the French officers and the Commodore and officers of the Indian Navy now in harbour; but it is to be regretted that the Royal Navy of England is not at present represented in Bombay by even so much as a gunboat. Moreover, the Hornet, which went out the other day, had not a rifled gun on board. We may mention, however, for the satisfaction of the public, that the Sidon and two or three other ships are now due at Bombay, and on their arrival our naval force in these waters will make a very respectable appearance.

BARODA, Dec. 20.—Last evening the Guicowar left Baroda, under a salute of seventeen guns, for Kattywar, on a tour of inspection for three months. It is rumoured by his own subjects that he will make this tour a matter of speculation, and will return with no less than thirty lakhs of rupees, that he will receive in the shape of Nazarana (presents), or exact that sum from the tributary chiefs. The resident accompanies him a portion of the way, and will return within six weeks, during which time Lieutenant Fenwick will personify the Burra Sahib. Two companies of H.M.'s 28th Regiment N. I., under command of Lieutenants Farquharson and Carpendale, are sent in attendance upon him, besides his own 2nd Regiment, commanded by Captain James Hykoop, four guns under Captain Hardy, and other followers of multifarious duties, either on foot or mounted on horses, camels, or elephants, amounting in all to eight or nine thousand souls, accompany him. By-the-bye, I must not omit to state that about a fortnight ago, for two days, the Guicowar's little army underwent a general review. The army consists of three native infantry regiments, each having a captain and two subaltern officers, a cavalry regiment, called the "black horse," after the colour of the uniform, with an officer, a resalla or irregular horse with one officer, two batteries with one officer in each, and two silver guns with one officer. All these are under the command of one colonel. The resident and several officers of her Majesty's service were present. One and all declared that the officers and men went through their manœuvres most creditably, and the resident did not hesitate to speak to Colonel Devine, highly commending his labours in organising the army and training them so efficiently, desiring him at the same time to express his sentiments of approbation to the officers and men under his command. His highness in consequence the next day arrayed Colonel Devine's uniform with a valuable gold medal set with a rich brilliant.—Bombay Gazette.

COLONEL E. L. RUSSELL, late Remount Agent, has been appointed to succeed Colonel Barr as Military Accountant. Colonel Barr, it will be remembered, has been nominated to succeed Colonel Swanson, who retires.

MAJOR GRAVES, of the Guzerat Horse, is appointed to the command of the 2nd regiment Sind Horse, in room of Major Green, C.B., proceeded to Europe on furlough.

MR. SHAW STEWART, Under-Secretary to Government in the Revenue, Financial, and General Departments, has been appointed to act for Mr. Forbes in the Secretariat.

BOMBAY WEEKLY MAIL.—The Government of India has informed the Trades' Association of Calcutta that the new arrangement of a weekly mail via Bombay, as a substitute for the direct mail to Calcutta, will not be carried out till next November, when railway communication will be much extended. By that time the Thull and Bhoze Ghaut inclines will be completed, and the only railway break will be between Benares and Jubbulpore.

MR. WILLIAM LONDON, Administrator-general of Bombay, has been appointed Sheriff of Bombay for the ensuing year.

LIEUT.-COLONEL POTTINGER, C.B., of the Royal Artillery, has been appointed to succeed Colonel Davidson, as Commissary-General of Bombay. Colonel Pottinger has never served in the Commissariat, and he supersedes one of the ablest commissariat officers to be found in any army, Colonel Birdwood.

ROYAL ASIATIC SOCIETY.—At the anniversary meeting of the Bombay Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, the office bearers were re-elected, the Hon. W. E. Frere, president, Dr. Wilson, honorary president, and U. J. Carter, Esq., F.R.S., secretary. The society consists of ninety-eight members, of whom twenty are non-resident. During the year fifteen original communications were read. The report pronounced the labours of the Shastree, who had been employed to decipher the inscriptions in the Caves at a large expense supplied by Government, "utterly valueless."

PARSEE COMMISSION.—The following gentlemen have been appointed a Commission in pursuance of the orders of the Legislative Council of India, to inquire into and report on the petitions of the Parsees of Western India, for the enactment of a special law to regulate marriages, divorce, and inheritance among them:—Sir Joseph Arnould, President, Henry Newton, Esq., Framjee Nusserwanjee, Esq., Rustumjee Cursetjee Mody, Esq. Each member of the Commission will receive a bonus of Rs. 1,250.

KURRACHEE AND ADEN TELEGRAPH.—The steamer Telegraph, despatched to restore the cable between Kurrachee and Aden, reached Muscat the other day, and left that place again for coal. From experiments made to test the cable, there is very little doubt the damages are close on to shore, and easily repairable; notwithstanding this, Government will proceed with the project of the land line.

SUDASHWGHUR.—Commander H. A. Fraser, of H.M.'s Indian Navy, has completed his survey of the harbour of Sudashwghur, and made his final report. By an inexpensive breakwater it can be made an excellent shipping port at all seasons of the year.

BANK AT KURRACHEE.—According to the Sind papers, the Bank of Bombay is about to establish a branch at Kurrachee. "The branch will act as Government bankers also, and so effect a saving to the State, as it will not then be necessary to keep up the Treasury establishments in the three divisions of the province. The Military Pay Office of the Division is to be reorganized likewise, no longer disbursing actual cash, but paying by means of checks on the Government bankers, the accounts being compiled in Bombay."

THE NANA.—A story was going the rounds yesterday (Dec. 17) to the effect that our friend the Nana (for it really saves a good deal of circumlocution to assume that he is the man) had had his shoes examined, and papers found therein which had caused him to be incarcerated in the Sudder gaol. We learn on inquiry that this is not the case. He has, it is true, been locked up, but the story of the letters is a fabrication. He has, we learn, merely been sent to the gaol as a measure of additional security, until answers can be received from the magistrate at Cawnpore, and from Major Johnstone at Dwarka, to both of whom photographs of the prisoner have been sent for identification. There has nothing else of importance transpired since our last. We are informed that it is by no means certain that the inscription on the seal, of which so much has been made, is really "Shah in Shah." It is extremely difficult to decipher.—Bombay Times of India.

MR. JAMES B. PRILE, Assistant-Revenue Commissioner, Northern Division, has been appointed to act as Under-Secretary, in succession to Mr. Stewart.

CASTE PREJUDICE.—Moral courage would seem to be far more difficult to the Hindoo than physical. The Bombay Gazette tells us that Mahiputram Rupram, the Deputy Educational Inspector, who recently visited England, though a Brahmin, after long holding out against the social persecution of his fellows, has at last humiliated himself to apply for re-admission to caste. Amid other disgraceful acts of penance, he swallowed a disgusting pill composed of the five products of the cow. Worse still, the leading men of his caste, thinking that a man of so little decision of character and self-respect would be no great credit to them, resolved that, as the Shastras require repentance as well as atonement in such a case, and as the professing penitent still continued to pride himself on his travels, he could not be restored.

place with his followers and escaped down the other side of the mountain, leaving behind him four killed. All his property fell into the hands of the Sarawak force, including the iron swivel guns and rifles taken by him from Messrs. Brereton and Lee, when the latter gentleman lost his life on the Sakaran river nine years ago. Whether Rentaub will succeed in evading pursuit remains to be seen, but there can be little doubt that his power and influence have been destroyed, and that he will have great difficulty in ever again drawing together any considerable force.—Singapore Free Press.

JAVA, Nov. 30.—The news from Banjermassing is of a mixed character. Antassari, on hearing of the large force advancing against him, had shifted his quarters and retired further into the interior, where it will be difficult to follow him. The Regent of Amunthay on the 9th November proceeded with a well armed retinue in the direction of the rebels in that quarter for the purpose of bringing them to submission. Major de Rochemont tried to persuade him against this on account of his advanced age, and advised him to leave the duty to one of his sons, but he persisted in advancing towards the insurgents. On his approach he was received with defiant shouts and a discharge of musketry, and a struggle followed, in the midst of which one of the insurgents, unnoticed by the Regent's troops, sprang into the old chief's prahu and stabbed him with a spear, from the effect of which he died next morning. One of his sons was also wounded. Captain Van Langer, with a strong force and a howitzer, was afterwards sent to the place, and dispersed the insurgents. In the Martapura and Tanah Laut districts the fugitives were coming in by hundreds and submitting themselves. Amongst others was a woman, who, in the past year had been known by the title of Tumonggong, and had taken part, in male attire, in several engagements with the Dutch troops.—Singapore Free Press.

DECAY OF THE NUTMEG-TREE.—The nutmeg plantations in the island of Singapore are decaying very rapidly, and this, joined to the extremely low prices obtainable for the produce, is leading to the cultivation in many cases being entirely abandoned, while in others only a few hands are kept on to collect the fruit. On one large plantation, where fifty coolies used to be employed, the number has now been reduced to fifteen, and the expenses for manure, &c., have been similarly curtailed. The capital sunk in these plantations, especially those formed within the last eight or ten years, will be a dead loss to the planters, except in a few instances where the land has been near enough to the town of Singapore to give it a value for building purposes. In the course of a very few years there will not be one thousand nutmeg-trees left in Singapore. No satisfactory explanation has yet been assigned for the rapid and simultaneous decay of the nutmeg-tree both in Penang and Singapore.—Singapore Free Press.

COCHIN CHINA.—The Penang Gazette contains information relating to the state of Cochin China. The native Government is persecuting the Christians with great rigour. A French missionary in the interior had a narrow escape lately. His people advised him to fly to Saigon, which he did, along with two old priests who had taken refuge with him and fifteen pupils. At Tongkin the persecution is dreadful. All the European missionaries and native priests have been obliged to flee for their lives. "A pestilence prevails in the territory between Hué and Tongkin, which is killing all the cattle. The people are unable to till the ground, and famine is general. The Bishop of Southern Tongkin, and a native priest, have suffered martyrdom. Another priest died in jail before he could be taken out for execution. A deacon and six catechists have been banished to Central Cochin China, and another deacon is still imprisoned. The Bishop of Northern Cochin China has escaped, and is now in Hong Kong. A priest of his diocese, named Trung, from the Penang College, has suffered martyrdom. The king has determined to fight the French to the last, and is fortifying Hué strongly." These incidents are narrated by a student, who arrived in Saigon from Hué on the 10th September.

Officers on Courts Martial.

Head Qrs., Camp Jullundur, Nov. 21.—With the sanction of Government, the C. in C. directs that the following para., viz., para. 3, page 5, of H.M.'s regulations, shall be substituted for para. 5, sect. XVIII., of the military regulations, as modified by G.O. dated Nov. 23, 1857:—

"Officers of the regimental staff, or of the civil departments, when called upon to attend as members of courts martial, courts of inquiry, and Boards of investigation or survey, are to sit and vote by seniority, according to their relative rank. The president must in all cases be a combatant officer. When no available officers of the regimental staff or civil department can be found junior to the president, the Board is to be completed by combatant officers, and the required staff or departmental officers are to attend to give any evidence or opinion the Board may consider necessary."

Government having sanctioned the temporary appointment of an assistant adjutant general of cavalry, at head quarters, during the present tour of inspection of the C. in C., his Excellency is pleased to nominate Brevet lieut. col. H. A. Sarel, of the 17th Lancers, to the situation.

The Budget: Appropriation of Savings.

Financial Dept., Allahabad, Nov. 1, 1861.—The following extract from the proceedings of the Govt. of India, with resolution by the Gov. gen. in Council regarding the appropriation of savings of establishment for contingent expenses, is published for general information:—

No. 12,262.—Extract from the proceedings of the Govt. of India, in the Financial Department, dated Sept. 18, 1861.

Read the following:—
From the Auditor General of India to the Secy. to the Govt. of India, Financial Dept., No. 655, dated Aug. 14, 1861.

SIR,—The Civil Paymaster in Bengal, in an office memorandum, dated 9th inst., submits the question, whether under the Budget rules undrawn salary can be applied to contingent expenditure, and as the point does not appear to have been determined by authority, I have the honour to submit the case for the consideration and order of Govt.

2. The circumstances which gave rise to the inquiry are the following:—

The Director of Public Instruction applied to the Govt. of Bengal for permission to appropriate the undrawn salary of the Assistant Professor of Law, amounting to Rs. 300, to the purchase of law books for the library. The junior Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal, in his letter to the Director of Public Instruction, No. 295, dated 22nd ult., states that "the Lieut. Gov. has no objection to the application of the undrawn salary of the Asst. Professor of Law to the purchase of law books for the library, as suggested by Mr. Montrieux, provided it can be done under the Budget rules, but he agrees with you in thinking that it would be advisable to purchase with it standard law works other than reports."

3. Under these orders, the principal of the presidency college has drawn a bill (copy annexed) for the amount, and presented it for audit. The Civil Paymaster, with reference to the provisional sanction accorded by the Lieut. gov., has accordingly instituted the present inquiry.

4. The conditions under which the local Governments are permitted to exercise a discretionary power over the sums allotted for particular heads of service within the amount set apart for each class * contain the proviso that "no salary of any officer appointed by any government can be altered or re-distributed without the sanction of the Govt. of India previously obtained," and although the alteration or re-distribution of salaries may primarily be attended to rather than the appropriation of undrawn salary, yet the objection appears to bear equally upon both, as otherwise expenditure of a contingent nature refused by the supreme Government might be effected by allowing vacancies to remain open to the detriment of the public service and the neglect of the just claims of individuals, and applying the sums thus accruing from civil salaries to the contingent expenditure. It is not easy to provide a rule which shall meet the requirements of all cases, but it might be desirable to limit the action of the local Government without specially interfering with their existing powers, by enacting as a rule that ordinary casual savings only from salaries or establishments should be applied to other purposes, and that all other savings should lapse to the State.

5. The mode in which the amount available is applied for in the case appears open to special objection. It is, in fact, an advance for the purchase hereafter of law books that is required, and the audit of the Civil Paymaster, if given, will afford no security to the Government that the money has been properly expended. A bill for undrawn salary certainly ought not to be susceptible of audit, and if the amount be diverted to other purposes, the actual application of the sum available should be brought within the cognizance of the Civil Paymaster, who should audit the prescribed expenditure on the production of the usual bills or vouchers.

Financial Dept., Fort William, Sept. 18, 1861.—Resolution.—The Gov. gen. in Council is of opinion, with reference to the above inquiry of the auditor, that local Governments have authority, under the first condition given in paragraph 3 of the financial resolution of Nov. 15, 1860, to authorise such a re-distribution of charge as will allow of savings of salary being appropriated to contingencies, provided that the sum total of the Budget grant is not exceeded, and the change in the allotment of the charge is immediately reported to the financial department. H.E. in Council agrees, however, with the Auditor-general as to the necessity of fixing a limitation of such power, and he is accordingly pleased to rule that ordinary casual savings only shall be applied to such purposes.

INDIAN NAVY.

Bombay Castle, Dec. 18.—The decision contained in the following extract, paragraph 89, of a letter from the Secretary of State, No. 819, dated 10th August, 1861, to the address of the Government of India, is applicable to officers of the Indian naval service also:—

"39th. In the same (55th) paragraph of your despatch, you expressed an opinion that the boon of 20 months' leave on sick certificate, with retention of appointment granted to officers of the staff corps may be extended to all officers of the other branches of the service. I have much pleasure in acceding to this recommendation, and I authorise you to give it effect immediately in the three Presidencies. I have no objection extending this boon to officers now on furlough in all cases in which you may think it desirable to recommend it."

A HARD CASE.

IN our correspondence columns will be seen a letter from a gallant officer who has suffered much in his country's service, and who is now compelled by ill-health to retire into private life, on the magnificent pension of one hundred and twenty pounds per annum. For nearly sixteen years he remained at his post, and was actively engaged in the suppression of the Sepoy rebellion and at the siege of Delhi. The hardships he underwent in the cheerful discharge of his duty so utterly ruined his constitution that it was with great difficulty he reached his native land. He has now been two years and a half at home, which, under the new regulations—if sick leave were allowed to count—would entitle him to the full pension belonging to his rank. It certainly does seem a very hard case that officers who have served so long and so faithfully, and who are incapacitated by wounds or ill-health contracted on active duty, should be deprived of every advantage beyond the miserable pay of the grade on which they are forced to retire. Owing to the slowness of promotion, by reason of the seniority system, an officer after fifteen or sixteen years' continuous service might still be a subaltern, and of this there are very many instances. In that case the paltry sum of £90 per annum would be the measure of his country's gratitude, and on which he would be expected to maintain the appearance of a gentleman, and very likely have to support a young wife and an increasing family. Sir Charles Wood has exhibited such an earnest disposition to act handsomely by the old Company's officers that we feel assured he will look with a kindly eye on the hardships here complained of. By extending the £50 bonus to all who have broken down in consequence of wounds and exposure to the climate he will earn not only the heartfelt gratitude of those whom he has benefited, but will also, at a very trifling cost, render an act of justice to many meritorious officers, and assert the national reputation for generously requiting courage and fidelity. It used to be said, "The good people of England pay well and hang well." They have of late, to a great extent, given up hanging, but that is no excuse for giving up the other characteristic likewise. At all events, we trust that her Majesty's Secretary of State for India will take care that, so far as it rests with him, men who have deserved well of their country shall still be suitably rewarded, even though more rogues should escape the gallows than was formerly the case. Our correspondent suggests that twelve years' service should be taken as the minimum, and, taking all circumstances into consideration, the suggestion appears both just and practicable.

MR. LAING ON THINGS IN GENERAL.

IN the absence of more exciting matter for editorial comment, it may not be out of place to make a few remarks on Mr. Laing's reply to the congratulatory address of the Landholders' Association. Before doing so, however, we may briefly allude to certain observations which fell from him at an earlier part of the day while receiving a deputation from other locally influential bodies. The community of interests between Natives and Europeans attracted his special attention as exemplified in the action of heavy import duties on manufactured goods, the reduction of which is demanded by both parties. The foreign merchant naturally desires this because his import trade, if not paralysed, is at least greatly injured; nor is the native trader less anxious to attain the same object, because he knows that his export business largely depends upon the quantity of goods he can take in exchange. Cheap and good clothing is, besides, one of the most urgent wants of the population, and a very wide-spread inconvenience is felt if it be not procurable. But then any further reduction in duties must be contingent "on the temper of the country, the continuance of tranquillity, the subsidence of animosities of race and party, and the growth of an enlightened and influential public opinion to support the Government in enforcing economy both in India and in England." With regard, then, to the Cotton Question, if the supply from India is to be of a permanent, and not of a mere transitory, nature, it is absolutely necessary that more attention shall be paid to the cultivation of the plant, the cleansing of the cotton-wool, and to its careful packing and conveyance to the seaboard. If it be true that an acre of land in the Southern States of America yields from two to three hundred pounds of cotton, worth sixpence per pound, while the same extent of land in India produces only one hundred pounds, worth no more than fourpence per pound, it is manifest that the latter can have no chance in competing with the former. But if by using better seed and by improved cultivation the Indian cotton can be brought to equal that from Orleans in quality and almost in quantity per acre, their relative conditions will then be entirely changed, and the Indian cotton will permanently occupy the best position in the Liverpool market. That this event is possible of attainment appeared more certain to the honourable gentleman than it does to ourselves, unless the Civil War in America be protracted to such a length as to compel the Lancashire manufacturers to sacrifice routine to expediency, and to regard that as the best system of political economy which supplies them with their raw material when it is most pressingly required.

In reply to the Landholders' Association, Mr. Laing applied himself more particularly to three points—the old Civilian theory of government, the Law of Contracts, and Coolie Emigration. Under the first of these heads he insisted upon the good policy of encouraging independent European settlers to invest their capital in local enterprises. The just and equal rights of the Natives must, of course, be respected, but there is nothing incompatible between upholding existing rights and assuring protection to the foreign colonist, whose course is everywhere marked by improvement. "When the factory appears, the jungle disappears, the wild beast of the forest recedes, and the ryot increases and multiplies. Instead of the deadly Teraï, in the course of a few years we shall have, if we succeed in attracting European capital, a belt of tea and coffee plantations fringing the lower slopes of the Himalayas, from Assam to the Punjab, and, instead of remaining a terra incognita, the rich cotton soil of Central India will be the greatest source of supply of this staple article for the mills of Lancashire. The man must be mad who would dream of arresting this tide of progress, and of keeping this great empire, with its boundless resources, as a sort of Jesuit California or Paraguay, where no unhallowed outsider is to intrude between the select official and the subject native."

As to the Contract Law which the Bengal planters have so urgently demanded, and which Lord Canning likewise judged indispensable, Mr. Laing condemns the radical misconception of its purport and tendency in supposing that it was ever intended to assist one section of the European community at the cost of the Native rural population. Why, the Natives are more likely to be benefited by such a measure than any others. The Englishman has a wide field before him where to choose his future habitation. Australia, New Zealand, and Canada open their arms to him, and offer every encouragement for the introduction of his intelligence, capital, and enterprise. If it be desired, therefore, that he shall be tempted to fix his home in the sultry East, far from his own people, it is at least essential that his property should be fully secured to him. "Bad security is only another word for high interest, and if the practical remedy against breach of contract is slow and expensive, the lender, whether he be European or Native, must compensate himself, either by paying for the produce below its market value or by charging an usurious rate for his advances." Thus the Native population has little reason to be grateful to those who retarded the passing of Mr. Cecil Beadon's Bill.

The other topic alluded to by Mr. Laing relates to the important question of labour. As he rightly observed, there is no redundant supply of labour in India. A very much larger population could be maintained with advantage were agriculture better understood. But to force immigration is clearly impossible. At present there are many bidders in the market. The Mauritius, Ceylon, Australia, the West Indies, and the French settlements, are all crying aloud for labourers, and offering tempting terms to lure the industrious Coolies from their ancient homes. It is not for the Government to interfere with the course of what is clearly a free trade, in which the best price will command the best article. If the new settlers, therefore, stand in need of labour, they must be prepared to pay for it, on terms mutually advantageous.

These sensible and decidedly practical views on "things in general" were expressed in clear, manly, vigorous English, which left no doubt of the speaker's sincerity and earnestness. It certainly augurs well for the future prosperity of India that its rulers are at last setting themselves to thoroughly understand the character of the people and the requirements of the country they have been appointed to govern. A splendid opportunity awaits Lord Elgin, nor may we doubt that he will turn it to good account.

CORRESPONDENCE.

PRAISE AND POVERTY.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I know that the retirement of Indian officers is a subject with which your pages have been inundated; but trusting to your power and sense of justice I appeal for assistance, in the names of such officers of the late East India Company's Service who, through ill health and wounds contracted on duty, are forced to leave India, and whose period of service being under twenty years, precludes their obtaining either the £50 additional income, or anything beyond the half-pay of their rank: in many—most—cases, owing to slow promotion, but a subaltern's, after sixteen and eighteen years' service.

It should be remembered that, before our transfer to the Royal army, we had in each regiment bonus funds, by the aid of which a sum, varying from £50 for the junior ensign to £3,000 for the major, was obtainable on retirement, independent of length of service, and this laid out at interest added something to the scanty £90 per annum of a wounded subaltern.

I can instance many—myself among others—who, from exposure to bad climates in more than one campaign, and wounds in the last, have been driven home with shattered health and constitution so utterly ruined as to preclude returning to India; and this after eighteen years' service. Regimental funds being broken up, there is no prospect of a larger income than £90 yearly to the subaltern, and £120 to the captain, unless the Government will sanction the additional £50 per annum now given only to officers entitled to retire after twenty years' absolute service in India, being given to all after twelve years' service, who can show that ill health was contracted by exposure on service, and who can also produce a medical certificate showing their inability to serve longer in India.—I am, yours obediently,

RUINED.

MISCELLANEOUS.

RED SEA SUBMARINE TELEGRAPH.—The steamer with the new cable for the repair and restoration of the eastern division of the telegraphic cable between Aden and Kurrachee left London on the 1st January, and Mr. Latimer Clark, one of the engineers of the Telegraph to India Company, proceeded with the staff by the steamer of the 4th January. It is stated that the attention of the engineers will be first directed to the land line belonging to the company between Alexandria, Cairo, and Suez, which will be at once made available, and a temporary station established about March next at the entrance of the Gulf of Suez, upon one of the islands of Shadwau or Jubal, at which telegraphic messages to and from India, China, and Australia will be received and despatched. This, a distance of 360 miles from Alexandria, shortening the time by about 36 to 40 hours, is an important step, as securing certain priority of information to those who avail themselves of it, as by the recent completion of the Malta-Alexandria cable the communication will be perfected between all parts of England and the Jubal station in the Red Sea. From the latter point the India, China, and Australia messages will be conveyed by the Peninsula and Oriental Company's steamers, under the sanction, already obtained, of her Majesty's Postmaster-general, until further advances shall have been made in the repairs or reconstruction of the cable. It is, therefore, recommended that merchants and others who require to make use of the line should give their instructions in anticipation, so that so soon as the notices of the completion of the Jubal station are issued, probably early in March, their correspondents may be aware of the advantages to be derived from it, and transmit their communications accordingly. It is further stated that the cost of a message between any part of England and any of the following places at which the company have agents will not exceed £3 for a single message, viz., Aden, Bombay, Galle, Madras, Calcutta, Penang, Singapore, Hong Kong, Shanghai, King George's Sound, Melbourne, Sydney, Mauritius, and Reunion.

SPECIE FOR THE EAST.—The amount of specie sent to the East by the outgoing steamer Ceylon yesterday was £107,082, of which £4,307 in gold is for Madras and Alexandria; and £102,775, nearly all silver, for China and the Straits.

THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY COMPANY have for the present ceased to issue debentures, having raised £1,500,000, or three-fourths of the total sum to be ultimately so obtained by them. The new shares, to the amount of £1,000,000, which they have just put out, complete the share capital estimated to be required for this undertaking.

THE EASTERN BANK.—In February last William Henry Stephens, designated as a "newspaper proprietor, formerly residing at Upper Belgrave-place, in the county of Middlesex, and now residing at Dunoon, in the county of Argyll," obtained sequestration at his own instance. In his statutory examination the bankrupt said:—"I came to Scotland for sequestration, partly to avoid exposure in London, and partly because I understood that the matter could be carried through more cheaply in Scotland; and this was of importance to me, as my father had refused to make any advances for the purpose unless I came to this country. I was recommended to come to the county of Argyll in particular because I was not well, and because it was a quiet place, where unnecessary publicity would be avoided." The bankrupt was discharged on the 17th of September; but meantime a petition for recalc had been presented to the Court of Session in behalf of two non-concurring creditors. The case was disposed of by the Second Division of the Court last week. Lord Justice Clerk, in giving judgment, said the present was a strong case for recalc, and it seemed most expedient that the bankrupt's estate should be distributed among his creditors, according to the law of England. The bankrupt was an Englishman, who had no connection with Scotland, whose creditors, with trifling exceptions (if any), were English, whose estate (if any) was in England, and whose avowed object in coming to Scotland was to obtain sequestration. It was a sequestration devised and intended in its origin and whole object, not for the benefit of creditors or for the distribution of the bankrupt's estate, but for the benefit of the bankrupt alone, its sole object being to obtain his discharge. The claims of the creditors who had been certified as concurring had not been ranked on the estate, or even properly lodged in the sequestration. The fact of a discharge having been obtained under these circumstances could, therefore, not be much regarded. The more he examined into the case, the more satisfied he became that this sequestration had been a mere mockery of the process of sequestration.—Times, Jan. 14.

THE ANDAMAN ISLANDERS.—At the Ethnological Society, on the 14th inst., Mr. J. Crawford, president, in the chair, the paper read was "On the Osteology and Dentition of the Aborigines of the Andaman Islands," by Professor Owen. The Andaman Islands are inhabited by a race of black dwarfs, notorious for their audacity and implacable hostility to strangers. They go entirely naked, and the females are subjected to indiscriminate intercourse, until chosen or allotted as wives, when they are required to be faithful to their husbands, and to serve them. Their dead are covered with leaves, and tied up into a bundle with cordage of strong creepers, the ends being knotted together to form a sling to carry it to the grave. This is a small hole, three feet deep, dug with a pointed stick, the earth being thrown out with the hand; and two or three months after the burial of the corpse, when the flesh has rotted and been eaten away by the land crabs and ants, the bones are exhumed and taken to the encampment by the relatives, who each select one as a relic, the skull belonging to the nearest of kin. The skeleton described by Professor Owen was that of a male Andamaner, brought to England by Dr. Mouatt, the Inspector of Indian Prisons. From the dimensions of the bones, the body was about four feet ten inches in height. The skull is oval; the frontal region rather narrow, but not low. There is no similarity between it and the African negroes, nor with the Papuan, Australian, the Malayan, or the Mongolian types. Professor Owen saw no anatomical grounds for deriving the Andaman people from any existing continent, but by these remarks he did not intend any encouragement to a belief that they had originated in the locality to which they were now limited. He thought we should rather look back to one of those ancient continents with the destruction of some of which geological, geographical, and zoological researches have made us acquainted. The Andaman Islands may have been part of some former extent of dry land distinct from, and perhaps even pre-existent to, that neighbouring continent which has been the scene of the elevation of the Himalayan mountains within the tertiary period. Antecedent generations of the race may have co-existed with the slow and gradual geological changes which have obliterated the place of their primitive origin. In every essential human character the Andamaners participate with their most gifted brethren, and they in no way approach the orangs and chimpanzees except in their diminutive stature. Dr. Mouatt, Lieutenant Heathcote, Professor Busk, Mr. Lubbock, Dr. R. King, and Dr. Knox took part in the instructive discussion which followed the reading of the paper.

THE NATURAL PRODUCTIONS OF THE EAST.—By the last overland mail Mr. Fortune has returned from his expedition to Japan, and brings home a valuable collection of hardy trees and shrubs, quite new to this country. A very large number of them are remarkable for having their foliage beautifully variegated, and, as they are likely to prove perfectly hardy in England, they may be expected to produce a striking effect in our landscapes. In passing through China Mr. Fortune paid a visit to Peking, where, owing to the kindness of her Majesty's Minister, Mr. Bruce, he was able to add some trees and shrubs of great interest to his collection, among them a fine evergreen oak and some arborescences of gigantic size. As the climate of this part of China is extremely cold in winter, these trees will, no doubt, prove perfectly hardy in Europe.

STEAM COMMUNICATION WITH INDIA.—A prospectus has been issued for establishing a new steam line to India, to be called the British and Eastern Steam Navigation Company, with a capital of £750,000, in £10 shares. The intention is to construct a fleet with extensive accommodation for passengers, such as will admit of facilities for those of second-class as well as first, and also for the conveyance of troops, railway operatives, and the large number of persons who are likely henceforth to be brought into that line of travel by the rapid development of India, and who are at present compelled by the necessarily high scale of existing fares to take the long sea route.

THE NEW GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF INDIA.—A deputation from the Cotton Supply Association, consisting of Mr. J. B. Smith, M.P., Mr. Kershaw, M.P., Mr. J. Cheetham, President of the Association, Mr. E. Ashworth, Vice-President, Mr. W. Wanklyn, Mr. E. Walmsley, Mr. Hugh Mason, and Mr. S. O. Sutton, secretary, introduced by Mr. Bazley, M.P., and a deputation from the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, consisting of Mr. J. A. Turner, M.P., Mr. M. Ross, Vice-President, Mr. A. Cassels, Mr. Henry Ashworth, Mr. M. Gladstone, and Mr. J. Purder, introduced by Mr. Aspinall Turner, M.P., waited on Lord Elgin on Saturday afternoon.

DEPARTURE OF SIR JOHN INGLIS.—Major-General Sir John Inglis, K.C.B., the hero of Lucknow, who goes out to take command of the forces in Corfu, arrived in Liverpool on Friday night, and embarked on board Messrs. Burns and McIver's steamer Marathon, which sailed on Saturday for Italy and the Adriatic.

THE COMMAND IN CHINA.—Colonel C. W. D. Staveley, C.B., of the 44th Regiment, will succeed to the command of the troops in China, in the room of Major-General Sir John Michel, who returns home, we believe, from ill health. Colonel the Hon. Francis Colborne, C.B., of the 6th Foot, will in all likelihood be appointed Deputy-Quartermaster-General at the Mauritius, in succession to Colonel Sir Henry Johnson, whose period of service on the Staff expired some months since.

MEDICAL MISSION IN PEKIN.—The Rev. Joseph Edkins, writing to the Patriot, from Tien-tsin, says:—"Dr. Lockhart, by the assistance of Mr. Bruce, has now commenced a hospital in the metropolis itself, but some months must elapse before any further step can be made, so we are informed, in proceeding with missionary work in that vast and important city. We have, however, the assurance now given us that ultimately Protestant missionaries will be allowed to reside in Pekin and carry on their labours there with as much liberty as missionaries of the Papacy. Admiral Hope and Mr. Bruce have both expressed their opinion that by the treaty this right cannot be denied to us."

CONSULAR APPOINTMENTS.—(Foreign Office, Jan. 13.)—The Queen has been pleased to approve of Mr. H. Sonnenkalb as Consul at Point de Galle, Ceylon, for H.M. the King of Prussia, and Mr. R. Zapp as Consul at Singapore, for H.M. the King of Hanover.

PROSPECTUS

The growth of cotton in India is at present nearly double that of the Southern States of America, and admits of an almost indefinite expansion without the stimulant of extreme prices, but only with improved transport, and such aids as this Company propose to afford.

The exports from Bombay alone increased 60 per cent. in the 13 years ending 1859, beyond the previous 13 years ending 1846, and 85 per cent. during the last two years, or at about the average of 10 per cent. per annum.

While India has laboured under every disadvantage from want of capital, European enterprise, common roads, and efficient means of conveyance of any kind, she has proved her ability to compete in point of price with every other country by increasing her exports at a much greater ratio than America has done, though the latter has been favoured with cheap and expeditious means of transport both by river and by rail, abundant capital, and Anglo-Saxon energy.

The want that this Company is originated to supply has been urged on public attention for fifteen years. The undertaking was then considered desirable, but now the requirements of a trade which is on the point of being most wonderfully developed by the opening of the interior of India by railways, canals, and roads, render it absolutely necessary.

The civil war in America has suspended present supplies of cotton from that quarter, and placed those for the future on a most precarious footing, which, having stimulated the production in India, increases the scope and need for this Company.

The quality of some of the cotton grown in India is even now nearly equal to that of New Orleans; but owing to the want of labour to free it quickly from seed, imperfect hand churka cleaning, general carelessness on the part of the cul-tivist, great exposure both during and after picking the crop, the want of appliances to prepare it for export, and damage in transit, the portion exported is greatly deteriorated in its transmission to Europe; besides which it is extensively adulterated by the middlemen, by whom the trade has been exclusively conducted.

The object of this Company is, by means of European agency, capital, and appliances, employed in the interior of India, to promote yet further the export of cotton from that country in increased quantity and of improved quality.

This Company will provide roomy storehouses in the districts, and the most efficient machinery for cleaning the cotton within a comparatively short time after it is gathered; it will there press it into bales fit for export, secured with patent metallic bands that will keep the packages in their original shape and size, and the quality in the dry and intrinsically good condition in which it is when picked, however long it may have to be stored.

Its European agencies in the interior will purchase produce direct from the growers, either on commission for exporters or on account of the Company for sale on samples by public auction at the place of shipment. Power will, however, be reserved to ship the produce, if there be no buyers at fair prices. The telegraph will enable the various inland branches to be instantly informed of all fluctuations in prices at the shipping ports, thus keeping the Company's purchasing rates in constant safe relation with selling values.

To all acquainted with the labour and uncertainty at present attending the selection of cotton in Bombay, it will at once be apparent that the proposed system will greatly simplify and lighten the business of the shipping houses; and while economising charges, it will save much loss in weight, quality, and time.

The management in India will be assisted by committees at Calcutta and Bombay; and in order to assimilate the working of this concern to that of a private business, the managers will be paid chiefly by share of profit.

Mr. A. C. Brice, who has had great local experience in the cotton districts of India, has consented to proceed to India to organise the Company's first establishments.

The steam communications by land and water, now in course of development, are daily diminishing the difficulties of transport; and the establishment of a company acting in concert with this company, to undertake the carriage of goods on ordinary roads, will relieve those trading in the interior from many of the cares hitherto incidental to this class of business.

These facilities will place the district and sea-board markets within one week's access to each other, instead of goods occupying months in their transit as heretofore.

The Company's agencies will be open to sell, on commission or otherwise, cloths, twist, &c., suitable for the various inland markets, thus proving of double service to the Indian merchants, by extending both their import and export trade.

From estimates prepared, checked by experienced persons, and supported by reliable published authorities, the provisional committee have every confidence in the profitable nature of the enterprise in which they have embarked, and feel assured that while its object is of national importance in securing a steady and increasing supply of cotton of improved quality from India, the dividends on the capital subscribed will not, after all reasonable deductions for unforeseen contingencies, be less than 15 per cent.

The estimates referred to show that on a paid-up capital of £250,000 the probable net profits in India are calculated to be £81,000.

The shares of the cotton-picking companies in Bombay stand at 100 per cent. premium.

Arrangements will be made for the transfer of shares and the payments of the dividends in India as well as in England.

The Provisional Committee will, from among themselves and those subscribing, select the first ordinary directors of the Company.

Prospectuses, with estimates and extracts from authorities, and forms of applications for shares, may be obtained at the offices of the Company, or from the sharebrokers.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF MISS CORNELIA KNIGHT,
LADY COMPANION TO THE PRINCESS CHARLOTTE OF WALES.

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"We can heartily recommend the entire work to our readers as one of the most curious and authentic disclosures of State affairs in this country, and one of the most interesting and graphic journals of travel which the literary world has for a long time been called upon to notice."—Press, June 22, 1861.

"Before concluding a notice of a very pleasant book which, while it is full of what may be called private history, contains no prurient, scandalous, or positively frivolous gossip, it should be stated that the materials from which it has been compiled were placed by the family into whose possession they passed on Miss Knight's death into the hands of Mr. J. W. Kaye, who undertook the office of editing the work. Mr. Kaye, however, states that his time was so much engrossed by other occupations, that he knows not when these volumes might have been prepared for the press if it had not been for the assistance very cordially rendered by his friend Mr. James Hutton, of whose intimate acquaintance with the social history of the Georgian Era no better proof could be afforded than that which speaks out from his interesting volume on English Life, 'A Hundred Years Ago.' To that gentleman is to be assigned the main part of the credit of editing the work, and there are evident marks of a successful struggle with that most trying of all editorial difficulties—a superabundance of materials. Much intelligence, industry, and care have been bestowed upon the production of the book, and such literary conscientiousness will, no doubt, meet with its reward in the public favour."—Illustrated London News, June 22, 1861.

"The matters which will secure popularity for the Autobiography are those which resuscitate the stories that excited the curiosity of our forefathers, and made them invent other scandals, scarcely any one of which, fiction as they were, exhibited half the strangeness of the facts themselves, as they are now recorded."—Bell's Messenger, June 15, 1861.

"Our authoress writes clearly and sensibly, and will, we think, be found, on the whole, a much more amusing and agreeable companion than Madame d'Arolay."—Daily Review, July 1, 1861.

"The work of an acute and sensible woman of the world, a woman with a good head and a good heart. It does not, like the late Lady Charlotte Bury's 'memoirs,' deal with matters of scandal and of passing notoriety, nor does it bring forward into ill-natured prominence the weak points of dukes and duchesses of fifty years ago. We perceive in the entire two volumes not a single prurient or indelicate passage (a great thing to say of a work which treats of the court of the Regency), but attempts, like equity itself, to put the best possible construction upon events as they arise."—Universal News, July 6.

"Emphatically a readable book is this autobiography. Indeed, having once opened it, the reader cannot easily lay it aside until he has got through the whole. Not the least interesting part is the collection of miscellaneous anecdotes of persons and events which are clustered together as a sort of appendix at the close. It is a book fit to be read, but fit also for something better than a casual reading; worthy of a higher repute than an evanescent popularity, merely founded upon the great names it introduces, and the amusing scraps of gossip it contains."—Morning Star, July 22, 1861.

"Of the popularity of these volumes, on account of their historical as well as gossiping merits, there can be no doubt whatever."—Athenæum, June 8, 1861.

"The journal of a clever and lady-like woman, who saw many men and many cities, and whose testimony is not heightened by the warmth of too lively an imagination, nor blackened by the tints of malice, must be—what we have found it to be—unusually interesting reading. It is, moreover, put before us in a form which must be considered exceedingly creditable to its publishers, and to those to whom they have entrusted it. Due editorial care, and a proper judgment in selection and annotation, are so extremely uncommon among those who generally prepare books of this class for the public, that we feel bound to express our cordial thanks to Mr. Kaye and his coadjutor, Mr. James Hutton, for the complete, and, at the same time, unobtrusive fashion in which they have performed their task. A short foot-note is applied to all names, with regard to which a reader of the present day is likely to feel curiosity; and where the Autobiographer refers to published books, their full title is given. In these and all similar points nothing is left to be desired by the most lazy or ignorant of readers."—Spectator, June 22, 1861.

"These volumes will be read in every country seat, at every watering place, this autumn. They are fresh; full of most attractive anecdotes and interesting revelations. Miss Knight, whose anecdote books and journals have supplied these two handsome volumes, was Lady Companion to poor Princess Charlotte: she was an observant and shrewd woman of the world, also. Among the great people who were her constant companions, she appears to have been an inveterate collector of lively anecdotes. Her learning and womanly accomplishments secured her the brilliant position she held. In Mr. James Hutton the 'far-famed Cornelia Knight' has found a most discreet and accomplished editor."—Weekly Newspaper, June 16, 1861.

"These are highly interesting volumes. . . . There is hardly a page of the pleasant memoirs now published of this remarkable woman that will not be read with interest, but the attention of every reader will of course be most strongly directed to those passages of the work which serve to throw an additional light upon the relationship that existed between the Princess Charlotte and her unfeeling father and unhappy mother during the brief but eventful period of eighteen months—from January, 1813, to July, 1814—that Miss Knight retained her office of lady companion. No one will rise from the perusal of that part of the work without a feeling of the deepest sympathy for the persecuted—and, as it would seem, systematically tortured—Princess; and of the warmest indignation at the unmanly spitefulness, not to say absolute malignity of the father's treatment of the generous, noble-hearted child. Miss Knight, speaking in the fullness of the knowledge derived from her confidential position in the princess's household, more than confirms what has been previously asserted of the prince's cruelty; and presents us with a picture of royal littleness in the father and of royal wretchedness in the daughter, such as we hope may never again be exhibited within the walls of an English palace."—Observer, June 30, 1861.

"The volumes are, indeed, a mine of anecdote."—Critic, June 22, 1861.

URGENT APPEAL.

THE DIRECTORS of the STRANGERS' HOME FOR ASIATICS having been permitted to attain, under most pressing pecuniary difficulties, the principal moral and social objects for which the Institution was established, in ameliorating the condition and alleviating the temporal and spiritual destitution of hundreds of helpless Asiatic and African Strangers, find themselves at the close of another year without sufficient Funds to meet the current expenses of the Institution.

The work has invariably been carried on with the strictest economy, and the Directors are thankful for the support they have hitherto received, but they do not consider themselves justified to borrow money to meet the current expenses of the Home, which amounts (including £250 interest on debt) to about £1,100 annually.

They therefore once more appeal to their friends, supporters, and the Public for Subscriptions or Donations, and would ask them, SHALL THE DOORS OF THE HOME BE CLOSED through the insufficiency of pecuniary aid, or because, under temporary circumstances, the number of inmates in the Home are insufficient to render the Institution self-supporting?—Shall the metropolis of Christian England again subject itself to the reproach, that Oriental strangers visiting her shores, find a reception worse than that in a heathen land—no friend, no Christian sympathy—nothing to prove we value the immense blessing the Gospel of the Lord Christ has given to us?—Shall the streets of the metropolis once more be inundated with Eastern mendicants?—Shall the jails, workhouses, and hospitals be again unnecessarily occupied by Asiatics?—Shall the labours of the last four years be thrown away, and the work suspended?—Shall Christian sympathy, assistance, and advice no longer be shown or given to helpless strangers?—Rather is it not imperative on the Directors to continue their appeal to the public for funds to carry on a work which has been such a blessing to hundreds, and acknowledged by the philanthropist and Christian to be both needful, useful, and advantageous in all its objects?

The Directors cannot believe that the public will permit their labours to be suspended, or the Home closed, and casting all their difficulties on Him from whom they have received such tokens of favour, would go on in faith, earnestly pleading with all into whose hands this paper may fall that each one will provide his share of the means wanting for carrying on the work.

MR. EPHRAIM MOSELY'S IMPROVEMENT in the CONSTRUCTION of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES, on an INDIA-RUBBER BASE, are secured by Letters Patent, dated December, 1852, whereby the continual outlay of new teeth is avoided, alterations from the absorption of the gums, or any other cause, being easily remedied, and the first outlay no greater than for ordinary kinds. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted as under:—It consists of one continuous piece of Prepared India-rubber. The Artificial Teeth present a uniformly even surface to the action of the tongue, preventing lodgment of food and all secretions, so much complained of in the present system. No gold or any other metal being required, all springs, wires, and fastenings are wholly unnecessary; sharp edges are avoided, a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity hitherto wholly unattainable, and a fit perfected with the most unerring accuracy, are secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums. The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the prepared india-rubber; and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may be retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being at the same time provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

This Company is formed to meet the urgent demand for the immediate establishment of a line of steamers by the Overland Route, to carry passengers and cargo, at the lowest possible rates.

For several years there has been a constant demand for increased accommodation by the Overland Route, and within the last twelve months so unceasing has been this demand, that hardly a mail arrives without bringing Indian newspapers urging the necessity for more steam accommodation, both for passengers and freight, promising any company that may start a line the warmest support of the Indian public.

The necessity for such increased accommodation cannot be more fully shown than by the fact that the steamers of the only existing company, even at the present high rate of passage-money, are frequently so crowded that that company are compelled to put on extra vessels, and even then passengers are obliged to secure their berths for some months beforehand; this has forced many persons, against their wish, to take the long sea voyage via the Cape.

A great demand exists also for additional freight accommodation. The present Company's vessels are so fully engaged, and have such a limited amount of stowage, that all cargo is shut out but such as can pay the high rates now charged. This necessarily causes an immense quantity of goods to be conveyed by sailing vessels round the Cape, which under more favourable circumstances would be sent overland, as shippers would only be too ready to avail themselves of the speedier and more regular transit, particularly for goods subject to deterioration by a long sea voyage.

The want of second-class accommodation by the Overland route is felt by all classes of men in India and China. The merchant, the railway authorities, the planters, and traders, each have their assistants, whom they are obliged to indent for annually on the mother country, and all these classes (especially those desirous of promoting the cultivation of cotton and tea in our Indian empire) are largely interested in supporting a company which will provide for this necessity.

In consequence of the amalgamation of the Queen's and Indian armies, a constant relief of those forces will take place, and it is reasonably assumed that were facilities for the speedy and economical transit of troops offered, the Government would readily avail themselves of it, and the ships of the British and Eastern Steam Navigation Company would thus find a great, continued, and profitable source of employment.

Every additional and improved means of intercourse with British India must materially tend to promote the prosperity of that Empire; and as the railroads are rapidly opening out the internal resources of the country, the greater need is there for additional means of bringing the produce of her wealth home, and of introducing her goods and manufactures. This will ensure a large supply of freight both ways, at highly remunerative rates. It is, therefore, palpable that all parties connected with Indian Railways have a direct interest in giving their influence and support to this undertaking.

The Company purpose building fast and powerful vessels well fitted for passengers, and capable of large carrying powers, to sail for Madras and Calcutta, with branches to Bombay, Karachi, and China; the opening out of the North-West Provinces by the steam flotillas on the Indus and the railroads, of which Karachi is at present the terminus, necessitating that such an important port should have direct and speedy communication with England.

The vessels on the Indian side will all be fitted to consume Indian coal, which is of course considerably cheaper and but little inferior to English coal in point of efficiency; by this arrangement an enormous saving in the cost of a most important item of expenditure will be effected, and by economy in the management of the Company will, without sacrificing either efficiency or comfort, carry passengers, freight, and parcels, at greatly reduced rates, passengers being provided with a liberal table exclusive of wines, spirits, or beer; and in their cabin accommodation crowding will be avoided, thorough ventilation ensured, and the comfort and convenience of all specially studied. The Company will supply wines, &c., of the best quality, and at moderate charges, to those requiring them.

That a steam fleet can be profitably worked is evident by the great success which has attended all well-conducted private steam-ship enterprises in this country, in India, and in China.

The Company are confident that the public will support an enterprise, the necessity for which is every day more apparent, and the success of which is of such paramount importance to the free development of the vast resources of our Indian Empire. From estimates carefully prepared of the cost and maintenance of the fleet and establishments, examined by the most competent authorities, and from the calculations of returns based on the numbers of passengers, and quantity of freight and specie that may be relied on to go by the Overland Route at reduced rates, the Directors have the fullest confidence that very large dividends will be realised on the capital embarked.

Applications for Shares may be made to the Directors, at the Office of the Company, or to any of the Agents of the Company abroad.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Calcutta Mail of the 24th December has been to all intents and purposes anticipated by the last mail from Bombay. Another trifling disturbance is reported from Assam, though this time it is the neighbouring hill tribe of the Abors who have been guilty of breaking the peace. A small band of these barbarians appears to have crossed the Burrumpootra on the 1st of December, and, falling suddenly upon a village only a few miles distant from Debrooghur, to have murdered three men, five women, and four children, besides maltreating a good many more of the defenceless inhabitants. The motive assigned for this outrage is the desire to avenge the death of an Abor who lately died in jail, into which he had been thrown for spearing a Bunniah to death in the course of a dispute. Measures have, of course, been taken to exact retribution for this savage outbreak, and to prevent the recurrence of similar attacks for the future.

An epidemic of the typhoid type has committed great ravages in the Hooghly district and in Baraset. Whole families have been carried off, and in one populous village four hundred persons perished within two months. The mortality was undoubtedly augmented by the absence of medicines and medical attendance, and in consequence the British Indian Association have petitioned the Lieutenant-governor to send the necessary remedies, with a sufficient number of sub-assistant surgeons, to the relief of the sufferers.

We publish elsewhere the rules of procedure regarding the sale of waste lands in the North-West Provinces. A similar set has been issued by the Chief Commissioner of Oude.

Sir Charles Wood's retirement scheme has been scarcely so successful as might fairly have been expected. Only 247 names have yet been sent in, and these comprise 37 captains of twenty-five years' service. Bengal furnishes 98 field officers and 19 captains; Madras and Bombay respectively 81 and 31 field officers, and between them 19 captains.

The Delhi prize money is at last being distributed, but grievous will be the disappointment of its recipients. Each share in the first distribution is valued at 86 rupees, so that a Major General (76) will receive only £653. 12s.; a Brigadier (51), £438. 12s.; a Colonel or Lieutenant Colonel (17), £146. 4s.; a Major (16), £137. 12s.; a Surgeon (15), £129; a Paymaster (12½), £107. 10s.; a Captain (12), £103. 4s.; an Adjutant. Assistant Surgeon, Interpreter and Quarter Master (10), £86; a Riding Master (9), £77. 8s.; a Lieutenant over 7 years (7½), £64. 10s.—under 7 years (6½), £55. 18s.; a Quarter Master (6½), £55. 18s.; and an Ensign (5½), £47. 6s.

The Commander-in-Chief is described as causing an unpleasant excitement in military circles by the severity of his "wiggings," without respect of rank or person. He has summarily removed from their commands Brigadier Denniss at Delhi and Brigadier Ferryman at Lahore, because—so it is stated—of their neglect to visit the hospitals during the prevalence of cholera.

Sir Hope Grant, Commander-in-Chief in the Madras Presidency, reached his destination on the 26th December. He landed on the same day, and was sworn in under the usual salute.

The Madras papers complain of Sir William Denison's absence from the Presidency town in much the same way that the correspondents of London journals object to Lord Cowley's preference for Chantilly to the Embassy Hotel, in the Rue St. Honoré. It seems that on the occasion of a recent visit to Madras of the First Prince of Travancore, the Governor contented himself with conferring on his Royal Highness the dignity of a Fellow of the University. Fortunately, however, for the national reputation for hospitality a British merchant, Mr. Vans Agnew, of the firm of Arbuthnot and Co., took upon himself to make up for his Excellency's shortcomings, and gave a fete in honour of the Prince, which is likely to be the talk of Madras society for many a year to come.

The news from China is extremely gratifying, so far as it relates to the friendly relations existing between the Peking Government and the ministers of European countries. In Japan, too, the prospect is brightening, and a better understanding appears to have been brought about chiefly through Mr. Alcock's exertions.

In pursuance of the resolution of the Home Government to discontinue the purchase of bills in India, and to meet its requirements by drafts from London on the Indian Treasuries, sealed tenders will be received at the chief cashier's office, at the Bank of England, up to one o'clock on the 1st of February, March, and April next, for bills of exchange, payable on demand, to be drawn on the several Governments in India, at Calcutta, Madras, or Bombay, for sums not to exceed Rs. 40,00,000 in each month, of which not more than Rs. 10,00,000 in each month will be drawn on the Government of Madras, and the same sum on that of Bombay. For further particulars we refer to our advertisement columns.

In the same department of the present number of this journal will be seen the outline of an admirable scheme for converting the late East India College at Haileybury into a first-rate school on the plan of the collegiate establishments at Marlborough and Rossall. There is certainly an excellent opening for a public school of this description, where education of the highest order will be obtainable for little more than is now paid at a commercial academy. It might not be amiss, perhaps, if, in conformity with the traditions of the place, especial attention were paid to the training of youths for an Indian career. In any case we heartily wish success to the contemplated enterprise.

BENGAL.

COLONEL BAIRD SMITH.

In proportion to their numbers probably no corps in the world have produced so many distinguished men as the Indian engineers. To the scientific training of its officers, always the intellectual elite of the army, has been given the boundless career which only the East affords. In Bengal, in Madras, and Bombay, the engineers have not only constructed works more gigantic in their extent and beneficial in their results on the well-being of the people than are to be found elsewhere; not only have undertaken the defence or the capture of fortresses and cities in circumstances that almost defied science and courted despair; but have given to the civil administration of the country some of its highest and most valuable officials. Colonel Baird Smith, whose premature death India deploras, was not only as much distinguished as a soldier and engineer as any of his contemporaries or predecessors, but manifested a versatility of mind, and a grasp of the most difficult social and political questions, which few possessed. Not forty-five years of age, had he been spared to return to India with increased powers and enlarged experience, there is no position open to an Indian official to which he could not have aspired, none which he would not have adorned. The son of a country doctor in Lasswade, a village whose beauty Christopher North has immortalised in his writings, Baird Smith presents to the youth of England one of the most striking of those examples in which India abounds, of the truth that ability, united with stern rectitude, untiring industry and self-conscious modesty, may grasp the highest honours, and leave its mark on all time in the improvement of the human race.

Baird Smith's Indian career, thus prematurely cut short, extends over a quarter of a century. Attached at first to the Madras engineers, he exchanged into the Bengal corps, and till the first Sikh war was employed in the Canal administration of the North-Western Provinces under Sir Proby Cautley. There he acquired a knowledge of tenures, and an experience in questions of irrigation, which he extended by a study of the great works of Northern Italy during his furlough to Europe, and on his return by a visit to the deltas. Southern India where Sir A. Cotton had won his greatest triumphs. The results of his study of both he published in volumes which are the standard authorities on the subject. His extended knowledge he brought to bear on the completion and administration of the Ganges Canal, and in the superintendence of the whole irrigation system of the North-West he succeeded his great master. Hardly were the mutiny campaigns at an end when he was rewarded with the equally easy and dignified post of Master of the Calcutta Mint. The early signs of coming famine had no sooner appeared than his intimate knowledge of the districts likely to be affected and of the principles involved led him with singular prescience to predict its extent, and suggest remedies for its mitigation. Not quite a year ago in the columns of this journal he wrote that remarkable paper "The Famine and its Palliatives," which was adopted by the Calcutta Committee as their appeal, and roused England to its generous effort for relief. How little he spared himself during his tour in the afflicted districts in the heats and rains of so severe a season, his reports show. The disease under which he sank was fastened on him by exposure in tents to the rain. On the publication of his last and greatest report he sought rest and health in the quiet of Serampore. Perhaps his highest title to a niche in Indian history is that Report, to which India owes a fee-simple tenure, and to which the North-West will yet be indebted for a permanent settlement. The friend and admirer of Thomason, and trained up in the mistaken administrative system which was long that Governor's title to admiration, but collapsed with much else in 1857, Baird Smith's European experience and masculine intellect rejected its errors, and with reverent hand exposed its fallacies.

His professional reputation was only less, in our eyes, than his achievements as a practical political economist. In the Sutlej and Punjab campaigns, at Roorkee on the outbreak of the mutiny, and still more at the siege of Delhi, he was ever the foremost. In action as in administration, with the sword as with the pen, he was equally ready. On his return to Calcutta in 1858 he induced him to promise, for the pages of the Calcutta Review, a professional sketch of the capture of Delhi contrasted with the great sieges recorded in history. Lovingly he set to the work, and as it grew upon him he begged that he might be allowed to devote to it a book. He had, we believe, completed one-half of the task when the famine interfered, and he looked forward to his enforced visit to England for the leisure which would enable him worthily to complete his record of the greatest event in the military annals of India.

The son-in-law of De Quincey, of nothing did he delight to talk more than the life and works of the most exquisite writer of English since Goldsmith. Much read and much travelled in Europe, America and the East, his powers of conversation were most extensive, though from his modesty and desire to learn as well as to teach he did not always do himself justice. Whether as the friend, the soldier, or the thinker, it will be long ere Baird Smith is forgotten. His widow and family when, on their arrival, they learn the sad news of their loss, will find consolation in the fact that India mourns with them.—Friend of India.

REGIMENTAL WORKSHOPS.

Considering what vitally important matters the welfare of the British Army, and the social and moral improvement of our soldiers, are nowadays, and must increasingly continue to be, it is not enough that the public press should support and keep before the eyes of the community any measures or undertakings having these objects in view. It is the duty of the Government, which represents the public as owners of that army, also to lend its most active aid to every undertaking having a tendency to forward those most desirable ends. The morale of every army in Europe has immensely improved in our times, and is continuing to improve with every passing year; and the British soldier should not, in these our days of advanced civilization, be neglected and left to lag behind by his Government and his country.

The brutal system of discipline, with stick and lash, which once prevailed in the great Continental armies, is now obsolete, gone by and only remembered with abhorrence and contempt as an attribute of military government and command. And we hope that the day is not far distant when, by the application of civilising influences, and measures of humane improvement and amelioration, the lash and other degrading punishments in the British army will fall into the same desuetude. To effect this important object, the public and the Government ought to bring all their encouragement and their power to bear; never losing sight of the truth, happily fully recognized in our days, that the better the man the better the soldier; and, consequently, the safer the interests of the Commonwealth, and the more grand and elevated the aspect and the power of our country. We make these remarks with reference to the endeavour, now, we are glad to say, beyond the experimental stage, to found in our British corps in this country regimental workshops, and to establish them as solid and permanent institutions, which shall exist prosperously after the reign of their founder, the present Commander-in-Chief, shall be at an end, and through the commands of all his successors as long as India is ours. We should say a few words as regards the past working and present condition of these institutions, adding a suggestion which, if acted upon, will give the finishing stroke to their solidity and prosperity. The work done, and the articles turned out in the regimental workshops, are dearer, as they are better, than native work and productions; but, as is known to our countrymen in all trades, the European customer will not always, perhaps we might even say, will not generally, take the best and the dearest articles; preferring that which, though apparently cheaper at first, is, from its intrinsic inferiority, very much the most costly in the end. To meet this difficulty arising from native competition, we would suggest that an agency be established for the importation into India of all the European or other foreign material required for the regimental workshops; and that all articles, destined bona fide for those institutions be admitted duty free; Government also facilitating, as far as it is in its power, the carriage of the imported stock at the cheapest possible rates, if not gratis, to its different destinations. It may be objected that this would be a partial and unjust interference with free trade and equal competition, and unjust to the native workman and producer. To this we answer that the case is an exceptional one; that the object is not of mere profit, but is a humane and civilised one, whose success is of the highest and most vital importance to the army, to the Government, and to the public, and ought to be attained at any cost. Time and labour are cheap to the Native; we would make the matériel as cheap as possible to the European; and so make the competition somewhat fair and equal. Government allows a large drawback upon wines and spirits for officers to drink at mess, and "the trade" does not complain; and if it will allow a similar drawback upon matériel for the regimental workshops in India, to keep the soldiers in its employ, which means in employ of the public, out of the canteens, and orderly and guard-rooms, and cells, and prisons, no section of the community is justified in uttering a word of objection or dissent. The character of the nation is concerned in the full and thorough success of the project which we are now noticing, and of similar endeavours to elevate the character of the British soldier, and make him a useful and a happy man, and it is for the interest of all that the possibility of any thing like failure should be thoroughly guarded against and averted. The end in view is just as much one of humanity and benevolence as is that of any charity or other laudable undertaking brought before the public for sympathy and support, whilst its success is of infinitely more importance to the general community than is that of any other object now, or for a very long time past, presented to general notice. We would suggest that regimental workshops and agencies should be established at each of the three presidencies, for the importation of the matériel required for those institutions; that there be an office of accounts at each of those agencies in connection with all the British regiments up country; that the entire system of regimental workshops as at present existing be solidified and brought under a supervising and governing control in each presidency; and that the Government, acting in the interests of the public, admit all importations for those institutions to pass the Customs duty free. Even as matters now stand, we have no fear of the failure of our regimental workshops; but if the Government will, in a spirit of enlightenment and wisdom, adopt and improve upon the suggestion we have here made for their benefit, we shall look upon their permanent prosperity as secured.—Englishman.

HORSES AND THE INDIAN CAVALRY.

Colonel Balfour, Chief of the Military Finance Department, ought to be the happiest official in India. True, since Lord Canning began to govern according to public opinion, no one has been so much abused. But he has also been most successful in saving the purse of the taxpayer, and in simplifying the details of military administration, while the abuse with which he has been honoured is very much less than he might have been led to expect from his very invidious duties. He has brought down upon himself not only individuals and departments, but presidencies. But in spite of them all he has gained a series of victories for economy and efficiency over waste and idleness, which are far more than sufficient to atone for his only fault. That fault has made him more enemies than his stern reductions. He writes not too much but too long. Is it necessary to warn the Commissariat that he pays too high for potatoes?—the warning is spread over pages of foolscap, which treat of all subjects, from punkah fringes to the expenditure on a campaign. The truth is, Colonel Balfour is so full of information that it runs forth from him like a stream. Potatoes suggest soldiers' gardens, soldiers' gardens suggest barracks, barracks lead to the cost of their furniture, and the furniture is associated with the department which bought it, till the original subject is overlaid and lost sight of. All this, with its necessary attendant of want of brevity, has leagued against him personally a phalanx of opponents. But on public grounds we do not regret it. His panoply of facts and dour iron-heartedness have reduced our military expenditure to twelve millions. He deserves a civic crown from India and from England, and he will get it if he helps Mr. Laing next April, not only to declare a surplus, but to add a million to our outlay on roads and canals.

Perhaps the most wasteful of the minor branches of military expenditure was the studs from which the Indian army is supplied with horses. Financial reform was introduced into them by Mr. Kellner some time ago, but last March it was found that, while in England the number of the horses of a cavalry regiment is below the effective strength of the men, in India it has always been above. Sir W. Mansfield deserves the credit of having first reduced the number of horses 10 per cent. below the effective strength of the men. The experiment succeeded so well that the percentage of reduction was made fifteen for all India. It is a curious fact, and one that says much for the superior morality of the horses who are not endowed with free will, that where a large number of men are sick in every corps there is always a small number of horses relatively unfit for duty. Of the 2,727 cavalry soldiers in the four corps in Bengal in July last, 190 were sick and 17 in prison, while of 2,490 horses only 6 were sick. Experience since March has shown that where regiments are kept with horses even 20 per cent. below the number of men, there are more horses than really effective men to mount them.

The carrying out of this 15 per cent. reduction order has set free 2,280 horses, which are available as remounts. It will thus be henceforth unnecessary to import either Arab or colonial horses, and the studs may be maintained at diminished strength and expense. The Home authorities have determined to send out twenty of the best English stallions annually, and it is probable that the stallion brood stud at Hissar will be revived, supplying the blood cross in the first instance by these thorough-bred English stallions. The decline of that establishment Colonel Apperley ascribes to the use of Arab stallions, which, as a rule, do not give their stock their own bone. Irrespective of the 2,280 supernumerary horses, the Bengal studs, it is calculated, will yield 3,000 remounts for next year. We shall have thus in Bengal alone 5,280 horses to meet a demand of only 1,573, the number likely to be cast this year and the next. There are few of our military readers who have not made "great bargains" at those indiscriminate sales of cast Government horses which take place every October. It has been hitherto forgotten that a horse which is not fit for a cavalry corps may be well suited for a battery. This year, owing to the famine, many horses have been reduced very low by bad feeding, which with a few months' care in a stud depot would prove admirable remounts. It should not be left to annual committees to cast horses without strict supervision. As the studs of Bengal at present stand they will annually yield 1,200 remounts to meet a demand of 1,000, while there is still the surplus of this year, amounting to 2,280. It is evident in this case that Bengal should supply the requirements of the other presidencies. It is absurd that the Bombay army should be purchasing largely while Bengal is overstocked. An order should at once be given to suspend all purchase of horses for the State throughout India. The Military Finance Department should obtain an accurate statement of the wants of all the presidencies. If there is a surplus in one let it be sent to another, so that the disgrace may not be perpetrated, as has been the case for the last twelve months, of paying Rs. 800 for each Arab at Bombay, while colonial horses imported during the mutiny at Rs. 1,000 each are sold at fifty rupees by annual committees.

The supply of horses must depend mainly on the strength of our European cavalry. On 1st July last the four British cavalry corps in Bengal, and the three which were formed out of the five Bengal corps, exclusive of the Lahore Light Horse, had a total strength of 4,000 men, or 1,200 more than in 1858, when cavalry was so urgently required. The 2nd Dragoon Guards were under orders to return to England this season, which would have reduced the excess to 615. But now, it is said, they are directed to stand fast, and the three new corps of Hussars will probably be increased to 585, the strength fixed for service in India. This burdens India with an extra charge of just £100,000 at a time when roads are so urgently wanted to send the cotton to the seaboard. We continue to protest against this injustice, only in the hope that Manchester, next session of Parliament, may be led to see how intimately it affects her prospects of getting cotton. But even that hope is faint.—Friend of India.

THE LABOUR DIFFICULTY—HOW TO UTILISE THE CONVICTS.

The only real difficulty that now impedes the path of the settler in India is that to which we have so often drawn attention—the want of labour. Queensland is about to come into the Indian market as another purchaser. It is true Government should not interfere to prevent the coolie from going where he can earn the best wages; but Government ought not to hold out any inducements to him to leave his native country, and should interfere to prevent that system of immoral crimping in the interior by which coolies are beguiled, almost like slaves, under false pretences, to come down to the baracoons at the presidencies. With this exception we would reiterate to the landholders of India the sensible advice of Mr. Laing:—"Organise internal emigration schemes, and come before the Government with well-considered practical measures by which the coolie may be transplanted as a free labourer, with due protection, sanitary and otherwise, from places where labour is redundant to places where it is deficient, and you may depend upon it that the Government of India will not object to see Assam converted into a second Ceylon or Mauritius."

But there is a way in which the State may at once supply the sparsely populated districts with labour, add a considerable income to the Exchequer, turn abandoned criminals into thriving agriculturists, and free the plains of India of that political danger which was so keenly felt in 1857, when the jails gave forth their budmashes to massacre and plunder. Can no plan be devised by which all convicts in India may be utilised either for great public works, or by hiring them out to private landholders? It was in this way that Rome constructed many of those aqueducts, the gigantic ruins of which are to this day the wonder of the traveller. The great pier of Syracuse, and the public buildings of that city, were erected by convicts who were employed in the stone quarries of Sicily. For centuries Europe was covered with prisons, the abode and the school of every vice; but it was not till the silent system of America collapsed that labour was practically recognised as a corrective as well as a punishment for prisoners. The magnificent breakwater at Portland has been since then constructed by convicts so as to shelter an area of one thousand two hundred miles, the value of each prisoner's work amounting to £34 a year. At Portsmouth and Chatham the dockyards have been filled with industrious prisoners, and the barren wastes of Dartmoor have been made smiling farms. Convicts were in almost every case the pioneers of our southern colonies. At this day Western Australia is beseeching England to send her more than she has already, otherwise she too must indent on India for coolies. It is true the colonies, with this exception, have refused to receive any more of the criminal population of England. But the real reason of this refusal is the best testimony to the value of convict labour when utilised under proper supervision. It was found so difficult to secure honest and intelligent guards for the convicts that they were allowed to idle away their time very much as Indian prisoners do under their burkundazes. Money was spent, roads and bridges were not forthcoming, and the colonists declared against convict labour. Wherever in Australia the convicts were hired out to private farmers, the experiment was a success.

From the very imperfect and sometimes inaccurate reports on Indian gaols, issued from time to time, we have compiled the following table, which shows the number of convicts on any given day in the gaols of India, their annual cost and the value of their so-called labour. The results may be relied on as nearly correct, for Indian statistics can never be entirely trusted. Bombay has not for four years condescended to state the number of either gaols or prisoners in the annual administration reports. In the cost some reports include establishment, others do not. In the value of the labour some include that on outdoor works, such as roads, others do not.

Thus it is generally true that on any given day in India there are 63,000 criminals in some 200 gaols costing the State, if we deduct the value of their so-called labour, at the very least thirty rupees each per annum all over the country. We pay every year not less than £200,000 for feeding, clothing, and guarding convicts. Port Blair is not included. There 2,250 convicts are usefully employed in civilising the Andaman Islands, and there ultimately we would recommend that European convicts be sent. Several of the Europeans in the Calcutta gaol have asked to be sent there, but at present it is illegal to do so.

How is this expenditure to be transferred to the side of profit, and the large proportion of these 63,000—say 50,000—who are not women or short-term prisoners, to be utilised for the benefit of the State on public works, and of the landholder in Assam, the Kohistan, Central India, and the Wynaad? Our plan is this. Remove all central jails to the uncultivated districts—planting, for Bengal, one in Assam and one in Hazareebaugh; for the North-Western and Central Provinces, one in Central India and one in Almorah; for the Punjab, one in Kangra; for Madras, one in Madura and one in the Wynaad; and for Bombay, one or two where settlers may most congregate. All prisoners sentenced to more than one year's imprisonment and less than seven, should be sent to these labour depots, the seven years' convicts being reserved for the Andamans and the one year's kept in district jails. Each labour jail should be subject in all respects to military law. The convicts could then be hired out to the settlers as those of Australia were to the sheep-farmers, until the expiry of their term of service. When that took place it would not be difficult to induce them to settle as tenants or artisans, and thus permanently add to the population. Should all not be thus employed, or should the State find it advisable to use convicts in the construction of those public works for which the outlying districts clamour, a certain proportion might be worked in gangs, under European supervision and subject to military law. Or, the settlers would be willing to contract for such works at a cheap rate, convict labour being assigned them. There is no fear that the convicts would not thrive in such provinces as Assam, and a large proportion, if well clothed and fed, might enjoy good health in the hills.

The moral result of such a plan as this would be, the conversion of criminals into honest men, at a distance from the scene of their former villainies and temptations. The material benefit consists in the conversion of such howling wastes as are now offered to purchasers into smiling gardens. And the political value of such a scheme is evident in the removal from the plains, from the centres of population, of the whole criminal class, who in 1857 burst their prison houses and revenged themselves on their defenceless masters.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

AT LAST.—The long-deferred payment of the Delhi prize money is announced. "The Governor-general in Council is pleased to authorise the immediate issue of a first distribution of the Delhi prize booty at the rate of Rs. 86 each. Bills in duplicate for the amount of the shares are to be sent to the General Prize Committee, Calcutta, by whom they will be passed for payment by district paymasters." This is welcome news to the patient expectants.

MR. HUME'S SCHOOL AT ETAWAH.—The People's Friend, says Sir Charles Wood, has sanctioned a grant of Rs. 10,000 for completing the High School building, begun by Mr. A. Hume at Etawah, and a monthly grant of Rs. 600. Of all district officers in India Mr. Hume has done most for education, especially by his Hukabundi Schools. His district of Etawah supports, without assistance, the High School with 282 pupils and 180 village schools. The liberal grant is a compliment to Mr. Hume, but is it in addition to the sum assigned for the whole schools of the North West?

THE CENTRAL PROVINCES.—Nothing, we (Friend of India) believe, will be more detrimental to the best interests of the greatest cotton province of India than the appointment of Colonel Elliot as Chief Commissioner, for the weak reason that it would have been contrary to official etiquette to have superceded him. Major Spence, it is said, is to be Commissioner of Nagpore, and Colonel Elliot has recommended Major Snow for another provincial Commissionership. Mr. Perkins, one of the best competition civilians in the Punjab, is likely to be Secretary to the Chief Commissioner, a really good appointment. Major Shakespeare, who has been Personal Assistant to Colonel Elliot, will become Deputy Commissioner of Chhindwarra. We trust that Colonel Balmain, who did so much for the Raichore Doab, will be put in a position in which his integrity, independence and ability may be of use. Mr. Temple will return immediately to Calcutta. The Central Provinces have been hitherto so grievously misgoverned, and have so great a future before them, that we are called on to watch narrowly the reputation of the men to whom their destinies are entrusted. On the whole subject of these appointments we shall have more to say next week. We regret that the wheat and cotton crops will fall below their average level. Though last monsoon was most plenteous, it came early, before the cultivators had sown their seed. There has not been a drop of rain in Nagpore since the beginning of September, and to add to the calamity there has been no dew. The people are beginning to complain of the famine prices of the necessities of life. The weavers, who are still a combined though a diminishing body of operatives, lately went in great numbers to the deputy commissioners to represent their distress.

KISSING GOES BY FAVOUR.—The Phoenix says the railway officials at Allahabad are about to prosecute two persons for attempting to kiss two ladies in a carriage while the train was on its way to Cawnpore. The penal code meets the offence. We know not what the existing law is, but a case of this kind in England was recently met by fining the scoundrel to the extent of nearly half his property. Some time ago the night-trains on this railway were so notorious that ladies dare not use them.

A NATIVE GENTLEMAN.—Lootf Ali is the eldest of the three sons of Meer Abdoolah, the most opulent and influential banker in Patna. His brothers were Kasim Ali (still living), and Mehdee Ali (deceased); Mehdee Ali's son is Wilayat Ali. At the time of Meer Abdoolah's death Lootf Ali was the darling of his mother. The whole personal property, consisting of "jewels, cash, and plate," were in the possession of the widow, and as Lootf Ali lived with her the possession of the old lady was the possession of Lootf Ali, and he has succeeded from 1847 to the present time in retaining the whole of these effects in his grasp. Two years previous to the suit just decided disputes and altercations were incessant between the members of the family; it was a matter of general notoriety that Lootf Ali had wrongfully withheld the personal property of his father, and many of the most respectable of the natives, and some of the authorities themselves, endeavoured, though in vain, to effect an amicable settlement. Wearied at last by the continual evasion of Lootf Ali, and hopeless of obtaining their rights, save under the authority of the law, Kasim Ali Khan and Wilayat Ali Khan at last filed their suit, the one for twelve, the other for eighteen lacs! The claim included their share of the personal effects left by Meer Abdoolah as well as of the capital and assets of the banks of which Lootf Ali had been the sole manager. To the astonishment even of the inveterate intriguers of Patna, Lootf Ali Khan in his defence alleged that the whole of Meer Abdoolah's personal effects amounted to only Rs. 20,000, and that these had been divided immediately after his death among the heirs; i. e., himself and his two brothers. In support of this monstrous falsehood he had the effrontery to produce a receipt in full, signed and sealed by himself, Kasim Ali, and Mehdee Ali. The direct witnesses to this important partition, of which no one in Patna had even heard a hint or a whisper before, were four men, one a jail bird, the others dependents of Lootf Ali himself; but not a single respectable man could he produce to say even that he had heard of such partition having been effected, while full, conclusive, and satisfactory evidence was adduced by the plaintiffs to the contrary. All Patna was aghast at the audacity of the defence; the idea of Meer Abdoolah's personal property being only Rs. 20,000 was in itself simply ludicrous, and the absurdity of a formal partition having been effected among the heirs of the principal and most wealthy family in Patna, and no single respectable man having ever even heard of it, was so monstrous, that the common saying throughout Patna was that Lootf Ali had lost his senses, and it was God's will that he should suffer. Quem Deus vult perdere, prius dementat, they would have said, had they known Latin. It must be remembered that every resident of Patna was cognizant of the former disputes; that several had interested themselves in endeavouring to effect a compromise; that Mr. Gough, and Mr. Tayler had both attempted to accomplish this object, and the latter had actually arbitrated on some minor matters, after an ineffectual effort to dispose of the great question of dispute, and that during all the discussions, disputes, and consultations neither Lootf Ali Khan, nor anyone connected with him, ever made the least allusion, the most distant hint, of any partition whatever having at any period of time taken place! This defence, absurd in itself, opposed to all reason and probability, incompatible with the acts, the words, and writings of Lootf Ali for the last eight or ten years, broke down ignominiously at the trial, being supported by the most miserable evidence, and rebutted by the most conclusive proofs. As a matter of course, plaintiffs have gained a decree in full, and this worshipful member of the Committee of Public Instruction, the honoured visitor of English officials, the colleague and co-operator in the instruction of the rising youth of Patna, is proved to have, for years, deliberately and systematically robbed his brother and nephews of their property (though himself rolling in wealth), and, when called to account before a court of justice, is shown to have set up an elaborate defence, in which every word is false, every witness a perjurer, and the principal document a palpable forgery! We recommend the case to the serious attention of the High Court, and can only express our regret that the judge who has bestowed such unwearied labour on the case, and given so complete, exhaustive, and admirable a judgment, did not follow up his conclusions to their logical result and commit Lootf Ali Khan and his witnesses to the Sessions Court on a charge of forgery, perjury, and subornation. We understand that Ameers Ali had, before this decree, himself discovered the real character of his quondam friend and client, and declined all further connection with him.—Englishman.

GENERAL ANNUITY FUND.—A meeting was held in Calcutta on the 11th December to organise a Family and General Pension and Annuity Fund of India. The Chairman, Mr. M. Wylie, explained to the meeting that the object of this scheme was to extend to the general public the benefits of the Uncovenanted Family Pension Fund. About ten years ago such a fund was started, but it was wound up after a year in consequence of the small number of subscribers that came forward. Col. Hannington said a large charity was exercised by the middle class in Calcutta to assist in supporting children left unprovided for, and that the absence of provision was in many cases owing to there being no such institution as was now proposed to be established. Mr. Finlaison, the actuary, is of opinion that the fund might safely start with fifty subscribers on adequate rates of premium. He is to send out the necessary tables when completed; in the mean time he had sent out instructions as to how the tables of the Uncovenanted Service Fund could be used till those in hand for this fund were ready.

THE POSITION OF COLONELS.—Some alarm has been caused by the General Order, No. 956 of 22nd October last. We (Friend of India) see no ground for fear. The second paragraph appears to be merely explanatory of the legitimate operation of existing Regulations if duly enforced, as they will be in future. Such senior officers as have, by special indulgence, since 1857, been allowed to reside away from their sphere of duty, whatever that duty may be, on private affairs or medical certificate, on full Indian allowances, are simply cautioned that henceforth the existing rules will be enforced, and that they will be "entitled to Indian allowances only for the period authorised by the Regulations." The position of full Colonels, it seems to us, will be precisely what it was before 1857.

AMALGAMATION OF THE EASTERN PROVINCES.—The steamer which left Calcutta on the 17th December, for Rangoon, has taken down orders for Colonel Phayre and Major Newmarch, of the Engineers, to come up to Calcutta by the first opportunity, as the Governor-General wishes to consult and arrange with them the final measures for the amalgamation of the Eastern Provinces, Pegu, Arracan, &c., which are to be governed in future by Colonel Phayre as Chief Commissioner. There is a strong, and in Burmah a valid, objection to this title; as, in official communication with the Court of Ava, it is inferior in dignity and importance to that of the Prime Minister of the King; and in Burmah great consideration is attached to these matters as between the dignitaries representing different Governments.

GALLANT CONDUCT OF AN OFFICER.—The Hurkaru records the death of Private William Crawford, 75th Regiment, by drowning at Dum-Dum, on Wednesday, December 18, under the following circumstances. It appears that deceased and a comrade went to bathe in a tank behind the musketry butts; on the cessation of the firing one of the men was heard calling for help. Lieutenant Dawson, the instructor of musketry, 75th Regiment, immediately hurried to the spot, and on being told a man had sunk, plunged in dressed as he was: unhappily, owing to the depth of the water, more than eighteen feet, his efforts were unavailing. It was not till two hours afterwards that the body was found. Deceased was buried on the next morning, followed by all the men of the detachment stationed at Dum-Dum, over whom a gloom has been cast by his untimely end.

JESSORE.—Mr. Bainbridge, the magistrate of Jessore, reports to Government that the October sowings of indigo appear to have passed off without any violent breach of the peace. "The sub-divisional officers of Magoorah and Jenida were ordered to submit weekly reports. Registers of decreed lands were made out, and a regular deputy magistrate deputed to each sub division to assist in preserving the peace." In one instance the ryots had sown a planter's own chur in kalai, but they said that as the planter, Mr. Stewart, was away at the time they did not know whether he intended to sow indigo and so sowed the chur, but that he might take the kalai. In two or three cases ryots have attempted to destroy by cattle indigo sown by other ryots, but none of them led to any breach of the peace. On the whole, the district has been as quiet as could be desired, and there have been much fewer disputes and much less disposition to violence shown than was expected. This is an official description.

DELHI, Dec. 12.—The most important just now of local interest is the summary removal of our Brigadier (Dennis) from his command, and the appointment of Colonel Abbott, of the artillery, to officiate until another is permanently appointed. I use the word permanently advisedly, because there is really nothing permanent in this transitory world; and as for staff appointments, they are just now about the most uncertain of all uncertainties. It is a fact that the Commander-in-Chief's march upwards has been marked by "wiggings" innumerable, mistakes not a few, and dismissals no end. The reason given for the removal of two brigadiers is that they, the ex-brigadiers, did not visit the barracks during the prevalence of cholera. Now, this may or may not be part of a brigadier's duty, but I should think it more the part of the commanding officer's, surgeon's, and chaplain's duties than the brigadier's, and I know many who labour under the same impression, erroneous though it be. At any rate there would have been no harm in issuing an order on the subject, had the head of the army deemed the measure a necessary one; and I cannot help thinking that there is something behind the cholera screen which the general public are not to behold. Colonel Clem Browne, Commissioner, vacates on the 15th or 16th, and Major Stuart Graham, Deputy Commissioner, officiates for Mr. Melville until that officer's arrival, which will be about the 23rd. The First Irregular Cavalry is expected here on the 20th. The head quarters will be located here, and not at Meerut, as was first intended. The 40th is expected shortly, and the 42nd Highlanders marching upwards will be here about the 17th or 18th, I am told. The survey of the Bullbugurh district is complete, and the establishment under Major Johnstone will now move to Jhugger, and thence to Laharoo, I am informed. Lady Montgomery is expected here on the 20th, en route to Lahore. Weather raw, cold, very little rain, and plenty wanted.—Englishman.

WORKING OF THE INCOME-TAX IN OUDE.—We (Hurkaru) now come to some startling revelations connected with the imposition and collection of the Income-tax. Lest we should be supposed guilty of misrepresentation, we shall quote Mr. Couper's words, the italics in the passage extracted being ours. "But it is the subject of universal representation that the returns were, as a rule, conspicuously and shamelessly false, and that, consequently, surcharge has been the rule, and the acceptance of returns the exception; the total number of surcharges is 58,253, as against 1,05,235 assessments made up to the 31st January, 1861. This shows the surcharges to amount to about 55 per cent." In other words, nearly every other individual in the North-Western Provinces who came under the operation of the tax was surcharged! "But," says Mr. Couper, "there are districts in which surcharges have risen to 80 or 90 per cent., or where, in other words, the returns have been altogether set aside, and the assessments made by the collector, have been made, so to speak, arbitrarily." This acknowledgment reveals a state of things which calls for the most serious attention of Government. If the returns made by the people were as reported, "conspicuously false," it only shows either that they have acted under the influence of a powerful, corrupt, and grasping amlah, or that a very large proportion of the people of the upper provinces are utterly without principle or honesty. In either case we can form but a melancholy estimate of the morality of the natives of the north-west. The silent patience with which they consent to dwell under an assessment of 90 per cent. over the sums for which they declared themselves liable is a very significant fact, and reflects painfully both on the morals of the Government and the people. That no individual either in England or India meets this tax with patience or complacency may be readily believed, and that attempts were made at home to mislead assessors is allowed, but anything equal to the wholesale rascality here revealed we never read or heard of. Collectors who assess "arbitrarily" have yet to learn the rudiments of their trade, and ought to be told, that of all taxes, this is one requiring the most patient and delicate manipulation.

PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS.—In the way of news it may be mentioned that the Governor-General has made an extra assignment of twelve lakhs, or £120,000, for expenditure during the current year, "in opening out facilities for the export trade of the country, and especially for export cotton trade." To this object the money now assigned is to be strictly confined. Bombay is to have three lakhs and a half; Nagpore, one and a quarter; Madras, Bengal, and the North-West Provinces, one and a half each; the Punjab, three-quarters of a lakh; Pegu, three-quarters; and Hyderabad, half a lakh. To Madras has also been assigned the one per cent. of the Income-tax which was reserved for public works. This amounts to about one lakh and sixty thousand rupees, and it is to be expended in opening up the River Godavary.

DARJEELING.—We hear from Darjeeling that the community there have resolved to have a special memorial as some token of their sincere respect for the memory of the late Countess Canning, who spent amongst them the last days of health and enjoyment. The local subscriptions are to be devoted to the purchase of the fittings for the new chancel about to be added by the Government to the church at Darjeeling, where the late countess last attended Divine service. This memorial is intended to be raised absolutely as a local one, by the residents in Darjeeling during November last only, without any intention of rivalry with, or depreciation of, any wider movement, but simply in recognition of those admirable qualities which engaged the genuine sympathies of all with whom Lady Canning was brought in contact, as she was with the then community of Darjeeling.

POLICE IN AMHERST AND MARTABAN.—The Englishman states that the Governor-general has sanctioned the number, allocation and cost of the police proposed for the districts of Amherst and Martaban, at a cost of Rs. 90,552 per annum for the former, and of Rs. 90,552 per annum for the latter. The above arrangements will remain in force till the end of 1862, subject to revision, if necessary, after that time. His Excellency, we learn, has also noticed with satisfaction that the whole of the new police arrangements in the Tenasserim and Martaban Provinces are to be completed within the limit of expenditure proposed by Mr. Temple and Colonel Bruce, in their report on British Burmah, viz., Rs. 316,080 per annum, with the exception only of travelling allowances.

ANNUAL ARTILLERY PRACTICE.—Practice with heavy ordnance is dispensed with at Jullundur and Agra. The battery recently at Muttra will not join at Agra, but will proceed to the destination assigned to it in the general relief. The two batteries at Bareilly will go through a course of annual practice with their own ordnance, terminating the practice at the expiration of two months. The battery of horse artillery now at Allahabad, and the battery of horse artillery now in progress from Meerut to Allahabad, will practice at Cawnpore, and at the conclusion of the practice will proceed to the destinations assigned to them.

THE LATE COLONEL BAIRD SMITH.—Extract from minutes of proceedings of the Committee of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, Wednesday, the 18th December, 1861:—"The Committee of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce have received the mournful intelligence of the death of Colonel Baird Smith with feelings of profound regret, and they deplore with unfeigned sorrow the termination of a life so valuable and a career of public usefulness thus early and prematurely brought to a close. They desire to record their admiration of the high reputation which Colonel Baird Smith established for himself by a rare combination of varied attainments, and by the unceasing application of an intellectual and scientific mind to objects and questions of national interest and importance. For the special service so recently rendered by him in the cause of commercial enterprise, the memory of Colonel Baird Smith will be ever gratefully cherished by all who have at heart the welfare and advancement of this country; and the committee, as representing the mercantile section of the community of this Presidency, mark their sense of the loss sustained by his untimely death by paying this tribute of respect and regret."

A CHAPLAIN has been appointed for the numerous European settlers in Sylhet, Cachar, and Cherapoonjee. The Rev. F. Hinde is gazetted.

RAID OF THE ABORS.—The Hurkaru publishes news from Assam:—"A body of the Abors managed to cross the Burrampooter on the 1st December, and fell upon a village not more than 16 miles from Debrooghur, and but a third of that distance from the Naga Ghoolee Tea factory. The poor Cacharees could of course make no resistance, and the savages slaughtered eight men and five women, besides wounding a much greater number." The commanding officer at once took steps for the security of the station. The reason of this inroad is said to be the death of an Abor in jail under suspicious circumstances. Our pretended allies, the Miris, assisted them in crossing the river. The last raid of the Abors was in 1858.

ODEYPORE.—Letters from Odeypore state that only one slave girl has performed suttee on the funeral pile of the late Maharana, and that Sumbhoo Singh, the late Rana's adopted son, has preferred a claim to the guddee.

MAJOR FERRIS has again come forward as a candidate for the post of retired home agent to the Bengal Military Fund, now held by Colonel Freeth, only pending the appointment of a successor.

LASSA.—Letters received from Lassa mention serious riots there, and the plunder of the Raja Lama's residence, who has collected troops and is acting on the defensive. The Sitthud Kajeer has been placed in confinement.

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE FIRST PRINCE OF TRAVANCORE AND THE MADRAS UNIVERSITY.—The nomination of his Highness Ramah Vurmah, the first Prince of Travancore, to a seat in the Senate of the Madras University, is not only a graceful and appropriate compliment to the most enlightened prince in India, but is also in strict accordance with the usage followed by the great Universities of Oxford and Cambridge. Few princes of royal blood are allowed to visit either of the English Universities without receiving the honour of a degree, and thus enrolling their names among the members of the Senate of those learned bodies; and this practice has been found to add dignity and lustre to the great academical institutions, whilst conferring a coveted honour upon the source of the greatest names in European history. In the case, however, of Ramah Vurmah and the Madras University, the admission of his Highness to the Senate is an act of something more than mere compliment and honour. The representative of the oldest Hindoo royal family in all India is at the same time as highly educated as an English gentleman, and is deeply imbued with the sentiments and political aspirations prevalent in Europe. He thus stands forward as the first of all the representatives of the Hindoo people in the Madras University; holding a position at once exalted and independent in the eyes of both Hindoos and Europeans; appreciating all the advantages of an English education, and anxious to see its benefits extended in a rational manner amongst the masses of his fellow countrymen. We, therefore, rejoice that the connection between his highness and the Madras University, which originated at the time when the prince was first educated by Madava Rao, should be further cemented by the enrolment of the name of Ramah Vurmah on the register of the Senate; and we have no doubt that the interest which is taken by his highness in the promotion of learning amongst the Hindoos, may be manifested in a way and to an extent which will ultimately prove highly beneficial to the great objects which the Senate has taken in hand.—Madras Athenæum.

BOMBAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MORTALITY OF BOMBAY.—The total number of deaths in Bombay during 1860 was 14,148, exclusive of still born, of which 7,769 were males and 6,379 females. This is 441 less than the preceding year. The number of deaths from cholera was 1,687, which is below the usual average. The proportion of deaths at the earlier ages contrasts favourably with London. The deaths of children under five years of age in London exceed those under six years of age in Bombay by seven per cent., and the disproportion is still greater at the earlier ages. In Bombay the proportion of male deaths between the ages of twenty and fifty is altogether excessive, being some times two to one of the female deaths. Mortuary statistics are very carefully noted in Bombay.

CRIME IN BOMBAY.—The police returns of Bombay for 1860 show an increase of 1,525 persons tried over the preceding year, the numbers being 21,906 and 20,377 respectively. In 1858, however, the number was 27,570. In 1860 there were 6,386 persons acquitted; 15,384 convicted by the magistrates, 101 by the supreme court, and 11 by the court of petty sessions. Only one was hanged. According to race the offenders were classed as follows:—13,174 Hindoos; 5,643 Mahomedans; 983 Parsees; 962 Indo-Britons and Native Christians; 934 Europeans; and 210 others. The largest number of female offenders, viz., 1,130, was from the Hindoo community. The number of European male offenders decreased from 1,424 in 1859 to 924 in 1860.

CHINA.

HONG KONG, Dec. 11.—The news for the past fortnight is of an encouraging kind, both as regards China and Japan. In the latter country both foreign and native officials are showing the most anxious desire to avoid every kind of hostile collision between the people of Japan and the traders from the West; and, in furtherance of this object rules of the most specific character have been framed by our Minister there for the guidance of English subjects at the various ports of trade. The Japanese question has, in Mr. Alcock's mind, reduced itself to a choice of two courses. He argues, in one of his ponderous circulars, that our object in Japan is to trade, and that we have before us the choice either of trading peacefully, or of doing so amid continual alarms and complications, which have been found to endanger our very residence in the country, and thereby to give a highly precarious character to our commercial relations with Japan. It is, he argues, when traders begin to be travellers that the popular hostility is evoked; and although he should gladly allow those under his protection both to trade and travel, he cannot do so any longer, having arrived at the conclusion that in Japan, as regards foreigners, the one is incompatible with the other. The strictest rules have accordingly been decreed by our consul for the confinement of all his countrymen within the limits of the various foreign settlements. Excursionists, sportsmen, and men of similar kidney, will therefore follow their favourite pursuits under most unusual difficulties, in order that every species of provocation may be taken out of the way, and such cases as that of Mr. Moss may not recur to harass the officials as this case is likely to harass Mr. Alcock unless a jury can be got to see it in the desired light. As regards excursions into the country producing feelings of resentment on the part of the Japanese people, Mr. Alcock has had more personal experience of that than any man in Japan, and certain other of the consuls have acquired a most unenviable notoriety by the scandalous incidents connected with their travels. The night attack upon the embassy at Yedo, after the overland journey from Nagasaki, is now generally read in this light.

Our advices from Peking are up to November 26th, at which date all was quiet, and the intercourse between the native and foreign authorities proceeding in a most satisfactory manner. There appears not the slightest reason to doubt the entire good faith of Prince Kung in his friendly foreign policy; and it is quite possible that, before the young Emperor attains his majority, a strong Government may rule in Peking over a peaceful land.

The intelligence from the Yang-tze river continues to be satisfactory; and at Hankow, the extreme port in the interior, all was going on smoothly according to the latest accounts. The steamboat traffic on the river promises an immense increase in the ensuing year.

The alarm caused by the proximity of the rebels to Shanghai has abated, and those dreaded bands have withdrawn without molesting the city; they were as near as three miles, and the smoke of burning townships and cottages that marks their movements was visible from Shanghai. But at Ningpo the panic arising from the same cause has not altogether abated; all who could had fled away, and by the last accounts the place was deserted. The foreign residents consider that they will not be molested, and most likely they are right; if nothing else secures them, the high position of Mr. Roberts in the rebel camp may act as a protection to their persons, if not to their goods.

The business that required the presence of Mr. Harry Parkes at Shanghai, just as he was on the point of embarking for England, has not yet transpired, but there is little doubt it has some connection with the rebels, and that he has proceeded to Nankin for the purpose of obtaining a thorough understanding with the chiefs as to the places in which Europeans are resident.

From the other ports we have no intelligence of importance.

CEYLON.

COLOMBO, Dec. 31.—During the fortnight we have had at Colombo the true north-east monsoon weather—keen cold nights and mornings and hot sunny days, with a drying wind for the whole period. In the Hills the weather has been more or less rainy, but the coffee has come briskly down, and has been rapidly prepared and shipped. The rush of bullock bandies laden with coffee across the bridge of boats at Colombo is something wonderful. As yet the figures which represent our exports show nothing of the great falling off in crop, which is undoubted. What coffee there is on the estates in the lower districts has been speedily sent down. When the three first months of the year are over, we shall be better able to appreciate the diminution of crop.

The exports in the fortnight do not fairly represent the shipments. Two vessels have sailed for London with 16,849 cwts. Plantation coffee and 4,604 Native; total, 21,453. One vessel for Sydney has taken 1,042 cwts. Plantation, and 475 Native; in all, 1,517. The addition thus made to our exports consists of 17,891 cwts. Plantation and 5,079 Native; the aggregate being 22,970 cwts.

Our exports continue to show a considerable increase on previous seasons—some 21,000 cwts. over last year, indeed, the increase being entirely on Plantation. The exports of Native for the expired period of this season and the corresponding period of last are just equal, but very far below the previous two seasons, the decrease having been from over 40,000 cwt. to 28,000. Plantation, on the other hand, has gone on increasing until we have 97,000 cwts. instead of 43,000 in 1858. Of course some of the increase in the one kind and the falling off in the other is owing to the practice of preparing and sending home some of the best native coffee as plantation.

The exports of cinnamon continue large; but in cocoa nut oil the falling off continues great—21,000 cwts. against 49,000.

The debates since our last have been of an animated, and occasionally of a personal nature—the unfortunate colonial secretary being attacked flank and rear—by the Major-General fighting the battle of the military; and the Queen's Advocate, like Hugh of the Wynd, fighting on his own hand. The language and attitude of the Colonial Secretary throughout were calculated to remind one of Sir Walter Scott's Fitzjames, when confronted with such fearful odds as the hosts of Roderick Dhu :—

Come one, come all, this rock shall fly
From its firm base, as soon as I.

We may not—we cannot agree with all the sentiments of the Colonial Secretary; but we are compelled to award him the praise of strict honesty of purpose and unflinching courage. The Honourable gentleman has carried the Council with him on the question of military expenditure, but he has been thoroughly defeated on the toll question, in regard to which the Queen's Advocate denounced his conduct as “unjust, uncandid, and unfair.” Indeed, after the exhibition made yesterday in the Legislative Council by the Queen's Advocate, we scarcely see how it is possible that he can retain his position as a member of Sir Charles MacCarthy's Executive Council.

The estimate of Revenue and Expenditure for 1862 shows a balance of £630 after the appropriations made by the Legislative Council. Those appropriations amount to £468,673, including £100,000 for Roads and Bridges, and £24,734 for Works and Buildings: total for Public Works, say £133,000 out of a gross revenue of £606,950. The total estimated disbursements are £606,319, made up as follows :—

| Charges sanctioned by H.M.'s Government.                         |         |
|--|---------|
| Colonial pay and allowance of officers ...                       | £42,622 |
| Contributions towards military expenditure ...                   | 24,000  |
| Charges sanctioned by establishment ordinances ...               | 171,023 |
| Voted by Legislative Council (less £10,000 probable savings) ... | 458,673 |

Among the votes for roads and bridges are the following :—

|   |         |
|---|---------|
| For the road from Colombo to Kandy ...  | £24,738 |
| For opening, bridging and gravelling the proposed carriage road between Pelmadulla and Ballangodde, upon an estimate of £18,644 ... | 12,000  |
| For the construction of an iron lattice bridge over the Galmaloya at Madamahawere (upon an estimate of £2,920).                     | 2,000   |

In the Tolls Ordinance, at the very last moment, Mr. Lorenz introduced a provision giving to the Government agents power to exempt from tolls ministers of religion generally. The council was divided, six to six on the question, and the provision was ultimately carried by the casting vote of Major-general O'Brien; so that, by a vote of the Legislative Council of Ceylon, Buddhism, Brahminism, Mahomedanism, and even devil worship, are placed on the same level as Christianity. We think those Christian ministers who insisted on their exemption from a trifling tax will regret the result of their pertinacity. It will now be quite possible for a Government agent to grant certificates, simultaneously, to a Christian minister going to preach the Gospel, and a Demon priest proceeding to invoke an evil spirit, as equally “ministers of religion” and equally proceeding on “duty.” Here is the consequence of the legislature travelling beyond the sphere of its duty.

Considerable discussion took place on the reductions in the Survey Department, and a question of prerogative was raised, unexpectedly, by a motion to increase the pay of the Assistant-Government Printer.

The Duke of Newcastle has confirmed the view taken by those who believed that the Governor had the prerogative of vetoing bills.

The Governor noticed in the Legislative Council the receipt of a private letter stating that tenders for the construction of our railway were probable.

Our Obituary includes, we regret to say, the name of Mrs. Gogerly, wife of the Rev. D. J. Gogerly, the venerable head of the Wesleyan Mission in this Island.

Colds are prevalent, produced by the keen North-east winds, but the health of the country is, on the whole, good.—Colombo Overland Observer.

ADDRESS OF H. E. SIR CHARLES JUSTIN MAC-CARTHY, KNIGHT, on closing the Session of the Legislative Council, Dec. 31 :—

“Gentlemen of the Legislative Council,

“The close of the year brings with it the close for a time of your Legislative labours.

“The Bills which, with your advice and consent, I have been able to enact in the course of the Session are, I trust and believe, of a character to benefit practically all classes of her Majesty's subjects in this island, and to conduce materially to their welfare.

“The amended ‘Road Ordinance’ and ‘Irrigation Ordinance’ are especially calculated to meet the wants and promote the interests of the native population, and by the ‘Lengthened Engagements Ordinance’ you have endeavoured, I hope successfully, to secure on the one hand the just rights of those immigrant labourers on whom so much of the prosperity of the colony depends; and, on the other, to enable the employers of that labour to turn it to the best account.

“No effort shall be wanting on my part to facilitate the free ingress of this labour, so essential to the Government in its prosecution of public works, as well as to the great planting interests of the community, who contribute so largely to its revenue.

“The resolutions unanimously agreed to in this Council at the commencement of the present Session, inviting tenders for the construction of a railway within a limited sum, have been duly forwarded to England, and acted upon by the Secretary of State. I have not yet received any tenders for the work, but, looking at the large margin wisely left by the resolutions, I cannot but indulge the hope that an undertaking likely to be so conducive to the development of the resources of the island will not be much longer deferred. By a careful and economic husbandry of those resources, and such judicious retrenchments in the heavy civil and military fixed establishments of the colony as may be found consistent with the efficiency of the public service, I look forward with confidence to the possibility of constructing a railway without incurring a larger debt than the colony could well afford to contract, or could extinguish within a reasonable period.

“Gentlemen of the Legislative Council,

“I thank you, in the name of the Queen, for the liberal supplies which you have voted for her Majesty's Service in the Colony for the ensuing year. The favourable prospects of the Public Revenue, as set forth in the estimate laid before you, have enabled me to propose to you a larger expenditure on public works than has been voted in any previous year, and it shall be my anxious and constant care so to supervise that expenditure as to render it productive of the most lasting and useful results. “C. J. MACCARTHY.”

Previously to the delivery of the above speech, the assent of the Governor to the Labour and Irrigation Ordinances was announced, and the Tolls Bill was passed and carried up to the Governor for his assent.—Colombo Overland Observer.

REAR ADMIRAL JAMES J. STOPFORD has been appointed Commander-in-Chief of the East India and China Station, in the room of Rear-Admiral Sir James Hope, K.C.B.

ADVANCES OF PAY.

Mil. Dept.—No. 1,150.—With reference to G.O. No. 981, July 8, 1859, H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council now directs that no advances of pay shall be made in future from civil treasuries to military officers and troops, except when proceeding on public duty from one station to another; and when the payment of such advances through the divisional paymasters is impracticable, officers on leave will receive their pay through the paymasters of their respective ranges, and the recent allocation of pay circles will afford facilities for such arrangements. There are few positions in which an officer absent from his corps cannot receive his dues through the pay department; and it being absolutely necessary for the clear exhibition and due adjustment of all payments on account of the military service that they should be made through the prescribed channels, commanding officers of stations and divisions are especially warned of the responsibility they will incur by authorising advances directly from civil treasuries for military purposes, in contravention of these orders.

Payment of Prize Money.

No. 1,154.—With reference to G.G.O. No. 1,147 of the 13th Dec., the following instructions for the preparation and submission of claims for the first payment of Delhi prize money are published for general information and guidance :—

1. All bills and abstracts of individuals, corps, or departments to be prepared in the forms laid down in duplicate, and submitted to the general prize committee [Nos. 1 and 2].

2. The names of officers and men are to be returned in the companies to which they stood posted on the 1st October, 1857.

3. Prize money being admissible only in the ranks in which individuals actually served, promotion with back rank gives no claim to share in rank higher than that in which service was performed. Officers and men who died, were killed, or left the army before Delhi, in consequence of sickness or wounds, are entitled to share in the rank they actually held on the date they died or left, and those present at the capture of Delhi or Jhajpur, are entitled in the ranks they held on the 20th September and 18th October, 1857.

4. Officers claiming additional shares in virtue of length of service are to note at the foot of their bills the dates of their several commissions, &c.

5. Claims on account of deceased officers by executors and others are to be accompanied by probates and letters of administrations granted by the Supreme Court of Judicature in Bengal in its ecclesiastical side, empowering the claimants to administer to estates.

6. To facilitate the payment of the prize money payable in England to officers who have left India, whether by retirement or exchange, and to the representatives of such officers deceased, and to soldiers deceased, and to men discharged or invalid from regiments now in India, separate abstracts agreeably to para. 1 are to be submitted from corps serving in India, in view to their shares being at once remitted to the Home authorities. 11. The reports are to be submitted to the General Prize Committee in duplicate after audit, the sums admitted will be paid by the Station Prize Committee.

12. Monthly the Station Prize Committee will submit to the General Prize Committee account current of sums received by them and the payments made, also acquaintance rolls from recipients.

13. The expenses for a writer and stationery incurred by Station Prize Committees to be submitted monthly, duly vouched and attested.

SALE OF WASTE LANDS.

Revenue Department, N. W. P., dated Camp Jhansie, Nov. 11, 1861.—With reference to paragraphs 8 to 37 of the resolution of H. E. the Viceroy and Governor in Council, No. 3,264, dated Oct. 17, 1861, relative to the sale of waste lands, the Hon. the Lieut.-Governor is pleased to publish, for the information of all concerned, the following rules of procedure, which have been prepared by the Sudder Board of Revenue, N. W. P., and have received the approval of the Government of the N. W. P.

RULES OF PROCEDURE.

The attention of all officers in charge of districts containing unassigned waste lands is directed to the first portion of the Revenue resolution of the Viceroy in Council No. 3,264, dated Oct. 17, to the provisions of which they are required to give full and immediate effect.

2. The collector should at once proceed to prepare a statement of all special tracts, reserved from the operation of this circular, under paras. 23 and 24 of the above orders, as being required for street purposes, for grazing or firewood preserves, for building sites, or for any other public object. This statement should be exposed in his office, and facilities should be given to intending applicants to make themselves aware of its contents.

3. When an application for the assignment of the specific tract of waste land is received, the collector will first consider whether any objection or special limitation is required by reason of the land being required for any of the abovenamed purposes, and, in the event of such being the case, and the applicant still prosecuting his demand, the collector will report the matter for the information of the commissioner.

4. In other cases he will at once proceed to inquire whether the land applied for is encumbered by any prior claim of property or occupancy.

5. Where it is evident that there exist rights of property or of exclusive occupancy, either active or latent, the applicant will be informed that the case cannot be taken up under the grant rules, excepting in favour of the party originally possessed of those rights, or who has purchased them from such party. "It will be an important part of the collector's duty to make certain that any transfer of such rights shall have been made with a complete and fair understanding on the part of all concerned."

6. In case of there being any doubt as to whether existing rights are of the exclusive character necessary to bear alienation, the collector will report the case to the commissioner.

7. Where no claims of the nature supposed are known to exist, the collector will advertise the application for a term of thirty days, by an insertion to be stuck up in his office, and in the public and revenue posts nearest to the property, as well as in any villages on the land or adjoining thereto. He will also, where he deems it advisable, have the purport of the applications verbally explained to the inhabitants of those villages, and to any other parties likely to be interested in the grant.

8. Objections to the grant will be carefully considered and disposed of on their merits.

9. Where no objections are brought forward within the period specified, or when they have been decided to be invalid, a memorandum will be forthwith given in the Form A to the applicant, intimating that the land has been allotted to him, subject to fulfilment of the rules laid down by the Supreme Government. Great care will be necessary in defining the land thus allotted in such manner as that no possibility or misunderstanding may exist as to its position and extent, and especially as to its not infringing on the boundaries of adjoining lands held under anterior claims of proprietorship or exclusive occupancy.

10. No allotment as above will be made exceeding 3,000 acres; and in the hill districts no grant of tea lands shall exceed 2,000 acres. Where any special reason may exist against the assessment of so large an area, such as proximity to a station, &c., and the grantee may not be content with a smaller area, the collector will report the case for orders, with his opinion as to the degree of further limitation which is called for.

11. The collector will next calculate the cost of surveying the grant, and of erecting durable pillars of demarcation. This will be at the lowest rate for which land of the nature applied for is ordinarily surveyed in the district. But provision must be made for the measurement being accurately conducted on the plain table system, and in such wise that a correct estimate may be formed of the amount of land "uncleaned," and of the amount "unencumbered with jungle," as also of the portion which may fairly be held to be unculturable. A scale of charges of survey should be prepared and hung up in the same way as the statement referred to in para. 2. The collector will submit a copy of this scale to the commissioner for the approval of the Board.

12. When the cost of survey has been paid in, the collector will intimate to the applicant that he is at liberty to take possession of the land.

13. The survey will be proceeded with forthwith, and no time should be lost in the erection of the boundary pillars.

14. Where an estate has been already surveyed and marked off, this portion of the operations will of course be dispensed with, and no charge will be made against the applicant further than is necessary to secure an accurate plan of the new estate, with the requisite boundary marks.

15. Immediately on completion of the survey, or, where a fresh survey is not required, immediately on the allotment having been definitely concluded, the collector will calculate the purchase money on the amount of culturable land in the grant at the rates of rupees 2-8 per acre for uncleared land, and rupees 5 for land unencumbered with jungle.

16. He will then invite the grantee to pay in the full amount, or at his option any portion of it not being less than one-tenth; one-tenth must be paid down at once to warrant the grantee remaining in continued occupation; immediately on its payment the collector will deliver the deed of grant, form B, with plan of the estate, to the grantee, and will enter his name provisionally in the district records as proprietor of the grant.

17. Wherever it may seem necessary to make any reservation of the rights of government, under paras. 12 and 13 of the resolution, the collector will report the circumstances for the order of the commissioner.

18. In any case in which, prior to the delivery of the memo. of assignment (form A), more than one application has been received for the same land, the collector will, after the necessary survey, advertise the grant for sale, and proceed under the ordinary rules for such sales. He will fix the upset price according to the rule laid down in para. 15 of the resolution, including in the same the cost of survey.

19. The sale will be concluded in favour of the highest bidder on his paying down one-tenth of the sale price. The deed of grant (form B), and plan of the estate will then be made over to him, and possession immediately given, subject to the conditions laid down in para 27 of the resolution, and para. 25 of this circular.

20. So soon as the grantee's name has been provisionally entered in the proprietary register, he is entitled to apply for the reservation of any adjoining plot, not exceeding the previous grant in area, that is available, and has not been already applied for, which can then be surveyed at his expense, and reserved for him; he will in such case be at liberty to obtain possession of the additional tract under the same procedure and conditions as the original grant, "but subject to the obligations that within five years from the date of his previous grant he shall fulfil the conditions necessary to his being recorded as proprietor of this further grant, and that two-thirds of the previous grant, that is, of its culturable area, shall within the same time have been brought under cultivation. If he should fail in either obligation, the reservation of the plot will cease. There need be no limit to the number of further grants which may be successively taken up in fulfillment of these obligations."

21. Holders of grants under former rules, "who have not yet completed the purchase of their grants," may commute them under the new rules without limitation of area. The purchase money will be calculated at Rupees 2-8-0 per acre on any portion of the culturable area at the time being "uncleaned," and at Rupees 5 on all that is at the same time "unencumbered with jungle;" ten per cent. of this sum must be paid down at once, and the balance treated as directed in the present rule for new grants—provided that the grantee shall have the option of redeeming the land revenue by payment of twenty years' purchase of the maximum yearly assessment of his existing grant.

22. This rule will not apply to any grants resettled or otherwise concluded on a zemindaree footing at a fixed assessment.

23. Whenever the permission is applicable, it must be acted upon at once; but a period of six months may be allowed for the grantee to make his election between the old and new rules. An intimation should be served on each existing grantee entitled to the option to the above effects; after expiry of the term it will not be open to him to apply for commutation under this circular.

24. It will be observed that an existing grantee can purchase, under the new rules, any portion of his grant, retaining, if he pleases, the remainder upon terms of the original grant. It must not, however, be permitted to a grantee to break up his grant into many minute portions under this concession, rejecting, or retaining under different titles, such scattered portions. The tracts selected for purchase must be compact, continuous, and well-defined.

25. From the date of the deed (Form B) three months will be calculated, and whatever balance of purchase-money is found to be then unpaid will be entered as an arrear against the grantee, who is to be charged with 10 per cent. per annum on such arrear. This charge should be treated in the same manner as a demand of land revenue, liable on demand.

sault to the same measures for recovery of arrears.* The amount should be demanded twice a-year within the May and November instalments, and should be entered at the foot of the Pergunnah Lowzee in the same manner as land revenue, though the amount (being subject to diminution on each further payment) will not be added to the rent-roll of the district.

26. Every grant will be reported through the usual channel for the information of Government immediately on the deed of grant being delivered to the grantee.

27. Every six months a report will be submitted of any sums that may have been realised within that period as purchase money. This must be carefully drawn up, in order that the provisions of para. 56 may be carried into effect. A copy of the six-monthly report will be simultaneously sent to the deputy auditor and accountant-general.

28. In the annual administration report, the amount so realised within the year, and the total amount from the commencement of the system up to date, will be noted; and also the sum realised as interest on unpaid balances as purchase money.

29. The rules for compensation of any rights which may subsequently come to light as having existed on the grants are given in para. 19. All such cases will be reported to the commissioner.

30. The title conveyed by the deed of grant is a full and complete title, which the Government guarantees against all other claims. The grantees, and their heirs or representatives, are to be regarded the sole legal owners of the land; and no transfer of property in it will be recognised by the courts or revenue officers unless duly registered. A separate register of all grants made under these rules will be carefully maintained.

The maps or plans of all grants sold under these rules will be kept in a series corresponding with the number in this register. All previous circular orders on the subject of grants of waste land are hereby cancelled. Future applications will be disposed of under the present orders.

MEMORANDUM A.

having made application for assignment to him of a grant of land in the Pergunnah, and no right of proprietorship or of exclusive occupancy having after the prescribed advertisement been found to exist therein, notice is hereby given that the land specified below has been allotted to as a grant, subject to fulfilment of the prescribed rules.

(Here is to follow a description of the situation of the land, its extent, and the boundaries with which it is to be granted.)

, Collector.

FORM OF GRANT B.

Know all men by these presents, that the Government of the North-West Provinces has conferred on _____, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, the grant of a tract of land, measuring _____ British statute acres _____, situate in _____, to be holden by him in full proprietary right, subject to the following conditions:—

1. The purchase money for this grant is Rs. _____, of which Rs. _____ have been already paid. On the _____, if the entire purchase money has not been paid up, interest at 10 per cent. per annum will be charged on the balance; and thereafter until the entire purchase money be paid up; such interest will be chargeable on all unpaid arrears of the purchase money, and all payments by the grantee shall be first carried to the credit of any outstanding arrear of interest due on such purchase money.

11. Arrears of interest shall be treated in the same manner as arrears of land revenue, and be subject to the same measures of realisation.

III. No transfer of proprietary right will be recognised by the civil courts, or by the revenue officers of Government, unless duly registered.

IV. The right of the public to roads in the grant is not to be interfered with. The grantee is to pay a contribution of one rupee per annum for every 1,000 rupees of purchase money, in lieu of all demand of the State for aid in repairing the high roads; which payment is commutable at twenty years' purchase. The grantee will have no claim on Government for making or repairing private roads.

V. The grantee is to erect permanent boundary marks round his grant, and to keep them in a state of repair.

VI. The grant conveys the plenary right to all products both above the surface and below the same. (Here any exceptions which have been approved by superior authority to be noted.) But whenever any persons have been accustomed to use or consume the spontaneous products of the soil, the grantee shall not interfere with them, so long as they do not trespass upon or otherwise injure the cultivated portion of the land.

VII. For the preservation of the public peace, the grantee shall, at the requisition of the magistrate, maintain a chowkeedar for every sixty houses or families resident in the grant. The chowkeedar shall receive Rs. 3 per mensem. For every three chowkedars there shall also be maintained by the grantee a goryat or reporter, at a salary of Rs. 2 per mensem.

▪ The land will be held liable to resale in default of the regular payment of such interest, should there be no crop or other moveable property on the land from which the claim of Government can be satisfied.

VIII. Arrears on account of road fund or chow-keedar's salary may be realised by distraint of the crops or other property of the grantee.

IX. The prescriptive rights of other proprietors in streams running through or bounding the estate will be maintained for purposes of irrigation or navigation, and for the transport of timber or other property, and for other purposes of general utility. The Government reserves to itself the right which it everywhere possesses over all such streams, whether for purposes of irrigation or navigation, and whenever it sees fit can assume the control of the waters, and distribute them in such manner and on such condition as may seem most conducive to the public good.

X. The lands included in this grant are shown in the subjoined table :—

WASTE LANDS IN OUDE.—The Chief Commissioner of Oude has acted with great promptitude and intelligence in carrying out the resolution which directed the sale of waste lands. In Seetapore there are 8,500 acres; in Durriabad, 5,731 in Hurdai, 29,327; in Baraich, 98,300; in Gondah, 98,340, and in Mahomdee, 188,045, of culturable waste land. The rules issued provide that the applicant shall have all facilities for ascertaining the position of the tract he wishes, but must describe its position, &c., in his application. If there be no prior claim to the grant, the application will be advertised; and if no objection be made within thirty days, the area will be surveyed at an estimated cost of eight shillings per hundred acres. The grantees will then receive a certificate of the fact that the land as described has been allotted to him. If he consents to a deduction of one-eighth of the whole area for swamps and unculturable land, the surveyor will merely demarcate the boundaries, but otherwise the survey will be made in detail to define the land which must be deducted as valueless. Existing grantees are treated most liberally. They may commute the whole or such portions of their respective grants as they please, retaining the uncommuted portions on the present terms, but the tract commuted must be in one lump, and not piecemeal. The price will have regard to the state of the land when the grant was made, and not to the condition it may have been brought to by the grantee.

THE OFFICERS OF THE INDIAN NAVY have been promised a pension and retiring scheme by Sir Charles Wood, similar in many respects to that which has been granted to the senior officers of the late Company's armies.

MOFUSSIL JUSTICE.

THE Judicial Deputy Commissioner of Rangoon appears to be a Dogberry, without his mercy. Perchance he would not "hang a dog," but he would not much object to do that kind office by "a man who hath any honesty in him." It is clear that "crown's quest law" is the only law he is fit to administer. For the following statement of a case grievously misunderstood by that gallant rather than learned official we are indebted to the Calcutta Englishman. It seems, then, that some time last June a mercantile house in Rangoon, trading under the firm of Burot and Co., obtained a decree of the District Court against three Mahomedan traders for the sum of Rs. 811-7; and further, against one of them named Aga Tuckee Sheerazee, for the sum of Rs. 5,305-9 on his own separate account. This decree they transferred on the 8th July to one Aga Ahmed Bindanee, and yet two months later, or, to speak correctly, on the 6th September, they caused Aga Tuckee Sheerazee to be arrested and thrown into prison. After lying there twenty days he was liberated, on the ground of false imprisonment, because if Messrs. Burot and Co. had transferred the decree to another party, they could not possibly be justified in enforcing it themselves. On the 12th October the injured man instituted a suit in the same Court for damages to the amount of 5,000 rupees against Messrs. Burot and Co., who pleaded, in their own defence, that although it was true they had transferred the separate decree for Rs. 5,305-9 to Aga Ahmed Bindanee, they had still retained in their own hands the conjoint decree for Rs. 811-7, and upon that alone they had taken action. But on referring to the records of the Court it transpired that the original transfer covered both decrees, and that an interpolation had afterwards been introduced, by which it appeared that the separate decree alone had been made over. On further inquiry it came to light that a Mr. Christien, a partner in the firm of Messrs. Burot and Co., had prevailed upon Mr. Christopher, the record-keeper, to make this interpolation on the 6th September, the day on which execution was taken out against Aga Tuckee Sheerazee. Upon this strange proceeding Major Sparks, the Judicial Deputy Commissioner, remarks:—"The Court has no reason to believe that Mr. Christien, or the record-keeper, Mr. Christopher, had any dishonest motive in this alteration, but it was highly irregular and improper, and has been the cause of the plaintiff's illegal arrest." Whatever may have been their motive, there is no doubt of their having committed an unlawful and fraudulent act, and it is by actions that men must be judged. It is equally clear that if Aga Tuckee Sheerazee were illegally arrested and kept in confinement for three weeks he was entitled to heavy damages. But what was the decision of this Rangoon Daniel? The decree runs as follows:—"For plaintiff 200 rupees damages, and costs calculated on a suit for Rs. 1,000. Plaintiff to pay defendants' costs in excess of those they would have incurred in a suit for that amount." The result of this is that the plaintiff recovers nominal damages Rs. 200, but is actually Rs. 500 out of pocket. The explanation is simple enough. The plaintiff has to receive in all 300 rupees, that is, the 200 as damages; 50, the cost of stamp on a suit for Rs. 1,000; and 50, the pleaders' fees. On the other hand, he has to pay the defendants' costs, or the difference between 1,000 and 5,000 rupees, or Rs. 400, besides his own costs for instituting the suit minus the 100 rupees awarded for that purpose, and which amount to 400 more. Thus from 800 deducting 300 there remains a positive loss or fine of Rs. 500, as a consolation for his unjust detention and disgrace. If this be a fair specimen of the advantages peculiar to Non-regulation Provinces, most Englishmen at least would prefer to live where the law is less arbitrarily administered. Major Sparks, it is obvious, knows nothing whatever of either justice or equity, and is wholly incompetent to discharge the duties of the office into which he has so unwisely been thrust. An appeal must surely lie to some higher tribunal, which will know how to vindicate the purity of the law, and to punish the laches of ignorant magistrates and unscrupulous traders. We conclude, from their names, that Mr. Christien and his partners are Frenchmen, and not English, which is so far gratifying, though the natives will scarcely understand the distinction. A slur has thus been cast upon the British character for strict integrity and even-handed justice which time alone can remove. Where so much depends upon the moral influence of the dominant race, a blot of this kind is no trifling matter, and should at once be visited with the severe displeasure of the higher authorities. English settlers, too, will act prudently in waiting for a time until properly-trained judges are sent out to mete unto every man his due. It is hardly worth while to go so far as India in order to have the gratification of paying a fine of £50, after being unjustly confined in an unhealthy prison for twenty-one days.

RUSSIAN INFLUENCE IN CENTRAL ASIA.

It is curious to observe how certain well-worn topics recur at stated intervals. The progress of Russia in Asia is one of those favourite subjects of declamation, and every few years the prophecy is repeated that it is by her intrigues that the British supremacy in India will some day be seriously imperilled, if not absolutely destroyed. A correspondent of the Times has within the last week again evoked this spectre, which we fondly imagined had been laid for ever. His apprehensions, indeed, are partly founded upon a geographical error. Having heard that the Russian Government had obtained permission to establish a mart at Kashgar, a town on the extreme border of the Chinese Empire, he jumped to the conclusion that the place signified was a wild and thinly inhabited district, not more than a hundred miles from the British territories. The Kashgar in question, however, is five times that distance from our north-west frontier, and is, after all, only nominally dependent on the Emperor of China. Its real masters are the Uzbeqs, a warlike and barbarous tribe, little addicted to the peaceful pursuits of commerce. That it may eventually prove useful as a link in the chain that connects Moscow with Peking is far from improbable, but surely that need not be the cause of umbrage to ourselves. From the confinity of the two empires, considerable intercourse must necessarily ensue, and mutual interests will inevitably produce some sort of sympathy and kindly feeling. Neither France nor England can expect to monopolise the trade between China and the nations of Europe, nor would it be possible to cultivate profitable relations with the half-savage tribes on the north-western extremity of that immense empire. The Russians, however, understand the organisation of caravans, are themselves the most patient of travellers, and are content with a return for the fatigue and risk they have encountered, which an English merchant would regard as almost equivalent to a loss. It is only by means of Russian agency that European goods are ever likely to find their way into Central Asia, and few individuals can be so narrow-minded as to desire to shut out that almost unknown region from all intercourse with the civilised world. If ever the Tartar hordes are to be reclaimed from barbarism, it is the Muscovite who must be the pioneer of civilisation. No generous or even sensible man would rejoice to see the British Government adopt the dog-in-the-manger policy of attempting to prevent another people from doing what cannot be done by its own subjects. A petty trade may, doubtless, be prosecuted with that portion of Chinese territory immediately contiguous to the frontiers of our Indian possessions, and even now there is an interchange of commodities to a certain extent, but it is obvious that the stupendous mountain chain of the Himalayas would interpose an almost insurmountable barrier to dealings on a large scale, if even there were no other obstacle. But a poor and sparse population affords no opening for an extensive trade, or the realisation of handsome profits, and nothing beyond a mere retail barter can ever be expected to flourish.

As for the political influence of Russia in Central Asia, we are inclined to place but small confidence in the statements of the Cabul news-writers. In all parts of the world the correspondents of the press are prone to exaggeration, and one would scarcely look for an exception in oriental journalists. And it is by no means certain that British interests would not be benefited rather than injured if Russia were really able to impose her will upon the turbulent tribes that are continually warring upon one another between the Caspian Sea and the Hindu Coosh. Her first act would be to compel them to lay down their arms and keep the peace, and thus, by degrees, habits of order and respect for life and property would take the place of anarchy and rapine. A change so radical must naturally be the work of many years, but that it might be effected is apparent from what the Russian Government has already been able to accomplish in the case of the Cossack hordes. The idea of an invasion of India by a Russian army from the Caucasus is one of those chimerical projects that a poet might dream, but which no statesman would entertain for an instant. Even the Times' correspondent dismisses this panic as altogether unfounded, though he regards with something like dismay the danger of an Indian rebellion being fomented by Russian intrigue. Were the two nations at war it is, of course, not unlikely that the St. Petersburg Government would endeavour to excite troubles in our Eastern territories, but unless it were in a position to supply the natives with artillery, treasure, and leaders, the insurrection would be crushed within a month—provided the present military policy is maintained in its integrity. So long as friendly relations exist between the two nations no disturbances in India could be of the slightest advantage to Russia. She has nothing to fear from British ambition in China or Central Asia. All that we desire is free intercourse and commerce with all the world, but certainly not the acquisition of so much as a rood of land. A fair field and no favour is all that we ask, and nothing that Russia can do at Kashgar will ever weaken our political supremacy in India, or diminish our trade with China.

CHAIR OF SANSKRIT AT THE UNIVERSITY OF EDINBURGH.—The sum of 40,000 rupees has been invested in Indian securities by Mr. John Muir, of the Bengal Civil Service, D.C.L. of Oxford, and LL.D. of Edinburgh, for the endowment of a chair of "Sanskrit Language, Literature, and Philosophy, and of Comparative Philology," in the University of Edinburgh. The endowment is granted on the conditions that the free proceeds of the sum, which is invested at five per cent., shall be annually paid to a professor to be appointed, and that the treasury shall grant the additional sum of £200 per annum for the endowment of the chair; that the first appointment shall be made by Mr. Muir, the patronage to be subsequently vested in the Crown; and that such fees shall be exacted from the students as the University Court may sanction. The munificent gift of Mr. Muir to the University has been received with great satisfaction, there having been hitherto no provision for the teaching of Sanskrit there, excepting in connection with the Hebrew chair. The large number of Edinburgh students who look forward to the Indian service renders the new chair a most important acquisition to the University.

CONSULAR APPOINTMENT.—(Foreign-office, Jan. 20.)—The Queen has been pleased to approve of Mr. H. N. Congar as Consul at Hong Kong for the United States of America.

THE FRENCH IN THE INDIAN SEAS.—The French are said to have taken possession of the small island in the China Sea lying to the South of Cochin China, and known as Pulo Condore. From its proximity to the entrances to the river Mekong, Pulo Condore in some measure commands the access to Saigon, and it is also situated in the direct course of vessels passing up and down the China sea. In other respects Pulo Condore appears of little importance, and, as a place of trade, can never be of any value. We do not know if the British Government still claim any right to the place, but so far back as 1702 the English settled on the island and built a fort; but the Settlement was soon abandoned, the settlers having been nearly all cut off in the night by Macassar soldiers in their employ.

THE ILLUSTRATED HORSE DOCTOR;

Being an accurate and detailed account of the various Diseases to which the Equine Race are subjected, together with the latest mode of treatment and the requisite prescriptions, written in plain English.

By EDWARD MAYHEW, Esq., M.R.C.V.S.

"A BOOK WHICH SHOULD BE IN THE POSSESSION OF ALL WHO KEEP HORSES."

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"The production of this book has indelibly stamped the name of Edward Mayhew as the greatest benefactor the horse ever had. He and he alone, of the many veterinary writers whose works are before the public, has hit upon the quality of information, and the form to convey it, which the public have so long desired. We think it a suggestion worth the notice of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals that they should come to some terms with the publishers for a portion of the work to be reproduced, in the form of a pamphlet, to be given away to every groom, coachman, carter, and cabman, in fact all men (who have not means to buy one) whose business is among horses. It would be an act worthy of such a philanthropic body, and quite in keeping with its object—viz., to prevent cruelty. We regret that our limited space will not admit of us quoting the parts to which we allude, but there would be no difficulty in compiling such a pamphlet, for the whole work teems with the most wholesome advice to every class, from the peer to the costermonger. There is no animal in creation more adapted nor more willing to serve man than the horse; but, we regret to say, that there is no animal whose natural history, capabilities, and general treatment are so little understood. The poor creature is frequently suffering from chronic disease, or temporary infirmity, while his master continues to whip him to his work, and exact his pound of flesh to the very utmost, for pleasure or for profit. But although there are thousands of brutes in human shape, who wilfully torture horses, yet there are hundreds of thousands who do so through sheer ignorance of his nature, and symptoms of disease or infirmity under which (at the time) he is often suffering. To such men as these the 'Illustrated Horse Doctor' would be worth its weight in gold, as its precepts would often save a valuable horse from premature death, and serve the cause of humanity at the same time. Every form of disease and symptom is not only illustrated by a master hand, so that the complete novice may at once see (by comparing the suffering animal to the particular illustration that bears upon its case) with what disorder his horse is afflicted, while the causes and treatment are detailed with a clearness and simplicity that is quite refreshing to those who have perused other veterinary books, the contents of which are generally mystified by high-flown language and technical terms, while the prescriptions, being in Latin, are quite unintelligible to the class who have most to do with horses. The test for glands and spavin, which have been the cause of innumerable disputes between vendor and purchaser, and the cause of some of the most eminent professionals giving their evidence in courts of law in direct contradiction to each other is clearly illustrated and explained, as are also many important disorders which many writers have left unnoticed. The subject of 'breaking down,' upon which thousands of our readers desired information after the misfortune to Dundee, is treated with an excellent illustration representing a horse after its affliction, with the jockey dismounted. There are upwards of four hundred illustrations in the work, each a faithful representation of the whole, or part, of the body of the horse during the symptom or progression of the disorder to which it applies; and we need only mention the names of the Messrs. Dalziel as a guarantee that they are executed in the best possible manner. Indeed, we unhesitatingly pronounce the 'Illustrated Horse Doctor' the very best and most useful book of its class ever published."—Sporting Life, July 17, 1861.

"One of the most valuable works that we possess upon the subject, all the diseases to which the horse is liable being lucidly described, and the remedies stated very clearly. The wood engravings, which are numerous, well illustrate the text, and serve to complete the character of a work which all who possess a horse must desire to be master of also."—News of the World, June 24, 1860.

"In order to make a good book two things are essential—an author competent to treat the subject he takes in hand, and a publisher spirited enough to give the writer a loose rein in the production of his work—that is, liberality in allowing him all means and appliances for rendering it a masterpiece. The publishers of 'The Illustrated Horse-Doctor' deserve the highest credit and the greatest success for giving the world this admirable volume in its present costly shape. Its intrinsic merit deserves every penny which has been spent upon it, and, inasmuch as we have never seen a book brought out with better taste or finish, the cost of its production must have been very serious. No one with the least equine knowledge can require to be told that Mr. Mayhew is the man for the task which he has undertaken, and most satisfactorily accomplished. His high reputation in the veterinary art, and his qualifications as a practised writer on domestic animals, render him the very person for supplying an intelligent and interesting work on the diseases of the horse, which would be devoid of mere professional technicalities, whilst, at the same time, his skill as a draughtsman, and humour as a witty observer of life, enabled him to illustrate with his pencil what he had written with his pen. We advisedly say that 'The Illustrated Horse-Doctor' is the very best book of the kind which we know; and what gives it an especial charm is, that the author so thoroughly sympathises with the noble animal which he describes. Without pretending to go into any analysis of this valuable work, we at once pronounce it as scientific, yet intelligible; informing, yet highly amusing; acceptable to the profound horse-doctor, yet the work of all others for the bookshelves in every gentleman's sanctum; admirable in every way as a practical treatise on a very important subject, which it elevates altogether out of the region of quackery; and the tone is so learned, yet easy; so close to business, yet gentleman-like, that the dedication to Sir Benjamin seems as much in its proper place as if it faced a surgical work on the diseases or wounds of man. We give it our unqualified approbation and recommendation."—Era, July 15, 1860.

"Although the book will be mainly valued as an instructor to those who have to do with sick and suffering horses, all the causes of which are treated in detail of symptoms and treatment, yet it may with great advantage be studied by the owners of horses, who never think of treating them for disease—who, when their studs are ill, always call in the veterinary surgeon, and leave the patients in his hands; for in its pages they will find hints and advice, compliance with which is as much more important than the remedying disease as prevention is better than cure. Take the following as a sample of this:—'Above all, attend to the stabling, and let the box be large and well ventilated. Food is eaten but occasionally during the day; air is as essential as more substantial nutriment of life, and is consumed night and day. Food has to undergo a complicated change, and to travel before it joins the blood. Air is no sooner inhaled than it is immediately absorbed by the blood.' Are not these brief sentences full of importance to the keepers of horses?"—Western Morning News.

"The above is a volume of cyclopaedic proportions written by a wise, philanthropic, and scientific man. The numerous illustrations—by the author himself—are simply marvellous for their power of delineation, and more so of expression; and none but a man who knew the structure of the animal, within and without, could have given these transcripts with the diagnosis of disease and illness, together with the (so to speak) physiognomy of pain and suffering, in so wonderful a manner. It is in every sense a perfect book, and calculated to be of essential benefit to 'man and horse.'"—Dispatch, June 24, 1860.

"We have no doubt that this valuable dictionary of the veterinary art will meet with signal success. We have before us a compendious history of all the diseases which horseflesh is heir to, and which man's abuse has bequeathed to it, with directions for treatment, and the necessary remedies, likewise the exposure of popular fallacies. . . . That horses suffer greatly from the ignorance of their riders more than from any intentional cruelty is very certain; but whatever the cause the effect is the same. A horse sinks exhausted in the field, after only a short run, and the rider is thunderstruck. Had he read Mr. Mayhew's book, and taken notice of the warning signal, of which, poor man, he was unaware, and put on the break, the catastrophe would not have been. It is in cases such as these, or where accidents happen in out of the way places, much useful information is to be gained by the general reader. . . . The work concludes with a brief summary, arranged in alphabetical order, of the subjects previously treated on, upon which great care has been bestowed, and the known ability of the author guarantees its worth."—Sun, July 2, 1860.

"Mr. Mayhew is not only master of his subject, but knows how to teach others to master it also. The volume describes all the diseases to which horses are exposed throughout the infinite variety of circumstances in which they are placed; traces each disease to its cause, as far as it can be ascertained, and points out the course of treatment which should be adopted in every case. In pursuing this clear and thoroughly practical method of inquiry and exposition, Mr. Mayhew draws in all the collateral lights that can be brought to bear upon his topic, and shows to what extent the calamities to which horseflesh is heir may be referred to the ignorance, neglect, and brutality of owners; making, upon the whole, a large percentage in the bills of mortality. . . . It will be gathered from what we have said, that the scope of this valuable and interesting publication is hardly expressed in the title. It is undoubtedly a Manual for the 'Horse-doctor,' and by far the most exhaustive that has ever appeared; but it is also a great deal more. The moral side of the question is as largely and sympathetically discussed as the medical, and the great mass of the public who know nothing about horses will derive lessons from the perusal of the work which they could not have anticipated."—Homes News.

"We are inclined to think that this is about the very best book respecting the treatment of equine disease that ever has been written or published. The author is evidently well acquainted with the duties of his profession, and willing to give a world-wide extent to his own useful and practical experience, so that those who read may adopt his rules and regimen, and save that noble animal, whose use is one of the greatest blessings mankind enjoys, from much pain and suffering. In country districts, where the horse doctor cannot easily be summoned, this book will be invaluable; whilst, in more frequented localities, its use will always be found to be safe and judicious."—Bell's Messenger, June 23, 1860.

"The great mass of them (the illustrations) are wonderfully faithful, and they are so varied and interesting that we would undertake to get rid of the most confirmed bore that ever pressed heavily on mankind for a good two hours by only handing him the book, and directing his attention to them. It is a well-known fact that grooms only remember the names of four or five diseases, and are sadly indiscriminate in their knowledge of symptoms. This book furnishes at once the bane and the antidote, as the drawings show the horse not only suffering from every kind of disease, but in the different stages of it, while the alphabetical summary at the end gives the cause, symptoms, and treatment of each."—Illustrated News, June 23, 1860.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF MISS CORNELIA KNIGHT,

LADY COMPANION TO THE PRINCESS CHARLOTTE OF WALES.

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"We can heartily recommend the entire work to our readers as one of the most curious and authentic disclosures of State affairs in this country, and one of the most interesting and graphic journals of travel which the literary world has for a long time been called upon to notice."—Press, June 22, 1861.

"Before concluding a notice of a very pleasant book which, while it is full of what may be called private history, contains no prurient, scandalous, or positively frivolous gossip, it should be stated that the materials from which it has been compiled were placed by the family into whose possession they passed on Miss Knight's death into the hands of Mr. J. W. Kaye, who undertook the office of editing the work. Mr. Kaye, however, states that his time was so much engrossed by other occupations, that he knows not when these volumes might have been prepared for the press if it had not been for the assistance very cordially rendered by his friend Mr. James Hutton, of whose intimate acquaintance with the social history of the Georgian Era no better proof could be afforded than that which speaks out from his interesting volume on English Life, 'A Hundred Years Ago.' To that gentleman is to be assigned the main part of the credit of editing the work, and there are evident marks of a successful struggle with that most trying of all editorial difficulties—a superabundance of materials. Much intelligence, industry, and care have been bestowed upon the production of the book, and such literary conscientiousness will, no doubt, meet with its reward in the public favour."—Illustrated London News, June 22, 1861.

"The matters which will secure popularity for the Autobiography are those which resuscitate the stories that excited the curiosity of our forefathers, and made them invent other scandals, scarcely any one of which, fiction as they were, exhibited half the strangeness of the facts themselves, as they are now recorded."—Bell's Messenger, June 15, 1861.

"Our authoress writes clearly and sensibly, and will, we think, be found, on the whole, a much more amusing and agreeable companion than Madame d'Arlay."—Daily Review, July 1, 1861.

"The work of an acute and sensible woman of the world, a woman with a good head and a good heart. It does not, like the late Lady Charlotte Burry's 'memoirs,' deal with matters of scandal and of passing notoriety, nor does it bring forward into ill-natured prominence the weak points of dukes and duchesses of fifty years ago. We perceive in the entire two volumes not a single prurient or indelicate passage (a great thing to say of a work which treats of the court of the Regency), but attempts, like equity itself, to put the best possible construction upon events as they arise."—Universal News, July 6.

"Emphatically a readable book is this autobiography. Indeed, having once opened it, the reader cannot easily lay it aside until he has got through the whole. Not the least interesting part is the collection of miscellaneous anecdotes of persons and events which are clustered together as a sort of appendix at the close. It is a book fit to be read, but fit also for something better than a casual reading; worthy of a higher repute than an evanescent popularity, merely founded upon the great names it introduces, and the amusing scraps of gossip it contains."—Morning Star, July 22, 1861.

"Of the popularity of these volumes, on account of their historical as well as gossiping merits, there can be no doubt whatever."—Athenæum, June 8, 1861.

"The journal of a clever and lady-like woman, who saw many men and many cities, and whose testimony is not heightened by the warmth of too lively an imagination, nor blackened by the tints of malice, must be—what we have found it to be—unusually interesting reading. It is, moreover, put before us in a form which must be considered exceedingly creditable to its publishers, and to those to whom they have entrusted it. Due editorial care, and a proper judgment in selection and annotation, are so extremely uncommon among those who generally prepare books of this class for the public, that we feel bound to express our cordial thanks to Mr. Kaye and his coadjutor, Mr. James Hutton, for the complete, and, at the same time, unobtrusive fashion in which they have performed their task. A short foot-note is applied to all names, with regard to which a reader of the present day is likely to feel curiosity; and where the Autobiographer refers to published books, their full title is given. In these and all similar points nothing is left to be desired by the most lazy or ignorant of readers."—Spectator, June 22, 1861.

"These volumes will be read in every country seat, at every watering place, this autumn. They are fresh; full of most attractive anecdotes and interesting revelations. Miss Knight, whose anecdote books and journals have supplied these two handsome volumes, was Lady Companion to poor Princess Charlotte: she was an observant and shrewd woman of the world, also. Among the great people who were her constant companions, she appears to have been an inveterate collector of lively anecdotes. Her learning and womanly accomplishments secured her the brilliant position she held. In Mr. James Hutton the 'far-famed Cornelia Knight' has found a most discreet and accomplished editor."—Weekly Newspaper, June 16, 1861.

"These are highly interesting volumes. . . . There is hardly a page of the pleasant memoirs now published of this remarkable woman that will not be read with interest, but the attention of every reader will of course be most strongly directed to those passages of the work which serve to throw an additional light upon the relationship that existed between the Princess Charlotte and her unfeeling father and unhappy mother during the brief but eventful period of eighteen months—from January, 1813, to July, 1814—that Miss Knight retained her office of lady companion. No one will rise from the perusal of that part of the work without a feeling of the deepest sympathy for the persecuted—and, as it would seem, systematically tortured—Princess; and of the warmest indignation at the unmanly spitefulness, not to say absolute malignity of the father's treatment of the generous, noble-hearted child. Miss Knight, speaking in the fulness of the knowledge derived from her confidential position in the princess's household, more than confirms what has been previously asserted of the prince's cruelty; and presents us with a picture of royal littleness in the father and of royal wretchedness in the daughter, such as we hope may never again be exhibited within the walls of an English palace."—Observer, June 30, 1861.

"The volumes are, indeed, a mine of anecdote."—Critic, June 22, 1861.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE arrival of the Bombay Mail places us in possession of news from India of so late a date as the 13th of January. Tranquillity prevailed in all parts of the empire, with the exception of trifling disturbances in Candeish and Sumbulpore, for the prompt suppression of which suitable measures had already been taken.

The long talked-of amalgamation of the provinces of Pegu, Arracan, Maulmain, Martaban, Amherst, and Tenasserim, has at last been effected, Colonel Phayre being appointed the first Lieutenant-Governor. The arrangement is thoroughly a good one, nor is there any objection to be made against any of its details. Lord Canning, we believe, has quite renounced all intention of proceeding to Rangoon.

The appointment of Colonel Norman, C.B., to the post of Military Secretary to the Bengal Government will give general satisfaction. Though young in years, that gallant officer possesses the wisdom and experience of age, and appears to be endowed with a natural genius for army administration. The retirement of Major-general Sir R. Birch, K.C.B., is scarcely to be regarded as a national misfortune.

The effective strength of the European forces in India, at present consisting of 82,000 men, is fixed for the future at 73,577 men of all arms. Of these 44,916 are to be stationed in Bengal, 15,161 in Madras, and 13,500 in Bombay. The total expenditure for this army is estimated at £8,093,470, or £841,610 less than the amount expended in 1860-61. Still greater reductions have been made in the native army, which now does not exceed 111,112 men and officers, divided into 156 regiments. Of these, thirteen corps are under the immediate command of the Supreme Government, sixty belong to Bengal, including the Sikh and Punjab battalions, fifty-two to Madras, thirty to Bombay, and one local regiment of sappers to Pegu. The number of men struck off the strength of the native army since 1858-59 is 64,065.

The first distribution of the Lucknow prize money has commenced, each share being fixed at seventeen rupees. The Delhi prize money lately received in Calcutta, consisting of gold, plate, jewels, and fourteen lakhs in silver, is valued at £1,200,000, or about one-third of the total amount. It may thence be inferred that each share will in the long run be worth 258 rupees. We sincerely trust that such may prove to be the case.

On receipt of the news of the Trent outrage the Indian Government at once published an ordinance prohibiting the exportation of salt-petre except in British vessels bound to some port in the United Kingdom. The prospect of war with the Federal States had for the moment paralysed foreign trade, but a reaction may be expected as soon as the liberation of the Southern Commissioners becomes known to the cautious merchants of Calcutta and Bombay.

The Madras Government having at length discovered that the possession of North Canara is not indispensable to the welfare of that Presidency, have intimated to Sir George Clerk their readiness to accede to its transfer. It is to be regretted that Sir William Denison did not sooner arrive at this conclusion.

A Mr. Le Soeuf asserts the existence of a valuable gold-field in the Carnatic, for the working of which a company has already been formed in Bombay. What were the Benighted about that they overlooked a Tom Tiddler's Ground lying so conveniently at their very feet?

We invite the attention of those whom it may concern to the Civil Service Memorial given in the next page. If their prayer be granted, which is not very likely, the Service will be placed in a better situation than ever as regards pensions, and consequently promotion will be accelerated by earlier retirement.

Lord Canning has little reason to thank ministers for the omission of the slightest allusion to India in the Queen's Speech. The beneficent and sagacious policy pursued by his Excellency during the last twelve months assuredly deserved the compliment of at least one paragraph. His acts, however, will speak for themselves long after the present feeble Cabinet has sunk into the oblivion that inevitably awaits them.

BENGAL.

THE CIVIL SERVICE MEMORIAL.—
AMENDED RESOLUTIONS.

I. That the Secretary of State be asked to guarantee to the Members of the Covenanted Civil Service, who shall have served 25 years, and actually resided 22 years in India under present rules, on the existing basis of a subscription of 4 per cent. of their salaries during the whole period of service, an annuity on retirement of 10,000 Sicca Rupees payable in India, or £1,000 sterling payable in England, and similarly to those who shall have served 30 years and actually resided 27 years in India, an annuity of 12,500 Sicca Rupees, or £1,250; provided that each retiring member shall have paid up the difference between one-fourth of the value of the annuity calculated at the time of his retirement, and the accumulated amount of his contributions to the Annuity Fund; and provided that if the accumulated subscriptions of any subscriber at the period of his retirement do not amount to one-fourth of the value of such annuity, either he shall pay up the balance required to complete that amount, or the annuity assigned to him shall be reduced in proportion to the sum by which his subscriptions fall short of the one-fourth value.

II. That the Secretary of State be asked to guarantee on the same principle as that involved in the above resolution, the following scale of pensions to members of the Service who may be compelled to retire from the Service by sickness, duly certified, before having served 25 years, and actually resided 22 years, viz. :—

Under 5 years' residence, an annuity of 500 Sicca Rupees, or £50 sterling.

After 5 and under 10 years' residence, an annuity of 1,250 Sicca Rupees, or £125 sterling.

After 10 and under 15 years' residence, an annuity of 3,500 Sicca Rupees, or £250 sterling.

After 15 and under 20 years' residence, an annuity of 5,000 Sicca Rupees, or £500 sterling.

After 20 and under 25 years' residence, an annuity of 7,500 Sicca Rupees, or £750 sterling;

Provided that each retiring member shall have, &c., &c.

III. That the Secretary of State be asked to guarantee to the widows and children of the members of the Service, pensions on the scale at present provided by the Civil Fund, on payment of the same rates of subscription by the Service as at present.

THE IRON MALLEABLE.

Absorbed in the reorganisation of an European army, we are letting slip the golden opportunity of moulding, while yet ductile, the Sepoy army that we have re-created. Reforms might now be perfected, to initiate which two years hence will cause a mutiny. Cowed by the spectacle of an unsuccessful revolt, tamed by the display of England's resources, dreading the alternative of disbandment, the native soldier is still ready to accept with equanimity reforms that will go far to make the army he belongs to a reliable military defence.

First among the reforms necessary to the existence of the native army is the absolute recognition, and adoption in its integrity, of the principle of general service. Nearly all the soldiers of the present force were enlisted in 1857 and 1858, without any distinct understanding as to where they were to be called upon to serve. Why should not these men, all of whom have now completed their three years' term, be re-enlisted under an engagement to serve anywhere? Restless and avaricious as is the Sikh soldier, he will eagerly accept the extra rupee and the free rations of foreign service. Every regiment has listened to the wonderful tales of the Sikhs lately returned from China; and there is hardly a village in the Punjab where there is not a family made richer by the capture of Peking. Every officer in the army well knows how heartily another China war would be welcomed by the Sikhs, already wearied of the inaction of cantonments. It is because we believe that the discipline and fidelity of the native army depend on its employment out of India that we so consistently advocate the necessity of a regular system of foreign relief. Runjeet Singh well knew the temperament of his own countrymen; let his unceasing campaigns teach us the danger of keeping our Sikh army in idleness. While the educated and somewhat stolid European feels bitterly the ennui of cantonments, the impetuous and semi-barbarous Sikh chafes under inaction, till the very qualities which we could turn so easily to our benefit become our danger.

The new Articles of War will be found a clog to the efficient working of discipline in those Punjab infantry corps which have been transformed into Bengal infantry. These corps were raised in 1857, when powers were given to their commanding officers similar to those enjoyed by the officers commanding the old frontier regiments. By these the officer could reduce, flog up to 50 lashes, or imprison up to 3 years, any of his men under the rank of commissioned officer; was naturally therefore looked up to with respect and dread, by the men who regarded him as the only person who could promote or punish them. The new Articles of War have, in a great measure, curtailed these powers. And now, when the men know that every trial held by their commanding officer has to go up for the perusal and, as it were, sanction of the major-general commanding the division, whose deputy adjutant general takes a delight in detecting petty informalities, who may, perhaps, remit or entirely quash the sentence, they have not the same high regard for their officer as formerly. Far better than Articles of War would be the appointment of an officer like Chamberlain, Lumsden, or Coke, to be inspector of native infantry; one who is thoroughly acquainted with the characteristics of the various races composing these regiments, who would thoroughly inspect each corps, spending four or five days in such work; and who, by holding a durbar for the native officers, and attending the orderly room once or twice, would soon detect whether the commanding officer was efficient or not. If such a system was introduced there would be little danger of any officer exceeding his powers or abusing them. Moreover, considering the variety of languages at present prevailing in Punjab infantry corps, and how few officers know either Pushtoo or Punjabi, it will be a matter of great difficulty to make the men understand the Articles of War.

But the iron must be struck while it is hot. A regulation that would now be considered only as one of the new conditions of service will, in a few months hence, be viewed as an inroad on existing rights. Let, then, the army at once and for ever be weeded of its local soldiers. An army, and the tradition of an army, have been engulged in 1857. We have not yet realised the fact.—Friend of India.

A CAREER FOR THE NATIVE.

How to create a career for our native subjects which shall at once satisfy them, while it not only does not impede but advances the civilisation of India, is a political question which, in all its fulness, demands a speedy settlement. India lies in profound peace—not a petty chief and hardly a savage tribe disturbs the calm. The complete vindication of our power in 1858, after the temporary success of a few rebel leaders, and the excitement of successive campaigns, have been succeeded by three years of unbroken quiet. The native looked for punishment, and he found mercy; the people who, as a mass, had rebelled, expected vengeance, and their leaders were clothed with honour. The massacres of Delhi were answered by the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India; the revolt of Oude, by the concession to our native feudatories of the right of adoption and of self-government on their own estates. The policy of Lord Dalhousie which levelled the tall poppies and made the English supreme throughout the peninsula, rendered it more easy to meet the shock of rebellion which had been so long impending. The policy of Lord Canning became possible only because he had to deal with feudatories like talookdars and sirdars, not with kings like him of Oude, or greater than kings like the Sikh rulers of the Punjab. The territorial chiefs of India who still maintain the tradition of a raj, he has satisfied. As landholders and feudal nobles they have a career far more elevated, far more secure, and far less turbulent than they ever enjoyed under Patan or Mogul emperors. The innate savagery of the Asiatic may yet burst out in their case, but it will be sporadic, and the tenure of their lands is a great security. The purely trading classes have had given to them by our rule a career so impossible elsewhere, that they have been made our most loyal subjects. To the English-speaking community the courts offer a sphere in which their highest ambition may find satisfaction. Of the vast mass of the peasantry we may say that they are as yet like a slumbering lion ignorant of its strength, whom for centuries the results of what is called "developing the resources," will satisfy.

All these classes have more or less a career. But among them is not included by far the most dangerous and valuable portion of the native community. There are the restless younger sons who in the olden days would have carried their sword to Delhi, Lahore, or Seringapatam, and whom the new custom of primogeniture, as adopted in Oude, will more and more throw loose on society. There are the surplus members of even those families in which the equal division of property prevails, who can find nothing to do in attending to the paternal estates nor in trading, or who have a dislike to such duties. There are the sons of merchants who have become rich, and who, in India as in England, are attracted to the land or waste the substance their fathers have so laboriously collected. There is a large proportion of the youths educated in our colleges, who know that they are fit for higher duties than those of a keranee. Not only as a matter of political expediency should we offer a career to all such, lest they carve one out for themselves to the detriment of the peace of the empire, but we have in them the material of economically governing our vast territories. Asiatic society contains a far larger proportion of restless, clever, and daring "Bohemians" than the refined peoples of the West. We must disarm them of their danger, we ought to turn their abilities to account in our own service. The career we may offer them is twofold—civil or military.

With a few exceptions the native officials whom we at present employ are the dregs of society. The police and revenue underlings who tortured the peasantry of Madras, the amlah and darogahs who fatten on bribes, the tehseeldars and ameens who insult and oppress native gentlemen and the poor, do more to make our rule stink in the nostrils of our subjects than forcible conversion to Christianity would effect. The corruption of the tehnovniks of Russia is honour itself to the rottenness of our whole native official class. Respectable men are defiled by entering our courts, and we dishonour ourselves and falsify our abstract theories of equality by placing laws on the Statute-book to exempt such from attendance in the courts when justice requires their presence. This is not owing so much as the Bengali papers think to the fact that the class is uneducated, nor altogether as the English press say to the fact that they are miserably paid. Both these statements are true, but education alone does not teach morality, nor will high pay prevent the unprincipled Asiatic from taking bribes. It is due still more to the fact that we have chosen our officials from the lower classes, and so made enemies of the higher. The Rajpoot chief who inherits the honours of a thousand years, finds himself insulted by, or forced to bribe, the wretched tehseeldar, who is the son of his neighbour's cowherd or shopkeeper. What we wish to see is a preference in all appointments to civil offices given to the gentry—to the old families of the district. And we rejoice to see this principle of preferring the man of high family who has a character to lose and a reputation to gain, endorsed by the Governments of India and Bombay. The order has been given that some of the younger members of the Talpoor family shall be employed as extra assistant-commissioners in Sind, either independently or under European deputy-collectors. And the measure is justified, "not only in consideration of general policy, but also because it may be made the means of effecting a financial reform, by securing a useful superior class of agency at a cost far less than the best which is now available. Moreover, there is much reason to believe that an agency of this kind in Sind, composed of a class of public officers holding the same relative position to other classes as the native deputy-magistrates and deputy-collectors do elsewhere, but with the additional advantage of good birth and great local influence and knowledge, might lead to some increase in the land revenue of the province." It is not enough to tell the natives they have a chance of sitting in Legislative Councils or on the bench of High Courts. What are such prizes to so many millions? The educated native of good or noble birth must be interested, and find a career, in the civil administration of the country.

But for a large number a military life alone has attractions. Of such we may truly say that, if not for us, they will one day be against us. As in our civil administration we have hitherto used, and are now using, the offscourings of native society, so in our army the only natives who have received, or now receive, commissions, are superannuated sepoys. But now that the native army is to approximate more and more to the irregular system, each corps having only six English officers, and seniority being departed from in promotion, the native officers will necessarily have more power. Not only should such power be legalised, but it should be offered to the younger sons of our feudatories. Let the brother, the son, or the nephew of such a chief as Kuppoothulla enter our army as ensign or cornet, rise through the grades to command at least a troop or company associated with an English captain, draw his pay at a rate proportioned to that of the English officers, and look forward to his pension at the end of a certain term of service, his name appearing in the "Army List." We do not overlook the danger. But such men will exercise power in any case, and it is better that it should be regulated, supervised, and watched, carefully, though not with ostentatious suspicion, on our side. And the danger would be converted into a great political benefit, if, as we have so often urged, our native regiments were called on to take their turn of service in the colonies from Malta to the West Indies and the Cape.

On what conditions should such a career—civil or military—be offered, and subject to what checks? The first, in which all will agree, is—education in English. That, as the mutiny showed, is at once a test and a security of loyalty. It will not of itself teach a man to do justly and love mercy, but it will make him amenable to the public opinion of all English-speaking men. As a rule, the English element has been discounted in the native officers of the Bengal army, and encouraged in those of Madras and Bombay, and with what result? The second condition or check is, that there shall be no competition between Native and European. The moment that is allowed, heart-burnings begin, race animosities spring up, the native becomes disloyal, the European indignant and uncontrollable, and the doom of the British raj is sealed. There was a theory that natives might enter the medical service. A few, chiefly Christians, put it to the test, went to England, and returned with a commission in their pockets, to their own discontent and the annoyance of the authorities. The theory exploded, and our rulers preferred the inconsistency of proclaiming an impossible equality without practising it. Can we wonder that the whole native community was indignant? There is a theory that any subject of the Crown, and therefore an Asiatic, may enter the Civil Service by competition. Were it tried to any extent, the same result would follow. It is true that under the new Act all natives may be appointed to covenant offices, for all have been seven years in India, and would find the professional examinations trifling. But even the wildest Governor-general would not make any such appointments to places where honour and high character as well as intelligence were required, nor would the Home authorities sanction them. Still, the fact that natives may hold high offices irritates both classes. The native thinks he is wronged by exclusion from what is his right, the European is insulted by the claims of a conquered and idolatrous race to rule over him. Equality in theory is a running sore in the Government of India; equality in practice means the exclusion of the English from India. But proclaim two equalities—one of natives who shall receive their share of honours and emoluments in positions where they can do only good, and the other of Europeans in offices where the statesmanship of the Englishman, the energy and intelligence of the Anglo-Saxon, and the honour, justice, truth, and lofty ideal of the Christian are needed. Then competition is at an end, both are satisfied, and the country is ruled wisely and well. But, unlike the Dutch in Java, who pursue this policy, we would say to the native, "You are not for ever confined to your own class of duties, honours, and emoluments. You may step over into those of the Englishman by the bridge of Christianity."—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SLAVERY IN BENGAL.—The Shoma Prokash gives further information as to the bond-slaves of Bengal. "The largest number is at Chittagong, where male slaves are called golams, and female slaves bandis. There is a difference, however, between the slaves of Chittagong and those of Vikramapore. The former may have property, and accumulate money, either by husbandry or in the service of others who are not their masters, to whom, however, they give a fourth part of their income. They are bound by this chain for many generations. The condition of the slaves of Vikramapore is similar to those of Negro slaves. In 1854, when Lord Dalhousie went to Chittagong, some of the zemindars of the district memorialised his Lordship for legalising slavery. The petition, of course, was not granted."

NAVIGATION OF THE UPPER INDUS.—A correspondent of the Times of India says the project for navigating the Upper Indus, above Mooltan, and the Punjab rivers is likely to be delayed, or the extent at first intended shortened. "It is believed the Government steamers and flats now running on the Indus are unavailable for the Punjab, as their draught is over two-and-a-half feet. There is a rumour that if the navigation scheme be set aside for the present, a project for laying down an extensive tramway from Mooltan to Jhelum, &c., will be proposed."

BRIGADIER GENERAL RENNY is about to vacate the command of the Oude division, and leave India for England. Major General J. MacDuff succeeds.

KNOWLEDGE WITHOUT FAITH.—The Twenty-third Report of the Benares Church Mission contains a few note worthy facts. Mrs. Dauble's attempt to introduce the Zenana Mission failed, "the owner of the house in which one school was held being threatened with excommunication." Mr. Leupolt says the mutiny has not changed Benares in a missionary sense. Jaynair's Institution, the Mission College, contains 443 pupils, of whom 150 learn English. The following is characteristic of the combined moral weakness and intellectual ability of the Asiatic. On the occasion of an examination, the Hon. Mr. Edmonstone called on the Persian class to read the 53rd chapter of Isaiah, and after praising their accent and pronunciation, expressed his surprise at the knowledge of the Holy Scriptures possessed by the boys. One of them having proved from various passages of the Old and New Testaments that the prophecies contained in the chapter could only refer to Christ, was asked by the Lieutenant-Governor whether he believed what he was saying, to which he replied at once, "be shak" (undoubtedly), when his honour immediately inquired if the boy were a Christian, and seemed surprised to learn that he was not.

RAILWAY CHAPLAIN.—The Phoenix mentions that the Rev. Thomas Lingley has been appointed minister of the railway station of Monghyr, on a salary of Rs. 100 a month.

CASTE PREJUDICES.—Baboos Prosunno Coomarr Tagore and Rama Prosad Roy are the ablest of the English speaking natives of Bengal. Their relatives, Dwarkanauth Tagore and Rammohun Roy, both broke caste by visiting England. The son of the former is a Christian and the Professor of Hindoo Law in University College, London. He himself is assistant clerk in the Legislative Council, and will, doubtless, have a seat in the Bengal Legislature, while Rama Prosad Roy is acting as legal remembrancer, and may sit on the bench of the High Court of Bengal. Yet the latter recently returned to orthodoxy by squandering thousands of rupees on a shradh. And the correspondent of a native paper tells us that Prosunno has also gone back to "caste." His family, though high Brahmins, was polluted by an ancestor of theirs who served a Nawab, and "having smelt the Mussulman's dinner" was degraded. Prosunno has recently taken advantage of the marriage of his granddaughter to invite, and load with gifts, the leading Brahminical families. "On the day of the marriage, hundreds of ghutlucks and Koolin lords, with their respected dols, repaired to the Baboo's house, and waited till the marriage was formally completed."

SUBORDINATE MAGISTRATES, N.W.P.—A Governments Gazette (N.W.P.), Extraordinary, gives the appointment in these provinces of Magistrates under Section 23 of the Criminal Procedure Code. All Assistants to Magistrates, all Assistant Commissioners, and all Deputy Magistrates, under Section 8. Regulation VI. of 1803, and Section 20, Regulation IX. of 1807, are invested with the powers of a subordinate Magistrate of the 1st Class. By Section 22, officers of this class have power to award imprisonment to the extent of six months, or fine up to two hundred rupees, or both. All officers exercising the special powers of an Assistant under Clause 3. Section 2, Regulation III. of 1821, are invested with the powers of a subordinate Magistrate, of the 2nd Class. Such officers have power to award imprisonment not exceeding one month or fine not exceeding fifty rupees, or both. All existing magistrates or joint magistrates will exercise the powers of a magistrate under the Criminal Code. They are invested with power to imprison for two years and less and fine to the extent of 1,000 rupees. By Section 39 of the Code European, British subjects can be committed for trial or held to bail by justices of the peace only; but, by the two subsequent sections, any magistrate has the power to arrest or hold to bail a European British subject. Should the magistrate consider that there is sufficient ground for proceeding, he is to forward the arrested person to a justice of the peace, or admit him to bail for his appearance before such officer.

INDIAN IRON.—Mr. Dillner, the Swedish Manager of the "North of India Kumaon Iron Work Company," has arrived in India. The Company has a vast field before it. The only obstacle it will find at first will be the want of speedy carriage to the line of railway. The Company expect to supply all the cast iron works for the Rohilcund railway. With eight working months in the year they expect a total out-turn of 1,440 tons, equal to 40,320 maunds of pig, which, if disposed of to Roorkee, will give a profit of one rupee eight annas per maund—say rupees sixty thousand on the whole; but if this pig is converted into castings, the profits will be greatly enhanced. The iron manufactured has been pronounced in Europe of unexceptionable quality, equal to any charcoal cold blast manufactured in Europe. The capital of the company is Rs. 4,65,000 in 465 shares. The trustees and thirty-five shareholders are almost exclusively members of the Indian services in the N. W. provinces. The furnace works are at Kaledoongee, Dicheowree, Koorpataul, and Ramghur. The experiment is one of great importance to India and is full of hope.

LORD STANLEY'S ENGINEERS.—Eleven of what are technically known as Lord Stanley's Engineers, for the Public Works Department, have arrived in India. They are said to be superior men to the mass of their predecessors.

OPERATION OF THE INCOME-TAX.—Really we (Delhi Gazette) cannot wonder at the seeds of deep aversion and discontent which have been sown and are bearing bitter fruit among the native population by the income-tax, perhaps the one measure of all others ever introduced in India since the English first made their appearance here the least adapted to the circumstances of the country. A case has been brought to our notice in which a man, a native carpenter who earns Rs. 12 a month, has been forced to resign his post and leave the place with his whole family in consequence of being assessed for the income-tax at Rs. 20. He was first assessed at Rs. 24, but on representation got it reduced to Rs. 20. We are told, moreover, that the people at the place where this occurred are groaning under over-assessment. This happens at a place where there is an English superior to bring it to our notice—what of others where there are no English superiors? The place we allude to is Muttra. Let Government beware! The income-tax is entering like iron into the souls of the people. The worm trodden turns at last. Under the present system no real supervision can be had over the work of the assessors. Here and there a man may complain, but the bulk bear in silence and foster the wrongs they suffer in their hearts. Sooner or later the Government will hear of it in a way they will not like, if they take not warning in time.

PESHAWUR, Dec. 27.—The presentation of the Victoria Cross to Lieutenant-colonel Brown, C.B., of 2nd Punjab Cavalry, took place as announced on Friday last, at 3 P.M., in presence of the whole garrison which was assembled to witness the ceremony on the parade ground of the 8th Native Infantry. The force consisted of the C. Battery Royal Horse Brigade; 7th Battery 11th Brigade, Royal Artillery; 5th Battery 22nd Brigade, Royal Artillery, 21st Hussars; 2nd Bengal Cavalry; 11th Bengal Cavalry; 1st Battalion 7th Royal Fusiliers; 93rd Sutherland Highlanders; 1st, 8th, and 14th Native Infantry. Major-general Sir Sidney Cotton addressed Colonel Brown in the following words:—"By order of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, I am permitted to place the Victoria Cross on your breast; and I can assure you I feel almost as much pride and pleasure in presenting it to you as you must feel in receiving it. Long may you live to enjoy this and the other honours which have been conferred upon you, and which you have so well merited; and when, by the will of Heaven, and the common destiny of our nature, you are removed to another and a better world, your Cross will be left as an imperishable monument of your gallant deeds; and it will be handed down with pride and exultation to your children's children."

INDIAN RAILWAYS.—The Calcutta Gazette publishes, in compliance with a request of Bengal Chamber of Commerce, a statement showing the financial position of the several guaranteed railway companies quoad the Government. We thus summarise it:—

CAPTAIN A. H. PATERSON is appointed an Honorary Assistant Magistrate in Patna.

LUCKNOW GIRLS' SCHOOL.—The Governor-General in Council has sanctioned a monthly grant in aid of Rs. 100 to the Lucknow Girls' School.

LIEUTENANT COLONEL C. DOUGLAS, of the Artillery, has been appointed Director General of Telegraphs in India.

LOSS OF THE "THOMAS SPARKS."—The Hurkaru reports the total loss of the British barque Thomas Sparks, 487 tons, from Calcutta to London, to call at St. Helena, with a cargo of rice, linseed, jute, and a few hides. The vessel left Calcutta on the morning of Dec. 18th, in tow of a steam tug, under pilotage charge of Mr. A. S. Ritchie. She arrived at Culpee the same evening, and there discharged the steamer. On the 20th, in proceeding down the Rangafulla Channel, she grounded about 4 P.M., and on the flood tide again floated; but, as she was making so much water, it became necessary to endeavour to beach her, but owing to the deep water alongside the beach, this was found impracticable, and she now lies sunk, with her lower masts under water.

COMMANDS A-BEGGING.—The commands of the nine new line regiments are still vacant, and going a-begging, and we really cannot see how they are to be filled up except by the promotion, on account of the necessity of the case, of some of the late Company's infantry officers who have taken general service, and this would be without precedent. No Queen's lieutenant-colonels will, as can be easily understood, take these regiments, as they are non-purchase corps, and the change would involve a loss of some eight or nine thousand pounds, as a general rule, few lieutenant-colonels attaining that rank at a lower figure. Meantime, the new regiments are, up to the present moment, in a most loose and nondescript condition, without any real commanding officers; for those actually commanding them have all, we believe, elected for local service, and will go the moment the nominations to replace them are made; and the corps are seriously suffering, and, for the time deteriorating, from this state of things. We hear that many of the non-commissioned officers and men of the three Bengal regiments much regret parting with their former officers, and say that they went over to general service thinking that, when their officers advanced with them on parade, they too were going over to the line, and leading the way. The Bengal regiments have got large numbers of young officers of the general list doing duty with them; in the case of the old 2nd Fusiliers, we believe, as many as thirty. The supply from England ought surely to be stopped. —Englishman.

ACCIDENT TO SIR HUGH ROSE.—"The Commander-in-Chief left Sealkote on the 20th of December, to pay a friendly visit to the Maharajah of Kashmir. On the evening of the same day his Excellency reviewed the Maharajah's troops, and, with his staff, dined at the palace. The next morning the Maharajah paid his Excellency a visit, and the whole party proceeded some ten miles into the jungle on a sporting excursion. The early part of the day was devoted to shooting, and after a sumptuous luncheon on the ground, the real sport of the day began. His Highness the Maharajah, with his Excellency and staff, accompanied by a number of horsemen, dogs, &c., rode to the jungle side, into which some five hundred beaters were thrown. After about a quarter of an hour a splendid sounder of pig broke, and no sooner were they going in the open than the horsemen dashed into them at full speed in every direction. Sir Hugh pursued two, which he overtook and killed, one after the other. He was then returning to the starting point, some two miles off, but had scarcely arrived, when a huge boar was seen making across country for a neighbouring nullah. His Excellency immediately gave chase, wounded the boar, and was in the act of giving him another spear, when the beast suddenly turned round and charged his horse. In doing so the boar got between the horse's legs, and in an instant horse, rider, and pig rolled in the dust. Sir Hugh was thrown with considerable force, and sustained some severe bruises, particularly in the head and knee. This unfortunate accident at once put a stop to the fun, and everybody was anxious to render any assistance in their power, conspicuous among whom was the Maharajah, who immediately ordered up his own private palanquin, in which Sir Hugh was placed, and the whole party returned to Jummoo, which they reached late at night. The next day his Excellency was obliged to keep his bed, but towards evening was well enough to receive the Maharajah, and, although a little shaken, was much better than could have been expected from the severe nature of the accident. On the 23rd the Commander-in-Chief returned to Sealkote, and proceeds to join his camp early tomorrow, some 45 miles on the Jelum road, relinquishing his plan of joining the camp via Aknoo and Birbar. I forgot to mention that Sir Hugh had the satisfaction, before leaving the field, of seeing the boar lying dead where the accident occurred. The attention of the Maharajah was beyond all praise, as well as his cordial sympathy. His conduct in the field was that of a true and daring sportsman, and he contributed his full share to the "bag," which numbered some twenty pigs killed, one way or other, on that day. —Englishman.

CAPTAIN C. F. F. CHAMBERLAIN, of the Bombay Staff Corps, late of the 20th Regiment N.I., who was some time ago removed from his appointment as superintendent of the city police at Lucknow, in consequence of his conduct having been disapproved of by the Governor-general in connection with the Ramdial libel case, has been appointed to the command of the 22nd Punjab Infantry. Captain Chamberlain is a brother of the celebrated Brigadier-general Neville Chamberlain, who so distinguished himself in the Punjab campaign, and throughout the mutinies in 1857-58; and he is himself a distinguished officer, having served with the Persian expeditionary force on its march to Borazjoon. He was present at the battle of Kooshab, and at the capture of Mohumra, on the 26th of March, 1857, for which he wears a medal and clasp. He also served in the Deccan against the rebels during the mutiny in 1858, and was present at the engagement at Mandwa, where he was severely wounded. He afterwards went round, on the invitation of Sir J. Outram, the then chief commissioner, to Oude, where he did good service in organising the police force in that province, and was rewarded for his energy and zeal by being appointed to the important post of superintendent of police of the city of Lucknow, at that time one of the most difficult and dangerous that can well be imagined, the whole country having only just been recovered from the rebels after one of the most violent struggles in which the British Government had ever been engaged in India.

BENGAL MILITARY FUND.—According to a Calcutta journal, "The fiat has gone forth against the Bengal Military Fund. Government has stopped the vital stream of pecuniary supply at its spring; and the main flood will soon begin to shrink and dry up. An order has come out from England, to the effect that chaplains now and hereafter entering the service are not to be allowed to subscribe to the Military Fund; and the same order applies to young officers."

THE CAWNPORE WELL.—A correspondent of the Lahore Chronicle describes the present condition of the Cawnpore Well. "The earth has been raised by a gentle slope round the old mouth of the well to a height of about twelve or fifteen feet, on the summit of which, immediately above the spot where the bodies of those massacred lie, stands the gradually rising monument. It is now breast high, completed to the moulding which surmounts the inscription. Standing on the base of the monument, and facing the church, the eye alights, on the left, on a cluster of green mounds, which at present, with untableted simplicity, denote the graves of those of the 64th who were killed in action."

LIEUT. COLONEL H. DALY, of Hodson's Horse, has been appointed to the command of the Central India Horse.

OPIMUM.—The average prices of Bengal opium realised at the auction sale, held in Calcutta on Monday, the 6th January, were, for Patna opium, Rs. 1,532; Benares do., Rs. 1,450.

MEMORIAL TO COL. BAIRD SMITH.—The Hurkaru believes "it is intended to invite the assistance of the public in the formation of a fund for the erection in Calcutta of a monument to the memory of the late lamented Colonel Baird Smith, and of a mural tablet in the church of his native parish of Laswade."

INSTALLATION OF THE YOUNG MAHARANA OF MEYWAR.—Camp Oodeypore, Dec. 27.—On the 16th instant, Suroop Sing, the Maharana of Meywar, died, and his favourite slave girl sacrificed herself on his funeral pyre. A few weeks before the late Maharana's death, he adopted his nephew, Sumbhoo Sing, a lad of about fourteen years of age, and who really would have been the rightful heir had Suroop Sing died before naming anybody. The Supreme Government recognised this adoption, and in order that the coronation of the chief Rajpoot Prince in India should be done in style, Major-general Lawrence, C.B., agent to Governor-general for Rajpootana, determined personally to instal him. The chiefs and thakors of Meywar, who had not assembled for half a century, were summoned to attend, and the Neemuch moveable column, to add eclat to the occasion, was ordered to Oodeypore. I cannot help mentioning here the absurdity of rendering these columns comparatively helpless by employing the carriage, especially kept up for them, on other work; this was very plainly shown on the present occasion, and it was found necessary greatly to curtail the number of the infantry, both European and native, substituting Silidar Cavalry in their place. So much for flying columns for service; and I think I am pretty right in saying that since the organisation of these moveable field forces at our principal stations, this is the first time one has ever been called upon to march. The troops arrived on Monday last, two days after the political authorities, and consisted of the head quarters of the 2nd Light Cavalry, two guns 6-13 Royal Artillery, one company from H.M.'s 106th Regiment or 2nd Bombay Light Infantry, and one ditto from the 13th Regiment N.I., the whole under the command of Lieut.-col. Taylor, 2nd Cavalry. Yesterday was determined upon by priests and wise men as the most auspicious day, and 4 p.m. was the hour chosen. Preparations for the darbar had been going on some days before, and all was in readiness at the appointed time. At 3.30 p.m. the troops were drawn up, forming a living street from the palace gateway to the darbar tent. The effect was very imposing and most creditable to the officer commanding; and at that time precisely, General Lawrence, accompanied by Major R. J. Taylor, c.b., Political Agent, Meywar; Brigadier Stiles, commanding Neemuch Brigade, and the Agent to Governor-general's Assistants, Captains Bruce and Wimberly, and staff, the whole cortege, mounted on elephants gorgeously caparisoned, left the residency under deafening salutes from the State guns. The elephant procession, followed by part of the Seik Cavalry of the Decole Irregular Force, then moved towards the palace, and at the entrance thereto, the agent to the Governor-general and his suite dismounted, and walked slowly towards the young Rana and his chiefs, assembled in open darbar to receive him. Here the scene defies my powers of relation; suffice it to say, that the soul-stirring music of the cavalry band, the shrill blast of their trumpets, the variegated colours of the uniform, and picturesque costume of the thousands, decked out in their gayest attire, to witness the installation of their adopted sovereign, was most pleasing to behold. As General Lawrence took his seat, the Royal Artillery fired a salute of fifteen guns, on the completion of which he rose, and in a firm, loud voice addressed the young chief as follows:—"Sumbhoo Singhjee.—In the name, and on behalf of His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-general of India, I hail you as the Maharana of Meywar. As the adoption was not contrary to your religion, nor the usages of your race, and further as it appeared that you were the rightful heir, the British Government, for its sole object is the tranquillity of the country, the happiness of the people of India, has recognised the adoption. I have, therefore, summoned all your feudatories to witness your installation, which is conducted under the auspices of the British Government. Your Highness is yet young, and therefore unable to direct the affairs of the State; but I have arranged for the nomination of a Regency, under the presidency of the Political agent. Whatever information your Highness requires, will be readily afforded; the revenue tribute, and other accounts will be duly explained, and the political agent, who has the welfare of the State at heart, will always be happy to advise, instruct, and help you. In every way be guided by him, and I am sure Meywar will prosper. The political agent will also endeavour to prevent any unworthy persons being associated with the Court, so that your Highness may follow in the path of the Maharanas Bheem Sing and Jowaree Sing: Maharana Sumbhoo Sing, may your reign be auspicious." A khillut of the value of Rs. 20,000, on behalf of the British Government was then brought in, and presented in due form to his Highness; and upon the Governor-general's representative decorating him with the crown jewels, the troops presented arms, and the artillery thundered forth a salute of 17 guns. The General then addressed the chiefs as follows:—"Sirdars of Meywar,—This is a most auspicious day for your country. For many years Meywar has never seen so many chiefs assembled round their king. In most differences there are errors on both sides. This is a day of joy. I will not stop now to inquire the causes which have held Meywar so long in such an unsatisfactory state. You are assembled this day to do homage to the Maharana Sumbhoo Sing. Let the past be forgotten. In future pay your tribute regularly, and render becoming service to your sovereign. It is not the policy of the British Government to interfere between rajahs and their subjects; but it is hoped that all differences will now be arranged, and henceforth, if you are true to your Rana, he will be just to you." All the business ceremonials were now accomplished, and after a short interval of dancing and music, regarding which the least said I think the better, the agent to the Governor-general took leave of the young Prince, and left the palace. Thus ended the installation of Maharana Sumbhoo Sing of Meywar. The moveable column will shortly return to Neemuch; the conduct of the men has been most praiseworthy, and the political authorities are much pleased. No complaints have been made, and by the good arrangements of their officers I think I may safely say that not a single peacock or pigeon family has been placed in mourning from their stay here. The agent to the Governor-general will soon follow, his destination being Jhalraputtun, whither he is bound for the purpose of being present at the approaching marriage between the Maharao Rajah of Ulwur, and the Princess of Jhallawar.—Times of India.

RAJPOOTANA.—A firman from the Queen, and a khillut from the Governor-general, accompanied by a sunnud, conferring forty one villages on his Highness the Maharajah of Bekaneer, were presented to him by Captain G. Hamilton, assistant agent Governor-general for Rajpootana, on the 10th December. Nothing was omitted which could give eclat. The elephant on which the Queen's letter was placed was covered with a magnificent housing of cloth of gold, on which was a large howdah covered with massive gold. This was accompanied by two elephants, dressed almost as magnificently, on one of which was Captain Hamilton, on the other Captain Coleridge, of H.H.'s service; after them came a number of suwars in brilliant uniform. This cavalcade was met by the Maharajah about three miles from his fort. He was accompanied by all his sirdars and mussudies, and by regiments of cavalry and infantry, with a battery of horse artillery; the whole being preceded by numbers of kettledrums and zumbooraks, the latter firing as fast as they could be loaded. As soon as the Maharajah arrived near the elephant on which the firman was, he rose up in his howdah amidst the acclamations of the spectators and the roar of the guns, of which fifty-one rounds were fired, and made a succession of deep salaams towards the firman. The elephant bearing it was then moved to the front of the procession, and, followed by the Maharajah, next to whom were Captain Hamilton and Captain Coleridge, slowly proceeded towards Captain Hamilton's camp, where a large tent was pitched for his reception. On arrival at this tent another salute of fifty-one guns was fired, and the Maharajah went on to the fort, about five hundred yards off, while a firman remained in the tent for nearly an hour, after which it was replaced on the elephant, and accompanied by Capt. Hamilton the whole suwaree proceeded to the fort. It was met by the Maharajah at the foot of a broad flight of steps leading up to a court in front of the hall of audience, and on its arrival there it was placed on the throne, and a nuzzer of 101 gold mohurs was presented to it by the Maharajah. After this he sat down, as did Captain Hamilton and the sirdars. Captain Hamilton in a short time arose (the Maharajah following his example) and read a letter from General Lawrence, C.B., A.G.G., deputing him to present the letter and khillut. Captain Hamilton then read the Queen's letter aloud in English, during which a salute of 101 guns was fired, and the Union Jack hoisted on the flagstaff of the fort; a translation was then read by one of the Rajah's ministers. After this Captain Hamilton made a very appropriate speech to the Maharajah, and all the state officers, mussudies, &c., made nuzzers to the Maharajah. Captain Hamilton then returned to his camp, still accompanied by the whole suwaree, and as he left the fort another salute was fired for him. Altogether the ceremony was very imposing and very gratifying to the Maharajah, who did everything in his power to augment the grandeur of the scene.—Delhi Gazette.

THE SUMBULPORE EXPEDITION.—The command of the expedition, which will consist of the ninth battalion of the Military Police and 100 sabres of the Behar Horse from Chota Nagpore, and the 8th battalion of Military Police from Cuttack, will be entrusted to Major Rattray, Inspector of the Military Police battalions. Major Rattray, we understand, left Chota Nagpore on the 5th Dec.; and will probably reach Sumbulpore by the close of the month, where the Commissioner of the Cuttack division has been for some days with the men of the 8th battalion. Pending the amalgamation of these forces, a notification is to be published stating for what purpose these Military Police have been collected, showing how the rebels have persistently refused to accept the repeated invitations of pardon and mercy which, from time to time have been held out to them, and calling upon all the loyal inhabitants of the province, more particularly those of position influence, and to come forward and assist the Government in bringing these disturbers of the peace to punishment, and in establishing suitable measures for the permanent preservation of order and tranquillity in that part of the country. On the arrival of Major Rattray at Sumbulpore the Commissioner of the Cuttack division will lay before him all available information regarding the probable position of the rebels, the means of communication, and such other matters as may appear to be of service to him in arranging his plan of operation. In all matters of a mere military character Major Rattray's control will be unquestioned; but all civil matters must be decided by either Major Impey, the Deputy Commissioner, or the Commissioner of the Cuttack division; and for this purpose it will be necessary that either the Commissioner or the Deputy Commissioner should accompany Major Rattray in all his movements against the rebels. Forty elephants have been obtained from the Commissariat for baggage purpose; it is anticipated, therefore, that there will be no trouble in respect to carriage supplies of various kinds which will, of course, be necessary, and it will be the duty of the civil officer accompanying the force to see that these are procured and paid for at proper rates, without oppression. It will be most convenient, perhaps, to arrange for the despatch of all supplies from the Sudder station. If it should be found necessary in the pursuit of the rebels to cross the Sumbulpore district and to enter Singhboom, or any portion of the country under the authority of the Commissioner of Chota Nagpore, that officer will make the same arrangements in his division for a civil officer to accompany the force. It is not in the contemplation of Government to appoint a special officer to this duty without regard to local jurisdiction, as it can be best performed by the officer of the district whose local knowledge and influence must, on such occasions, be more valuable than those of any other person. In conclusion, the Lieutenant-Governor instructs that, whilst impressing upon the Commissioner of the Cuttack division the extreme importance of using the most active measures against these rebels, the Commissioner should always hold himself in readiness to receive any sincere offers of submission which may be made to him. In such cases he should explain to the people concerned that, considering the protracted resistance they have shown to the Government, the Commissioner is unable to receive them on any other terms except those of entire submission to the Government orders, and that each case will be disposed of on its individual merits, due regard, however, being given to the circumstances, whenever such may occur, of those persons who may deliver themselves up to lawful authority.—Englishman.

PAPER CURRENCY ESTABLISHMENT.—The following appointments are contemplated by the Supreme Government for the Paper Currency Offices:—A Chief Commissioner of Issue for all India on a salary of 3,000 rupees, and who is probably to be the Mintmaster for the time being; a Commissioner for Bengal, who is to be a member of the Civil Service on a salary of 2,000 rupees; and a Deputy Commissioner, to be selected either from the Covenanted or Uncovenanted Service as the case may be, on a salary of 1,500 rupees per mensem.

CAPTAIN RENNY, commanding 3rd Sikhs, has become involved in a correspondence with Government, which may produce unpleasant results. It appears that prior to his marching down with the regiment from Darjeeling he made the usual indent for carriage, and was furnished with a greater number of bullocks, carts, and coolies than were applied for; but, notwithstanding this, his men, either because they had an excess of baggage or were intent on mischief and plunder, committed the most unwarrantable outrages on the road. They seized the cattle and carts of the peasantry wherever they could lay hands upon them; and as in many cases these have never found their way back again, the suffering entailed upon the poor owners may be readily conceived. One hundred and twenty carts going up to Darjeeling with Government stores were coolly emptied of their contents, which were strewn on the wayside and appropriated by the reckless Sikhs, who appear to have laid hands upon all that they came across. Amongst other small articles of loot they walked off with an elephant, which has not since been heard of. The Superintendent of Darjeeling has written upon the subject in the strongest terms, and the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal has expressed opinions most condemnatory of the conduct of Captain Renny. It appears that he neglected to observe the usual precaution of writing in advance to the civil authorities of the stations through which he passed, for the requisite assistance in the way of transport; and the Government of Bengal sees no palliating circumstances for the acts that have been committed. Numerous petitions have been sent in from the ryots narrating their troubles in the most piteous language, and it is feared that much inconvenience will be sustained in future by other travellers, seeing that the inhabitants on the line of route are likely to desert their homes. The proceedings have been forwarded to the Commander-in-Chief, and will eventually come under the cognizance of the Government of India.—Englishman.

PAY OF STAFF CORPS.—On a reconsideration of the question as to the mode of adjusting the pay of an officer of the staff corps, His Excellency the Governor-general in Council is pleased to decide that when an officer of the staff corps is employed in any civil post, his salary shall be wholly charged to the Civil Department, and that when he is employed in any military post, or drawing staff corps pay unattached, his salary shall be wholly charged to the Military Department.

MAJOR-GENERAL SIR SIDNEY COTTON, whose five years' tour on the staff will expire in June next, has been recommended by the Commander-in-Chief for an extension of his command until Nov., 1862, on account of his distinguished services while commanding the Peshawur division.

THE FRENCH OVERLAND COMPANY, the Indian branch of the Messageries Impériales, have entered upon a long lease of the grounds and premises on the banks of the river known as the "Retreat," No. 23, Garden Reach, belonging to T. Teil, Esq., on which operations are to commence at once, for the erection of the necessary sheds, stores, jetties, &c., in readiness for the arrival of the first of their steamers some four months hence.

MILITARY SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT.—His Excellency the Governor-general in Council is pleased to make the following appointment:—Lieutenant-colonel H. W. Norman, C.B., now acting as Adjutant-general of the Army, to be Secretary to the Government of India in the Military Department, in succession to Major-general Sir Richard Birch, K.C.B., who retires from the service on the 31st instant. The following arrangements are made pending the arrival of Lieutenant-colonel Norman at the Presidency, or until further orders:—Lieutenant-colonel Atkinson, Deputy Secretary, will officiate as Secretary to the Government of India, in the Military Department; Major Burne, First Assistant, will officiate as Deputy Secretary; and Major Bacon, Second Assistant, as First Assistant-secretary.

ESTATES IN SYLHET.—The absurdity of our revenue administration may be seen occasionally from the advertisements of sales of land in the Gazette. In Sylhet, several "estates" are offered for sale at the upset price of two annas and a half, the Government rent being one pice annually. We do not envy the collector his duties. In Chittagong there are thousands of estates of this kind, which so annoy the officials that they are offered to the ryots in freehold, but in vain. The ryots have an idea that, as tenants of the Sirkar, no man can harm them, and they have a high status.

THE BANK OF BENGA has declared a dividend at the rate of nine and a quarter per cent. per annum, free of Income-tax, for the half-year ending the 31st December, 1861.

MR. F. COURTENAY.—The Mofussilite gives it as a rumour that Mr. Frank Courtenay, private secretary to the late Lord Dalhousie, will probably be Lord Elgin's private secretary.

LUCKNOW PRIZE MONEY.—The Supreme Government have authorised the immediate issue of a first distribution of the Lucknow prize money at the rate of seventeen rupees each share.

MADRAS.

THE CHIEF COMMISSIONERSHIP OF BRITISH BURMAH.

More than a year ago Colonel Phayre, Commissioner of Pegu, was summoned to Calcutta, to confer with the Governor-general on the subject of the amalgamation of Arracan, Pegu, and Tenasserim into the one province of British Burmah, under a Chief Commissioner. He came, he conferred, he returned. A commission was sent to the spot to pave the way for the reform by reducing expenditure. Captain Duncan was appointed to introduce the new system of constabulary, and has accomplished his task. Major Hopkinson was removed from Moulmein, being the only personal obstacle in the way. No official proposal was made, no administrative reform proposed, no change of any kind suggested to which the stereotyped answer was not returned—"wait till the amalgamation." The very word became as hideous to the residents as it has been to the Indian services, brooding over them like a heavy cloud which might burst in blessings, but was more likely at first to deluge with disaster. Still no amalgamation came. The cold season of 1861 came round, and we were enabled to announce to our readers that Lord Canning would himself visit the province to arrange all details in person. Meanwhile, another amalgamation was carried out, another Chief Commissionership was created—one younger in conception and of which less had been said. The Central Provinces became a fact on the map of India. But misfortune was added to dilatoriness. Death stepped in, and kept Lord Canning in Calcutta.

At last, just as long deferred hope settled down into despair, the summons came for Colonel Phayre and Major Newmarch, the Chief Engineer, to visit Calcutta. They have arrived, and will leave with the scheme in their pocket. Delay has made its accomplishment more difficult. A year ago Colonel Fytche succeeded Major Hopkinson in Moulmein, expecting in a week or two to surrender the independence of a Commissioner subject only to the Foreign Office, for subordination to the Rangoon authorities. But he has enjoyed a year of power and of the extra 500 rupees monthly which accompany it, and he is of course averse to the change. It will now, however, really be carried out. Colonel Phayre will be appointed Chief Commissioner of British Burmah—why not call it Dalhousie?—retaining, for economy's sake, his position as Commissioner of Pegu. Thus he will be able to hold diplomatic intercourse with the King of Ava in a manner worthy of the nation he represents. Major Sparks, as Judicial Commissioner, will relieve him of all judicial sessions and appellate work, except in cases of life and death. Colonel Fytche will remain as Commissioner of Tenasserim, and Major Verner continue to preside over Arracan; both no longer as independent units, but as parts of a uniform, a simple and an economical administration. Other reforms will probably follow in the shape of decent courts for the numerous English settlers, and a fair expenditure on such public works as roads and wharves. A new vigour and honesty will be infused into the Government of Arracan and Tenasserim which will produce the most beneficial results for the State and the public.

But besides the details of the amalgamation there are other important subjects connected with the prosperity of the new provinces, which the Governor-general will find it advisable to discuss with Colonel Phayre. The line of frontier customs should be abolished. These customs yielded £57,897 last year. The revenue of Pegu alone has grown in so many other items that this sum can be surrendered. And if given up there will result an increased revenue from the great increase of trade between native and British Burmah. Talk of undeveloped resources!—there is a wealth of wood, gold, iron, coal, earth, oil and cotton in the King of Ava's country, of which, if we can tempt it to our ports, we shall reap the fruits. If we maintain our inland line of customs, not only this trade, but that of the Chinese frontier, the Shan tribes and Siam will be driven down the Cambodia to Saigon, where the French will enjoy it. Another question connected with this, is that of sending exploring parties towards China. Has Esmok any existence? Will it be always necessary to send our ships round the dangerous peninsula of Malacca, up through the typhoons of the China sea, and by the delicate navigation of the Yang-tse river, to reach the original tea and silk countries of the East, when we might penetrate to the spot, by a direct line of five hundred miles, partly through our own territory? We have little faith in the proposed Isthmus of Kraa canal, the construction of which the Tenasserim Commissioner has again been urging on Government. The abolition of the frontier customs should be made with the King of Ava a condition of his not only allowing but encouraging exploring parties of British officers to enter the southern provinces of China from his dominions. Then, moreover, roads will be made, rivers opened, and the commerce of China, Ava, and Cambodia, attracted to Rangoon and Moulmein. It should be our policy to make these ports the natural outlets of China on the west, as Hong Kong and Shanghai are on the east.

Lastly, there is the labour question. In vain does the fertile soil of Burmah invite capital if it cannot attract labour. It is said of the East that "every prospect pleases and only man is vile." But here even vile man is denied. The difficulty will be partly met, we believe, by so drafting the Contract Law as to make it apply to labour as well as produce. The law will probably bind imported labourers to their employers, as in the colonies, for a term of three years. But Colonel Phayre will not see that the difficulty is to get the labourers. If private enterprise does not prove sufficient in Ceylon or the Mauritius without Indian emigration laws and colonial "labour ordinances," still less will it avail in Burmah, a country also to be reached by sea. Sir George Clerk has planted labourers in the wastes of Kandeish, why cannot Colonel Phayre transport them to the wastes of Pegu? The Legislature shows an indecent haste to banish Indian coolies to the colonies, why not utilise them for its own fertile provinces? Open Burmah labour depots in Calcutta and Madras, appoint emigration agents, subject the depots to the same rules as exist in the case of the colonies, and we shall have the satisfaction of seeing the savages of the Chota Nagpore and Rajmahal Hills transformed into the wealthy labourers and peasantry of a province which is our own, and is yet destined to become the garden of the East.—Friend of India.

THE BANK OF MADRAS has declared a dividend for the past half-year of twenty-five rupees per share, free of Income-tax, being at the rate of five per cent. per annum. The net profit for the half-year just ended amounted to Rs. 73,010-11; and after paying the above dividend, Rs. 35,865-9-11 have been carried to the Reserved Fund.

ARMENIANS IN BURMAH.—The Rangoon Gazette says an Armenian church and school have been established in Mandalay, the capital of Burmah. The school contains thirty pupils. There are several Armenians in the King's service. He has been so anxious that the children of his nobility should receive a good education that for some years from six to ten of the young nobles have been boarders in the Calcutta Doveton College. The King has supplied labour and materials for the erection of the buildings.

THE MYSORE COMMISSION.—Captain Hay, Officiating Superintendent of the Astagram Division, to be Superintendent of the Nuggur Division, vice Colonel Porter, who retires. Captain J. Campbell, Superintendent of Police, Bangalore, to officiate as Superintendent of Astagram Division. Captain Elliott, Superintendent of Coorg, to be Superintendent of the Chittledroog Division, vice Major Cunningham, who retires. Captain McHutchin, Assistant Commissioner at Hussan, to be Superintendent of Coorg.

BURMAH.—The Bishop of Calcutta touched at Chittagong, Akyab, and Phyo on his way to Rangoon. The Rev. Mr. Rose, officiating private chaplain to the Bishop, died of dysentery on board the Moulmein. A sad accident, by which a Mr. Rice has lost his life, has occurred. Two vessels having been seen in distress, the deceased, in company with a Mr. Crisp and a couple of lascars, pushed off in a boat, which after going some distance suddenly capsized, when Mr. Rice, finding himself unable any longer to hold on, let go and sank. Smuggling flourishes in Rangoon. Volunteering does not flourish in Rangoon, only ten men, including officers, having presented themselves on parade. Though there has been a scantiness of rain towards the frontier, yet no fears are felt for the rice crop in the Promo district. The King of Burmah is irate with the officer commanding his steamer, because that officer thought it necessary to handcuff a couple of menials connected with the royal household. On an expression of his anger, the captain, second mate and a part of the crew have left the service of that potentate.

FREEMASONRY FROM AN INDIAN POINT OF VIEW.—A most ridiculous report has been got up by the native servants at Ootacamund, according to the Star, "that human heads are in requisition for the use of St. Stephen's and the Roman Catholic Chapel. So seriously do servants entertain this report, that it is with difficulty they can be induced to go out on errands after nightfall. One of our domestics swears that he was pursued by three men the other evening, for the purpose, as he believes, of getting his head. Rogues no doubt take advantage of the panic to perpetrate highway robberies. We can discover no other clue to the report in circulation than that St. John's day was approaching, and that on this day Freemasons have had processions with a banner bearing the head of John the Baptist. This is what the natives call 'thulla vettoo vatham,' that is, the religion which cuts heads."

INDIGO FROM SCINDE.—The Sindian notices the export from Kurrachee of seventy-five cases of indigo by the frigate Bird. "This is, we believe, the first large shipment of this valuable commodity from our port. We understand that it is of very superior quality, and is principally the produce of Sind. Both the soil and climate of this province are well suited for the cultivation of indigo, and it certainly seems a pity that some one does not devote a little time and money towards stimulating its production. It is now cultivated, and the subsequent manufacture carried on exclusively by natives, and so long as this is the case the yield is likely to continue small. Indigo lands along the bank of the proposed Canal Jerruck ought to be a paying speculation, and we shall be disappointed if some one does not come forward to take advantage of the chance."

THE INSURRECTION IN CANDEISH.—A letter from Maligaum, in the Bombay Gazette, gives further particulars respecting the Bheel rising in Candeish, and states that "pressing demands for more troops have arrived from the Collector of Candeish on account of the turbulence of the Bheel tribes about Shada and Sultanpoor; fifty more of the Poona Horse have left under Lieut. Owens, and the Mule Battery of Artillery, together with a Company of the 6th N.I., leave tomorrow night for the scene of action. The following European officers accompany the above, viz.: Captain Henderson and Lieut. Theobald, of the Artillery, and Lieutenants Stock and Daubeneay, of the 6th Regiment, so now there will be quite a strong force out against these wild tribes. It is reported here in the town and bazaar that there are more Bheels up this time than there have been for several years, but the why and the wherefore no one seems to know."

CAPTAIN BLYTH, of the ship Vittoria, bound from London to Bombay, died on board before her arrival, from injuries received by him during the prevalence of a severe gale on her way out.

BOMBAY CAVALRY OFFICERS.—Colonel Curtis and Captain Forbes, of the 1st Bombay Light Cavalry (Lancers), are the only officers of the Bombay Army of these grades who have elected for the new Hussar Regiments in Bengal. They will, we are informed, be appointed to the 21st Hussars: the first named to command.

DR. KANE, the Deputy Assay Master of the Bombay Mint, proceeds to Europe by the next mail on medical certificate. The senior officer on the provisional list of men qualified to succeed Dr. Kane will, we presume, look for the appointment. The list stands as follows:—Messrs. Nicolson, Smith, Glass, Bentley, Hewlett and Rustumjee Byramjee.

GOLD IN THE CARNATIC.—Mr. Le Soeuf's mission has been crowned with success, a rich gold field having been discovered by him in the Carnatic. The company which Mr. Le Soeuf represents is likely to create no small stir in the Bombay Share Market when its prospectus is announced. The shares are monopolized by less than a score of gentlemen.

MR. W. HART has been confirmed in his hitherto acting appointment of Revenue and Police Commissioner of the Southern Division. Consequent on this, Mr. Hebbert has been confirmed as a Puisne Judge of the Sudder Adawlut, and Mr. Warden as Judge and Session Judge of Surat, and as agent for the Governor at Surat.

MR. JAMES B. PEILE, Assistant Revenue Commissioner, Guzerat Division, has been appointed to act as Under Secretary to Government in the Revenue, Financial and General Departments of the Secretariat, in succession to Mr. Shaw Stewart. Mr. Peile assumed charge of his office on the 9th January.

MEDICAL PROMOTIONS.—Dr. Leith will be promoted to the grade of deputy inspector-general of hospitals, in succession to Dr. Mackenzie, C.B., who has been appointed inspector-general of hospitals, v. Scott, who went home on furlough by the last mail steamer. It is rumoured that Dr. Grierson, staff surgeon at Kurrachee, will succeed Dr. Leith in the European General Hospital at Bombay; and that Dr. Larkins will be appointed to Kurrachee, as it has been decided to abolish the office of staff surgeon and medical storekeeper at Poona.

BAHREIN.—At the last meeting of the Bombay Geographical Society a Paper was read on "Bahrein in the Persian Gulf," drawn up by Lieut. Whish, while cruising in H.M.S. Mahi, between Bahrein and Dama, to watch the chiefs of these places. Bahrein harbour is difficult to make in hazy weather, it lies so low. In coming from Bushire it is best to make it from the N.E. The place receives its name from the sea springs. Pliny makes mention of springs of fresh water found under the sea, and most probably the same as those visited by Lieut. Whish. The Bahrein Islands are mentioned in ancient geography under the names of Tyrus and Aradus, from which, according to an ancient tradition, the Phœnicians on the Mediterranean coast emigrated to the two small islands on the coast of Phœnicia, known to be the sites of the city Tyrus and Aradus.

THE NEW COUNCIL.—It has been semi-officially announced that seats in the Legislative department of the Bombay Council have been offered to the following gentlemen:—W. B. Tristram, Esq. (Remington & Co.); Rustumjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy, Esq.; H. H. the Nawab of Savanoor; Madhoorao Vittul, Dada Sahib Vinchoor; Shet Premabhai Hemabhai; Cowasjee Jehanjer, Esq.; and Juggonath Sunkersett, Esq. The Advocate General will sit ex officio.

MOONSIFFS AND SUDDER AMEENS.—The Englishman hears "that the present pecuniary jurisdiction of the Moonsiffs and Sudder Ameens of the Bombay presidency is to be reduced to the standard of the Bengal presidency; while the appellate jurisdiction of the principal Sudder Ameens is to be enlarged, so as to enable them to hear and decide, without restrictions, appeals from the decisions of Moonsiffs and Sudder Ameens. A final jurisdiction in suits of the nature specified in Act XIII. of 1860, Section 3, not exceeding twenty rupees in amount, is to be given to Moonsiffs."

"DUXINA."—The Deccan Herald describes a ceremony held in Poona called the "Duxina." Several hundred Brahmmins assemble in the town from distant parts. The word Duxina means a gift or present, given chiefly to Brahmmins learned in one or other of the Brahminical sacred books. Most of those who assembled this year were Vedics. They learn one of the Vedas by heart, and recite it, frequently without understanding a word of what they are saying. Another class consists of the Shrotriyas, Puraniks, and Shastrees. The first named are sacrificial priests. The Puraniks read and explain the Purans to the people. The Shastrees learn one or several of the Indian sciences. The most learned men come from Sattara and Kurrar. This year the meeting was presided over by Dr. Haug. He is said to have astonished the wise men with his knowledge of their lore.

THE CINCHONA PLANT.—It was feared by Mr. Markham that cinchonas would not grow on the hills of Western Bombay. We are glad to observe that the experiment has been tried, and with success. Mr. Dalziel, the Conservator of Forests, furnished Dr. Broughton with seeds sent out to him by Sir William Hooker. A spot was selected at Mahabeshwar, and the seeds were sown on the 1st of May. They came up without any difficulty, and there are now 14 thriving plants of fourteen, sixteen and eighteen inches in height. No cover was used, and the plants were sheltered by trees growing in open ground.

THE RAO OF CUTCH has had a daughter born to him—his first child. As the succession goes in the male line his brother is still heir apparent.

ARTICLES FOR THE EXHIBITION.—Three boxes of articles intended for the Great Exhibition have been sent from Kurrachee to Bombay. His Highness Meer Ali Morad has forwarded a collection of native textile fabrics, saddle cloths, fire arms, chain armour, &c. The collector of Shikarpore sends various articles of native clothing, raw cotton, indigo, hemp, and silk fibres. From Jacobabad Major Merewether forwards specimens of wool from Khelat, raw and cleaned cotton of Beloochistan, copper ore, sulphur, and indigo. In most cases it has been necessary to purchase articles from the natives, as they do not like sending them on the chance of receiving them back again.

ANGLO-INDIAN CHILDREN.—Mr. W. Walker, of Bombay, has suggested, in a letter to Sir George Clerk, that the surplus money remaining from the Famine Relief Fund should be devoted to the purpose of sending to England all the children in the Orphanage Schools of India. Bombay will send 540 children, Madras 729, and Bengal 900, or a total of 2,160 children to be divided equally into two schools, boys and girls. Children under eight years of age would be retained in the Poona Branch Infant School. The expense of sending the 208 children home would be Rs. 20,095. The income derived from subscriptions, allowances, and saving of rent of present buildings, &c., would be Rs. 60,513, which on 268 children would be £22-11-7 per head. The children in the Byculla School cost last year £22 per head, and the infants at Poona £20-6-0. Mr. Walker would "place them out in country places with good motherly dames, having children of their own, for less money, where they would be as rosy as pippins and as merry as crickets." The scheme looks very well on paper and is in itself a most excellent one, but there are many difficulties in the way of its being carried out. Mr. Walker would locate the schools in Yorkshire, "where food, fuel, and clothing are cheaper than in any other part of the world." The subject is well worthy of consideration.

IRREGULAR CAVALRY DISBANDED.—The Deccan Herald says, "We hear that it has been decided to disband the 2nd Poona Horse, the 3rd Southern Mahratta Horse, and the 4th Scinde Horse immediately. The saving thereby effected will be more apparent than real, as none of the men are to be discharged except unfits, but will be absorbed into the remaining regiments. The actual saving will be in the European officers, who will lose their staff appointments, and revert to their respective regiments. The Corps of Irregular Cavalry in this Presidency now number only 350 sabres, but on the disbanding of the three corps we have named, they will be raised to the old standard of 550 each. Sir George Clerk pointed out to the Home Government some time ago that the numerical strength of these regiments, as they are now organised, is far too weak, for it frequently happens that what with detachment duties, guards, &c., not more than a single complete troop will be found on the parade ground during a review."

THE BANK OF BOMBAY has declared a dividend at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum for the half year ending on the 31st December last.

MAJOR MALCOLM GREEN, C.B., has been appointed British Agent at Muscat in room of Lieutenant Pengelly, removed.

CAPTAIN R. F. BURTON, of the 18th Regiment Native Infantry, having accepted the appointment of Consul at Fernando Po, his name has been ordered to be removed from the Army List from the 27th of October, 1861.

BUSHIRE.—A Vice-Admiralty Court is to be established at Bushire for the suppression of slavery.

MR. H. D. RAE, of the Guzerat Revenue Survey, has been requested, we believe, to photograph the various castes of the province, for Government.

BENGAL MILITARY FUND.

IN our last issue we inadvertently stated on the authority of the Calcutta Englishman that Colonel Freeth merely held charge of the Home Agency of the Bengal Military Fund until a successor could be appointed to Colonel Weller. This statement was correct in the letter, but wrong in the spirit. It is true that Colonel Freeth is only in temporary possession of the post, but there is little doubt of his being permanently confirmed in that office. He is, at least, a candidate, and being a tried and approved man, he has decidedly the highest claims to the appointment. For the two years 1858 and 1859, he officiated for Colonel Henderson to the entire satisfaction of the directors, and, indeed, of the whole body of subscribers and annuitants. It was only natural, therefore, that on the resignation of the late Agent in July last, Sir Charles Wood should at once have sanctioned his being placed in charge. As the paragraph that appeared in this journal was calculated to give a wrong impression as to the candidature of the gallant officer in question, we have deemed it necessary, in justice to his merits, to make this atonement for our accidental carelessness.

KING COTTON.

Nor only is Cotton king, but its very servants are despots and rulers of men. Only a little while ago the Manchester school were the loud-voiced champions of the oppressed Hindoos, and even insisted on their perfect equality with Europeans. Now, however, the "duties of property" are more thought of than the rights and free-will of persons, and the agents of the Cotton Supply Association call upon the Indian Government to use its influence with proprietors of land to part with their estates on "fair and just terms," in order that the cultivation of cotton may be more largely extended. The Governor-general in Council cleverly seizes this opportunity of giving his troublesome and inconsistent correspondents a lesson which, it is to be feared, is nevertheless thrown away upon men so entirely selfish. There is no more room, or excuse, says his Excellency, for the Government to exercise its influence in the manner prescribed than there would be for the like interference by her Majesty's Government with an owner of land in England.

The Association are also seriously displeased with Lord Canning for venturing to disagree with them on the subject of the mode of cultivation pursued by the natives, and for expressing his belief that it is not in ploughing, sowing, harrowing, weeding, and other details of cultivation that the Hindoo needs instruction and encouragement, but in gathering, cleaning, packing, and transporting cotton. With all proper deference for the assertions of Messrs. Hurst and Moseley, we are disposed to accept Lord Canning's opinion as the sounder of the two, and as based upon a larger practical experience. It is, therefore, with considerable satisfaction that we observe it is in contemplation to form an "East India Cotton Agency (Limited)," with a capital of half a million sterling, in 50,000 shares of £10 each, chiefly for the purpose of carrying out his lordship's suggestions, though it is not stated in so many words. At the meeting of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, held on the 30th January, Mr. Turner declared that the only fault he had to find with Indian cotton was in the shortness of the staple—were this only a quarter of an inch longer, he would be quite contented. Another speaker, however, remarked that English merchants were quite as much prejudiced against the use of the India raw material as any manufacturers could be, and he instanced a case where a contract was annulled because the goods supplied were made of such cotton, though the merchant never discovered any difference until advised of the circumstance by the manufacturer himself. It may, therefore, be reasonably expected that such unfounded prejudices would speedily disappear if confidence could be placed in the quality of the article shipped to this country. Some months ago a manufacturer addressed a letter to one of our daily contemporaries, to the effect that he had seen some 32 mule twist spun entirely from Surat cotton, which was fully equal to the average on the market. It has since been suggested that this cotton came from Dharwar instead of Surat; but that is a point of no importance whatever, the fact remaining that the material was the produce of India, and obtainable in almost any quantity. There are many districts capable of supplying cotton of excellent quality, but which, if intrusted to native middlemen would be utterly ruined by adulteration before it came into the possession of the millowners of Lancashire. "There is," observed Mr. J. B. Smith, in a Paper read before the Society of Arts, May 15th, 1857, "there is a series of two or three middlemen through whom the cotton passes before it gets into the hands of the Bombay merchant. To the first man of the series the material passes probably in as good and clean a state as would altogether satisfy the most fastidious of our manufacturers. But with this commences the process of deterioration. He sells by weight rather than quality. He exposes his purchases to the hot wind, and thus gains a few ounces of dust, and to the dew at night, and thus gains a few pounds of moisture. He then disposes of it to another party, who gives it a second edition of dust and dew, and further adds the sweepings of the cleaning gins, and seed of cotton, and other minute particles of refuse. I have known," he continues, "these broadcast on layers of cotton, which are then rolled up into the loose bales or bundles, in which state the brokers of the Bombay merchants purchase the material." Other competent witnesses corroborate this testimony, and agree in ascribing to carelessness in picking, and to systematic adulteration, the comparative disfavour with which Indian cotton is regarded in the Liverpool market. Now, considering that four millions of human beings, or nearly one in seven of the entire population of Great Britain, depend for their livelihood upon a regular supply of this invaluable staple, whatever agency succeeds in bringing it to our shores, good in quality and abundant in quantity, deserves the support of the commercial and manufacturing community, and the good wishes of all true lovers of their country. Such, if we rightly read their prospectus, is the design of the projected Company to which we have already alluded, though we are bound to add that their calculations of profits are somewhat over sanguine, nor do we discover that any margin is left for accidents and inevitable losses. Still, it is a legitimate speculation, and one that deserves to succeed.

INDIA'S OPPORTUNITY.

WHILE the Federalists are employing the resources of science for the destruction of the natural advantages of the country which they seek to bring back into the Union, the Indian Government is having recourse to the same means for the improvement of the gifts of nature. Thus far, however, the former have been the more successful,—so much easier is it to create than to remove a sand-bank. Whether or not the main channel to the harbour of Charleston be for ever blocked up, it is certain that there is yet much to be done before a commercial port can be opened at Sudasheghur. The Indian papers, indeed, speak in a jaunty manner of constructing a breakwater, but our own experience may teach us to look with some degree of distrust upon such costly illustrations of the feebleness of human science and industry to struggle against the angry elements. But a failure in this particular direction may be borne with patience, for with a comparatively small outlay the existing ports may be made to suffice for even a large development of the cotton trade. In fact, it is not the ports that are at fault, but the roads which supply them with goods for shipment. This defect cannot, of course, be overcome all at once, but it is manifest that the local Governments are quite in earnest in making new roads and amending the old ones. Feeders to the different lines of railway are also in progress, and after a little while the means of communication with the interior will be as perfect as is consistent with such a wide expanse of territory, in many places entirely destitute of population.

But, however excellent may be the harbours, however complete the network of roads, railways, and navigable canals, it is obvious that there is yet something wanting to connect the Indian producer with the British consumer. This "something" is a swift and regular line of steamships, managed on economical principles that will admit of a reasonably low rate of freight. Hitherto the P. and O. Company have had it all their own way, and after the manner of monopolists have taken a somewhat unfair advantage of their exceptional position. Not only have their charges been excessively high, but the accommodation they have provided has been of the most meagre and unsatisfactory character, while the goods entrusted to their care have been battered and knocked about as if purposely to test the strength of the packing cases. As the success of a mercantile speculation is usually a question of time, merchants have been compelled to submit with patience rather than accept the other alternative of a long sea voyage round the Cape. At length a rival is about to appear in the French Company of the Messageries Imperiales, though no true Englishman can wish much success to an enterprise calculated to augment the influence of France in the Indian Ocean. Fortunately there is now some chance of an English line also entering into competition with the P. and O. monopoly. We have at this moment lying before us the prospectus of the "British and Eastern Steam Navigation Company (Limited)," with a capital of three-quarters of a million sterling, in 75,000 shares of £10 each, and a Board of Directors who thoroughly understand the work that awaits them. These capitalists propose to build "fast and powerful vessels, well fitted for passengers, and capable of large carrying powers, to sail for Madras and Calcutta, with branches to Bombay, Kurrachee, and China." On the eastern side of Egypt their vessels will burn India coal, which will probably effect an enormous saving in the cost of the motive power; and throughout passengers will be charged only for such wines, beer, and spirits as they actually consume—a consideration of some importance to ladies and invalids. The Company further undertake to carry both passengers and goods at rates far below those now exacted, and to provide superior cabins, and thorough ventilation. If their performances be at all agreeable to their promises, they can hardly fail to achieve the success they will have justly merited.

Another Company which, under proper management, may prove extremely beneficial to the material progress of India, rejoices in the rather awkward title of the "India Freehold Land, Colonization Trust, and Agency Association (Limited)." Their objects are threefold—to "purchase freehold lands;" "to advance money on mortgage or otherwise, to assist parties in purchasing or in promoting the cultivation of estates;" and "to act as agents in India for capitalists and non-resident proprietors, in the investment of moneys, collection rents, or other trust and agency business." A wide field and a virgin soil invite the operations of this Association, but to carry out their views they will need a far larger capital than they propose to raise in the first instance—namely, £100,000, in as many shares of £1 each. It is true they reserve to themselves the power to increase their means to half-a-million, but it is wiser, as a rule, to commence with a capital adequate to the end proposed. We fear, too, that the association indulge in professions that are rather rhetorical than practical. At the same time, if due care be exercised in the choice of local agents there is every probability of the realisation of handsome profits. Everything, however, will depend upon this, for an unworthy agent will have little difficulty in leading a board of directors, sitting in London, into "a boggy Syrtis, neither sea, nor good dry land." It is idle to allude to the wonderful success of the Scottish Australian Land Company, of the Canada Agency Association, or of the Canada Land Company. The cases are widely different, as the Association will speedily discover; nor do they in any way stand on the same footing. Infinite and uncensuring caution will be necessary, especially in connection with the working of minerals, for economical geology is still in its infancy in India. With all this, there is a fair prospect of success for a monied company, represented by able and trustworthy agents, possessed of local experience, and interested in the result of their recommendations. If content to feel their way at the commencement, and to advance slowly and steadily, they may be tolerably certain in the long run not only of contributing to the progress of India, but likewise of promoting their own individual interests.

BOOKS.

Essays in History and Art. By R. H. Patterson. William Blackwood and Sons.

"Of the making of books on China—as on other subjects," observes Mr. Patterson in an admirable and exhaustive essay on "The National Life of China," "there has been no end; but how little reliable knowledge is to be extracted from the majority of those works!" The same remark will hold good, with tenfold strength, in reference to British India. With the solitary exception of Mr. Kaye there is not one living writer who has succeeded in imparting the slightest information as to the true position of the conquering race in that country, or the incalculable benefits they have already conferred on the subjugated peoples of Hindostan. Mr. Patterson has, therefore, acted wisely in taking as his guide that able historian and biographer, who may justly be regarded as the standard authority on all matters relating to the government of India. With remarkable ingenuity he has woven into an agreeable and consecutive narrative all that pertains to the physical aspect of those vast territories, the general character of the inhabitants, and the political and judicial system introduced or adapted by their English rulers. He has sketched clearly and perspicuously a bird's eye view of the Peninsular, eminently calculated to satisfy that immense majority of the public who want to know all about it with the least possible trouble to themselves. In a second essay, Mr. Patterson dilates in glowing language upon the Castes and Creeds of India, describing in the most picturesque manner imaginable the habits and pursuits of the multiform population hemmed in between the mountains and the sea; marking the various wavelets of immigration and conquest, and their permanent effects upon the pre-existing races; painting with oriental brilliancy the polytheistic idolatry of the people, its beautiful legends and horrid rites: and finally offering sage and salutary counsel as to the only mode of raising a debased and degenerate race to our own level. "One false step," he wisely remarks, "may do more to retard the work than ten or twenty years of labour will do to advance it. Christianity must grow upon the Hindoos. Anything savouring of persecution would be as impolitic as it would be unrighteous. Persecution only hardens and makes fanatics. And under its pressure men go to the stake, glorying in their faith, who, if left to think over their opinions quietly, would in due time have abandoned them as unrighteous or absurd. Let missionary work go on as it is doing. But the best way to evangelise India is to promote the work of evangelisation at home. There is no preaching like that of personal example. We are the ruling class in India, we are looked up to by the natives, our officers are in every district, and every officer or judge or revenue collector is a centre of influence. Let these men do their duty, and we shall have an agency far more powerful than any possible development which we can give to missions."

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.—

BETTER AND WORSE.—The varying temperature of our winter is always accompanied by a large increase of pulmonary diseases. To day they are better, to-morrow worse; which frequently recurs without fresh exposure to cold. This arises from the state of the air-tubes, and may be entirely prevented by rubbing Holloway's soothing Ointment over the back and front of the chest. It penetrates the lungs, allays their irritability, reduces the hurried respiration, and regulates the circulation through the heart and lungs. Holloway's Pills should be taken at the same time. They purify the blood and restore tone generally. Chest complaints require no remedial measures besides Holloway's preparations and a regulated temperature.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Calcutta Mail of the 9th January has brought us our usual files of papers, from which there is little to be gleaned of much public interest. The new Councils were to meet in about a fortnight, and it is acknowledged on all sides that the Governor-general has made an excellent selection of native members. Two of them, the Maharajah of Puttialla and Rajah Deonarain Sing, of Benares, have already arrived in Calcutta; the third, Dinkur Rao, ex-minister of Scindia, being also shortly expected. The Bengal Council will not necessarily sit in Calcutta, but wherever it may be found temporarily expedient—the Viceroy being accompanied on his frequent tours by a majority of the members.

The new paper currency will be introduced on the 1st of March. The Bank of Bengal will receive a commission of three-quarters per cent. per annum on the daily average amount of Government notes outstanding and in circulation, and, as an additional compensation for the withdrawal of its own notes, will have the custody of the Treasury balances. This arrangement will remain in force for five years, the Bank establishing branches at Benares, Mirzapore, Patna, and Dacca. In our next issue we shall have occasion to notice this new measure at greater length.

The Civil Service are still in grievous trouble as to the effect of the recent innovation upon their Annuity Funds. Meetings have therefore been held at Lucknow, Allahabad, Madras, and other places, and the general feeling appears to be in favour of a fixed scale of pensions proportioned to length of service.

The first sale of tea has been held in Calcutta, and the crop for the past year is estimated at 2,000,000 lbs. The supply of cotton, however, from Bengal will scarcely be of much benefit to the Lancashire millowners. It is bad in quality, as well as deficient in quantity, nor is there any great prospect of its competing with the produce of Western India.

There is little to record relating to China. Ningpo has been captured by the rebels, but for once they have abstained from insulting peaceful inhabitants and pillaging their property. The Allies have definitively withdrawn from Canton, which is now governed solely by Chinese law and magistrates.

Her Majesty has been graciously pleased to confer the honour of knighthood upon Mr. John Peter Grant, Lieut.-governor of Bengal. The Royal sanction has also been given to the appointment of Mr. John Paxton Norman (of the Home Circuit) as one of the Judges of the Supreme Court of Bengal, at Calcutta. Mr. Norman is the author of a work on the "Copyright of Designs," and of a "Treatise on the Law of Letters Patent;" he is also one of the authors of "Hurlstone and Norman's Reports of the Court of Exchequer."

Last Tuesday's Gazette contained a long list of appointments and alterations of rank, approved by the Home authorities, but which we do not think it necessary to recapitulate, as they have already appeared at different times in our columns.

In the House of Commons last night. Col. Sykes inquired if coloured British subjects in Canada and natives of India would be permitted to compete in the examination for appointments as military assistant-surgeons, and was informed in reply that they will not be allowed to do so. He then inquired as to the despatch of recruits to India in excess of the number of the European troops fixed upon for India service, and with respect to the order countermanding the return home of the Queen's Bays. Sir Charles Wood explained, satisfactorily enough, that the recruits sent out were actually under the number proportioned even to the force intended to be hereafter maintained in India, which will be considerably less than that which is now temporarily stationed there. There is no desire to burden the Indian revenue with the charge of supporting a larger army than is absolutely necessary, but it is the Indian Government that has chiefly opposed any further reduction. Now, indeed, it is discovered that a smaller force will suffice; but such changes and alterations cannot at once be effected. Thus, the Bengal Government proposed to send home the Queen's Bays, which were not wanted here, and must therefore have been reduced. "As this appeared hard upon an old regiment," continued Sir Charles,

"We wrote out, 'We are not prepared to say that a single regiment shall be retained in India which you do not think necessary, but we cannot receive more cavalry regiments at home, because we do not want them. If you have made up your minds that six regiments are all that are required in Bengal, instead of thirteen for which you asked, or eight we sanctioned, you may reduce the youngest regiment,' that being the universal practice in the Queen's service. Therefore, we said, 'don't send home the Queen's Bays, but if you think it safe that six regiments only should be retained in Bengal, the last and youngest regiment must be reduced, and you have our authority to reduce it.'"

But was it quite fair to say of the new regiments that they "had never seen any service?"—a remark made by Sir Charles. It is true they have not been in action under their present titles, but they contain many of the veteran soldiers of the Company's fusilier regiments, who in their time have seen no small amount of active service. This harsh treatment of the newly-formed corps looks very much like a foreshadowing of their early extinction—Parliamentary guarantees notwithstanding.

BENGAL.

THE PAPER CURRENCY AND THE BANKS.

The Gazette of Saturday, January 5th, furnished us with the agreement made between the Secretary of State for India in Council and the Bank of Bengal, under which the business of the general treasury and the issue of the Government paper currency is to be conducted by the latter institution—an agreement in which the Bank have undoubtedly the best of the bargain. To this, however, we have not much to object. To discharge such duties as are required by this agreement to the satisfaction and advantage of the public, especially as regards the paper currency, it will be necessary to employ men of intelligence and business talent in every department; and to render their services valuable they must be paid liberally. Beyond which, the Bank will assume the whole responsibility for loss or damage that may be occasioned by the theft or loss of notes, forgery, errors in payment, and the like—a responsibility which in this country may make a serious set-off against their profits. We cannot, however, but think that all this would have been fairly paid for at less than three-quarters per cent. In Europe it would have been taken at less than a-half per cent. The practical knowledge of the matter was, we suppose, all on the side of the Bank, and it was evidently turned to account. We are not, however, disposed to grumble at what we pay, for what will be, if well-conducted, so great a public advantage as the issue of Government bank-notes. The conditions under which the issue is to be made by the banks seem all that can be desired. The arrangement for paying notes in exchange for mint certificates of silver, bullion, foreign silver coin, and foreign gold coin or bullion, is liberal, and will give great facilities to the importers. The convertibility of the notes is also amply provided for, not only in Calcutta, but at the branches of the Bank, and at all the treasuries comprised in the circle of issue. As regards the terms under which the Bank take over the business of the General Treasury, we are sure that the public will agree with us that the advantages to be gained by the transfer are so great, that even the high remuneration to be paid to the former may be passed over, with the protest that the Government have made a bad bargain for them with the Bank. Forty-three thousand six hundred and six rupees (why not make it even money?) for the yearly costs and expenses attendant on the maintenance of the establishment necessary for carrying on the Government banking account and business seems a liberal remuneration to us for the work to be done; not to speak of a little bill to be charged for the costs and expenses of packing and shipping specie. But beyond this there is a privilege, which will excite the envy of European capitalists, and make the Bank of England uneasy:—"So long as the average cash balance for any month in the hands of the said Bank on the said Government banking account shall not exceed seventy lakhs of rupees, the said Bank shall be at liberty to use and employ such balance, subject to the provisions of their present Charter Act, or any future Act relating to the said Bank, and to appropriate the profits arising from such employment, without being charged with any interest in account." Very liberal indeed on the part of the Government! This agreement remains in force for five years, and if the Bank does not make five per cent. per annum upon this sum during that period, and perhaps considerably more, we shall be surprised. However, taking it at five per cent., we have thirty-five thousand pounds sterling, to which if we add the forty-three thousand six hundred and six rupees, not to speak of waifs and strays, we find the Government paying the Bank of Bengal nearly £40,000 per annum for transacting the banking business of the Bengal Treasuries. We congratulate the directors of the Bank of Bengal, and especially their secretary, on having made a good bargain with the Government. We feel sure they will perform their duties efficiently, and to the satisfaction of the public; though we cannot but think that if the Government had been more alive to their own interests, and brought more practical knowledge to bear on the arrangement, the agency would have been gladly accepted for a much more moderate remuneration.—Englishman.

MISCELLANEOUS.

BENGAL MEDICAL RETIRING FUND.—The aggregate amount which represents the subscriptions of the entire body of officers now contributing to the Bengal Medical Retiring Fund is, as near as possible, twenty-eight lakhs of rupees, or £280,000; the actual fact, however, being that the fund is not really possessed of a single rupee, but is, and has been for years, living from hand to mouth, as the saying is, the current subscriptions just paying the standing annuities and nothing more. But the fund having been founded upon the tontine principle, and subscription having been compulsory upon the medical service, the actual sum which the Government would be bound in justice to refund, if it were to adopt that mode of annihilating the institution, would be, with a slight exception which we shall notice immediately, fifty-six lakhs of rupees, or £560,000. This is for Bengal alone; and if we may assume that the general ratio of resemblance which exists in other such matters between the three Presidencies also prevails in this instance, we may say that the entire cost of winding up the Medical Retiring Funds of the three armies would be, in round numbers, £1,000,000 sterling. A refund to all the Assistant Surgeons on the Bengal list, of double the amount which they had paid in subscriptions to their medical Retiring Fund, would require an outlay of, as near as can be estimated, ten lakhs of rupees, or £1,00,000; not a very large sum with which to lop off the tail and part of the body of the monster now beginning to writhe under the hands of the military actuaries and financiers. When the victim had been scotched in this way, there would then remain only the full surgeons to be disposed of; and the management of their claims, in a just and liberal spirit, presents no very great difficulties. The military financiers are in error when calculating that they would have to make a refund of double the amount which they have subscribed, to all officers; for there are about ten at the head of the Bengal Medical list, and we suppose an equal proportion in Madras and Bombay, who have paid over the full value of their annuities; but who are by no means entitled to a refund of the surplus, because it accrued by their remaining in the service, and stopping promotion after they could have retired; and all overpayment which they may have made is, as it were, a fine for not retiring, and for impeding the action of the Fund. If the Government, after having cut off and dismissed the assistant surgeons as above suggested, should shrink from the large money payment which would be necessary in order to get rid of the senior officers in the same manner, the best and simplest way would be to grant to each of those officers who has paid "half-value" his full annuity; and to all the others down the list, lesser annuities in the same proportion, which would give the lowest, we think, about £150 a-year. This is the least expensive way in which the Government can, by its own action, terminate the existence of the Bengal Medical Retiring Fund; but if any person should be desirous of offering any other suggestions, or pointing out what he may think a mode of action more in accordance with the interests of both parties, the Government and the Medical Service, we have given the money statistics of the difficulty, and the question is open to further discussion.—Englishman.

MONUMENT TO DR. BUIST.—The sum of Rs. 500 has been raised by his friends in Calcutta, Allahabad, and Bombay, for the erection of a monument over the remains of the late Dr. Buist in Calcutta.

JESSORE, Dec. 11.—We have had a smart shower of rain to-day; the clouds have not broken up, so we may expect more. No doubt this will be a good season for all the indigo concerns in Lower Bengal that are still working. Even some of those that are closed might be opened with advantage, considering the favourable weather and good prices. Many lands will be sown in February, and give two cuttings, that used usually to be sown, with rain, in March, April, and even May. Cholera is raging near the station, and is likely to spread in all directions. Chlorodyne is the only remedy to be depended upon. All Mofussil residents should keep a supply of this invaluable medicine, both for cholera and dysentery.

THE MUTLAH RAILWAY.—The line of the South-Eastern Railway was opened on the 31st Dec., with entire success. The day was peculiarly favourable, sunny yet without any trying heat. The carriages, six in number, started at five minutes past one, the engine being prettily ornamented with flowers and garlands, though not, we must confess, displaying any very severe taste in the arrangement. The carriages themselves were comfortable, and showed a degree of artistic finish which ought to make the employes attached to the Great Eastern blush for the shabby and disreputable "things" they call "carriages," in which they convey the victims of necessity to Raneeunge and the intermediate stations. With a glorious whistle the train started at the time we stated, and rattled along at a rate which was exhilarating, even though it was not equal to that of which the engine is capable. The more moderate rate of speed was adopted simply because the expedition was a trial of the line. The train reached Jadupore at twenty-four minutes past one o'clock; Sonapore at twenty-five minutes to two, and Chapahattee at five minutes to two o'clock. Here the Railway Company provided for the visitors what they called a cold collation, but which proved to be a sumptuous repast, to which those who were present did ample justice. Mr. Schiller rose immediately previous to the important operation of discussing the viands before the guests, and remarked that this was simply the beginning of good things; that the Chief Engineer at his elbow promised to complete the whole line within a few months, when he (Mr. Schiller) hoped to see his guests again, to celebrate not only the opening but the working of a line which would carry civilization into portions of this province which, but for the railway, would remain in darkness which might be felt. The line would add, he said, another instrument for contributing to the well-being of the country, and for assisting in the development of the resources of that part of the province, which only require attention and energy to bring about the most satisfactory results.—Hurkaru.

COLONEL HANNYNGTON.—According to the Hurkaru, although Colonel Hannington retires from the army at the end of the month, his services will not be lost to the Military Finance Department, where he will labour on till next spring.

THE REV. W. HOOPER.—The Church Missionary Society have appointed the Rev. W. Hooper, recently Boden Sanskrit Scholar, Sanskrit Lecturer in Joynarain's College, Benares.

MEAN MEER.—The Englishman learns from a Lahore correspondent that the Commander-in-Chief, during his stay and inspection there, had, amongst other measures of sanitary improvement and precaution, ordered all the troops at Mean Meer into camp, and then given directions that all the cess-pools should be cleaned out and filled in; thus, doubtless, removing one of the most prominent causes of malaria and sickness. It was expected that the work could not be completed under a month; but, when carried out, it will conduce much to the salubrity of the cantonment, and add another to the many improvements which the Commander-in-Chief has left in his track during his present active and searching tour of inspection.

VETERAN ESTABLISHMENT.—In consideration of their long and valuable services, Deputy Commissary P. Rubie has been made Lieutenant in the Veteran Establishment, and Lieutenant C. Loder has been promoted to be Captain.

MUTLAH.—Instructions have been received by the Government of Bengal from the Secretary of State to secure a few more lots of lands in the vicinity of Mutlah on account of Government, and to resume those whose present owners have failed to fulfil the conditions prescribed for clearing the jungles.

SEALKOTE.—A flying letter, written on the line of march from Head Quarters Camp proceeding to Rawul Pindee, and dated December 27th, states that Sir Hugh Rose was much pleased with the station of Sealkote, both as a military position, and as a most healthy location for European troops; and that he expressed much satisfaction at the state of the regiments there, both as regards discipline and efficiency. There is no doubt that the reputation of Sealkote as the finest military station in the North-West Provinces, or perhaps anywhere in the plains of India, is well founded; as it has only about two months of hot weather, three or four very endurable, and the rest of the year it enjoys one of the finest climates in the world, that of no country in the South of Europe excepted.

RETURN FROM CHINA.—H. M. S. Vulcan, Captain Strode, anchored in the Hooghly, on the 4th of January, having on board the 19th Bengal Cavalry, late Fane's Horse, from Tien-tsin, and the following officers belonging to the corps:—Captain Fane, Lieutenants Carnac, Upperton, Campbell, Taylor, Keppel, Drake, Fitzgerald, Assistant-Surgeon Daly, Veterinary Surgeon Field, and Adjutant Hanna. Captain Vincent and Dr. Baker have also arrived by the Vulcan. The Sikhs are most of them men of property, their favourite propensity to looting having been abundantly gratified amongst the long-tailed descendants of heaven.

DELHI, Dec. 27.—The 42nd Highlanders passed through, a few days ago, en route to Dugshai; also Rennington's troop of Horse Artillery, from Muttra, en route to Meerut. The 13th Bengal Cavalry has marched, and I don't think we shall have any more regiments through for some time to come. Mr. Melvill, our new commissioner, is expected daily. He is at Kurnaul, which is in the Delhi division, and may, therefore, be considered as having joined the appointment. I am glad to say that we have had a very seasonable shower. It commenced raining last night, and continued up to six A.M. to-day; it is now nine A.M., and the weather still looks threatening, and rain is falling gently; it will do an immense deal of good to the cultivation, and the grain boarders will have to lower their prices as the season becomes more promising.

CHRISTMAS AT LAHORE.—On Christmas Day Mr. Stevens, as agent of the Punjab Railway, invited all the Europeans in and near Lahore connected with the railway to dine with him in a large room attached to one of the unfinished buildings at the grand terminal station. Engineers of all ranks, platelayers, carriage-builders, mechanics, all, in fact, were invited. There were likewise some Government officials, most of whom casually dropped in to enjoy the "fun" which all anticipated to derive from what in this part of India was a novelty, our English workmen's dinner. The gentlemen alluded to, not belonging to the railway staff, included Captain Sim, the Under Secretary to Government and Consulting Engineer, Mr. Chapman, the Deputy Accountant-General, Mr. Thornton, judge of the Small Cause Court, Dr. Smith, Civil Surgeon, (in Medical Charge of the Railway Staff) Captains Bamfield and Boddam, Mr. Assistant Commissioner Griffin, Dr. Scriven, principal of the Lahore College, Captain William Davies, &c. The railway contractors present were the Chevalier de Cortanze, and Mr. Aratoon, the native contractor, Meer Mahomed Soutan, being represented by his European assistants.

THE COMMAND OF THE 39TH N.I., vacant by the retirement of Major Hall on Sir Charles Wood's list, has been conferred by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief upon Major E. D. Watson, officiating commandant of the 31st P. I., an excellent regimental officer, in whose hands the 39th will certainly not deteriorate.

RUNGPORE.—The man named Subdoyal Dobay, at present held in custody on suspicion of being the younger brother of the Nana, is really the son of Boiznauth Dobay, a Brahmin of Lucknow. It is said that this man wrote to the young Rajah of Cooch Behar, styling himself the Nana's younger brother, and asking for a horse to carry him to his house. On receipt of this letter the rajah despatched a trustworthy man with a bukhshee and jemadar to arrest the writer, and sent the letter to the agent, Major Hopkinson, who requested the rajah to hand the man over to the magistrate of Rungpore as soon as the arrest was effected. The rajah's men, however, were unsuccessful in their endeavours to find the man. In October last a man came to the house of one Judoonauth Sing, of Cooch Behar, and sent a similar letter to the rajah. The rajah again ordered his apprehension, but he got off before the order could be carried out. On giving the letter to Judo, the man had stated that he was the Nana's younger brother. In the end of October the man came again to the house of a servant of the Rajah's, but the servant gave information, and he was arrested. On being examined by the Rajah's men he refused to give any reply, and said that he would only answer the higher authorities to whom he was to be sent. The Rajah, however, took the depositions of those who declared that the man had stated to them that he was the brother of the Nana. In the letter, too, he signed his name Peshwo Bahano Protap, and to some of the men he stated that his name was Chota Sahib, and that he had, with Koor Singh and Ameer Singh, fought against the British army, and that he had about one hundred or one hundred and fifty men at Mynapore, in Bootan. The magistrate of Rungpore asked instructions of the Commissioner of Rajshaye as to his future course, stating that, whether the man was the Nana's younger brother or not, he was still a suspicious character, and that the best way to ascertain his identity would be to send him to Oude. He further stated that he considered it dangerous to keep the man long in the Rungpore jail, as he had already had fever, and refused to take medicine when ordered. As to the alleged assertion that he had one hundred and fifty men in Bootan, it was rumoured that some of the rebels had escaped to that district and were still there. The Commissioner of Rajshaye directed the magistrate to send the man under proper surveillance to Rajshaye, and also wrote to the Commissioner of Oude; and proposes on receipt of that officer's reply to send him to Lucknow or Cawnpore, as may be deemed advisable. The Lieutenant-governor of Bengal has directed the Commissioner to take, on oath, in the presence of the prisoner, if possible, the evidence of all those persons to whom he had represented himself as the brother of the Nana, and as having taken a part in the rebellion, or who were cognisant of any of the other facts of the case; and his honour has also directed that the prisoner should not be sent up-country till this had been done, nor until a reply had been received to communications addressed by the Bengal Government to the Oude authorities in the matter.—Englishman.

THE FIRST PEAL.—Another English feature has been added to the many that Howrah already possesses. The English church has been furnished with a peal of bells. They cost nearly three thousand rupees, and are said to be the only peal in India.

THE FIRST PUBLIC SALE OF TEA was held on the 27th Dec. in Calcutta. The demand was brisk and the prices realised very satisfactory. The teas put up to auction were those of the East India Tea Company. Two chests flowery pekoe sold at Rs. 2-2 per lb., pekoe at Rs. 1-4 to Rs. 1-5, souchong at 14 as. to Rs. 1-5, congou at 10 as. to Rs. 1-1, and dust, &c., at 9 as. to 12 as.

MAULMAIN.—The last has been the most prosperous year ever known at Maulmain. An enormous quantity of teak timber came in, owing to the frontier being quiet. There were no less than a hundred ships loading in harbour the other day, sixty European and forty native craft.

APPOINTMENTS.—Major G. Chesney, at present under secretary to the Government of India in the public works department, &c., goes into the military secretariat, succeeding Lieutenant-colonel F. Atkinson as deputy military secretary to the Government of India, under Lieutenant-colonel Norman, who is to receive immediately the official rank of Major-general. Lieutenant-colonel F. Atkinson succeeds Lieutenant-colonel H. P. Burn at the head of the clothing department; Major H. K. Burn, assistant secretary to Government in the military department, succeeds Major W. Ferris, retired, as first examiner in the office of the controller of military finance; Major G. M. Hill, at present military accountant to the Government of India, is appointed to succeed Colonel J. C. Hannington, retired, as controller of military finance. The vacant appointment could scarcely have been better filled.

THE CIVILIANS AND THE HOME GOVERNMENT.—There was another meeting of the civilians held at Lucknow on the 26th of December last. The following gentlemen were present, and the following resolutions were passed:—Messrs. Geo. Campbell, J. S. Campbell, W. C. Capper, Chas. Currie, R. G. Currie, H. G. Ross, A. P. Howell, G. L. Lang, J. W. Wyllie, B.C.S. Read a letter from the Secretary to the Committee appointed at a general meeting of the members of the Bengal Civil Service at Calcutta, dated 30th November, 1861, setting forth the proposals which seemed to the Committee to meet the interests and wishes of the service to induce unanimity amongst civilians of all classes, and to secure the favourable consideration of the Home Government. Read also a letter from the same, dated 17th December, 1861, making certain amendments and additions to the above proposals. Read also the proceedings of a meeting of civilians held at Allahabad, on the 13th December, 1861. Read also the resolutions passed at a meeting of the members of the Bengal Civil Service, held at Agra, on 17th December, 1861. Read the draft memorial, based on the Madras memorial, and on proceedings at the Allahabad and Lucknow meetings, No. V. of printed papers. I. Resolved that this meeting concurs in the premises on which the Calcutta memorial is based, understanding that they are in effect the same as those contained in the draft memorial of the Allahabad and Lucknow civilians (No. V. of the printed papers). They demand as a statement of fact, the insertion of the words omitted at the end of paragraph 10, regarding the non-regulation provinces. II. Resolved, that this meeting entirely dissents from the Calcutta scheme, for the reason that it is wholly calculated to aggravate the present acknowledged evil, viz., that pensionary provisions of the service have no reference to the position and services of the members. Under the scheme proposed those who earn and pay least to the funds will benefit most, and those who earn and pay most will scarcely benefit at all. This meeting considers that the most equitable as well as most appropriate form of compensation would be, the grant of absolute pensions on a liberal scale, irrespective of an annuity derived from any fund raised by subscriptions of members of the service. III. This meeting will, for the sake of ensuring unanimity, waive its own opinion regarding the rates at which such absolute pensions should be asked for; but would suggest that the minimum period of service entitling to a pension be reduced to twenty years. IV. This meeting is still of opinion that it is advisable at present not to raise the question of winding up the annuity fund. V. This meeting is of opinion that the necessity for the unconditional guarantee of the benefits of the civil fund to existing subscribers has not been urged in sufficiently impressive terms in any draft memorial they have yet seen.

WRITERS' BUILDINGS.—The negotiation between the Government and the owners of the Writers' Buildings, which, as far as this Government is concerned, had terminated in its purchasing the buildings, pending the sanction of the Home authorities, has been brought to a disruption by the refusal of the Secretary of State to carry out the purchase.

TEA AT DARJEELING.—It can hardly be said that Darjeeling has long been a tea-growing place. Before 1855 there were probably not more than 1,000 plants at the station—it was merely known that the tea tree would grow there. In 1855 four or five acres of ground were sown by a private individual with tea seed. In 1856 the first tea company was formed under the management of an invalid officer. In 1857 the second company was formed. In 1858 nothing further was done, owing to the mutiny. In 1859 two more companies were started. In 1860 and 1861 more progress had been made, and at the present time there are about twenty-five plantations, large and small, established. From 3,000 to 4,000 acres are already planted out. Tea planting in Darjeeling is not a mere "experiment, or an amusement for gentlemen fond of a quiet life." It is true that one or two military officers conducted the first experiments, but at the present time but two officers continue to be engaged in the occupation, all the rest of the planters are of the same class as have settled in Assam and Cachar, and it is as serious an enterprise, and is being conducted with as much energy and determination as characterise the operations in those Eastern districts. There are no "drawbacks" greater than are to be found in Assam and Cachar; labour is abundant, and the communications are being rapidly improved. One or two mistakes upon a small scale were made at the commencement in planting too high an elevation, but the plantations generally are on the low elevations, and in the valleys where the plant grows rapidly and yields leaf abundantly. There are on the low elevations, in the valleys, and in the Terai, fully 100,000 acres admirably adapted for the growth of the plant, and capable of employing two millions sterling of capital; much of this area has been already purchased. Capital amounting to £250,000 is already subscribed, intended to bring at once into cultivation 10,000 acres; large areas are reserved for future extensions, and new purchases of land are made almost daily. The crop of 1862 will consist of from 80,000 lbs. to 100,000 lbs., and in the next year it will be more than doubled. The tea seed of Darjeeling is very fine, about 100 maunds were gathered this year. The Assam Company is thinking of having a garden here, for the advantage of change of seed. The Darjeeling teas of 1860 sold in London for prices averaging somewhat more than two shillings per pound. The natives are beginning to buy the tea for their own drinking.—Friend of India.

H. E. THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF leaves his camp after inspecting the troops at Peshawur, and goes down the North West frontier to Mooltan, minutely examining everything along that important line. He travels with a small party, consisting of Major-general Becher, Major Roberts, the Military Secretary, and an aide-de-camp. The camp returns by regular marches towards Umballah, and will be rejoined by his Excellency in about a month, at or near Lahore, whence the Commander-in-Chief will probably go direct to Simlah. Lieutenant-colonel Norman, whose departure from camp for Calcutta is postponed, also accompanies his Excellency down the frontier to Mooltan, and will not be at the Presidency to assume his appointment as Military Secretary to the Government of India till the close of the cold season.

JHANSI.—The fort of Jhansi, which has been made over to Scindiah, is reported to be in a state of ruin, indicating the opposition which Sir Hugh Rose met with there. A plain column, erected near the fort, tells the heavy loss we suffered in storming it. The notorious rebel Durriao Sing has made his escape from the Jhansi jail, and is again disturbing the country with three or four hundred followers within a few miles of Lullut-pore.

PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.—The examination of candidates for employment and promotion in the Public Works Department, as required by Government Order No. 41 of the 20th February, 1860, was to commence at the Civil Engineering College, Fort William, on Monday, the 3rd February, 1862, at 10 A.M.

LANDOUR COMMAND.—A letter from Landour states that the command of the depot of H. M.'s troops at that station has been conferred upon Colonel C. C. Deacon, C.B., of H. M.'s 46th regiment, supernumerary Lieutenant-Colonel of his own corps, in succession to Captain F. H. Crawford, of H. M.'s 93rd regiment, whose term of command expired on the 1st of this month. Colonel Deacon has seen a great deal of Indian service, and was with the army of Delhi, where he distinguished himself in command of the column which took the magazine on the 16th of September, and was decorated in consequence.

MADRAS.

THE MADRAS IRRIGATION AND CANAL COMPANY.

As it is not generally known through what portion of the Southern Presidency the irrigation and canal works, now in course of construction, are being carried, a short account of the line may facilitate further inquiry on the part of those at all interested in the project.

The Toongabudra, a river of considerable dimensions, is formed by the confluence of the Toonga and the Budra rivers, both of which take their rise in the high lands of Mysore, and taking a northerly and easterly direction, are joined, a short distance to the west of Hurrhur, by the Warda river. The river here, having assumed the appellation of Toongabudra, continues its course in the same direction until nearly opposite Sindnoor. It receives an addition to its waters from the junction with it of the Huggary river, which takes its rise in the Radh Booden hills, about one hundred miles north-west of Bangalore. Shortly after the Toongabudra has received into its channel the waters of the Huggary, it takes a bend to the east, and passing under Naguldinny, reaches the spot selected for the head of the Company's works at Soonkasala. Opposite this town, in the bed of the river, is an island of

Some extent, chiefly composed of rock, as is the river bed at the spot, and which occasionally, when the river is at its fullest, is submerged. At this spot an anicut or bund is to span the river and the island. From this site back to Naguldinny it has been determined to raise embankments on either side the river to retain within them the largest possible volume of water. The anicut itself will cross the Toongabudra in an oblique direction. In the channels of the river on either side the island, it will consist of solid walls of masonry twelve feet thick at the base, diminishing to eight feet at the top, with an average height of twelve feet; and across the island, connecting the two, will be run an embankment faced with stone. The whole length of these works will be 7,200 feet, of which the South wall will occupy 3,200 feet, the North wall 1,200 feet, and the embankment 2,700 feet. At the South-east end of the southern wall will be twelve under sluices, provided with moveable shutters, each a little over six square yards. The main canal, the breadth of which at the narrowest part will be ninety-five feet, with a depth nowhere of less than eight feet, will admit of the passage of 400,000 cubic yards of water per hour, which will be discharged through the canal at an average rate of two and four-fifths miles per hour. The head sluices will be in every respect similar to the under sluices already described, and will give admission to the supply of water whenever the level of the river is one foot above that of the canal. From Soonkasala the canal circles round the city of Hurnool, and first tending in a northerly direction for some thirty miles, winds gradually round till it assumes a southerly course, skirting the foot of the Nalamully hills, to Cumalapore at the junction of the Pennair. Close to Kurnool the canal crosses the Hindry river by an aqueduct of fifteen arches, each of forty feet span, on stone piers seven feet thick and eleven feet high, founded on solid rock. The length of the aqueduct, including masonry approaches, will be 933 feet, with a breadth of water-way of ninety-four feet, and depth eight feet. In the districts through which the canal runs from Naguldinny, almost to the sea, stone of good quality is procurable in the immediate vicinity of the works, which will materially assist in the cheap construction of durable works. At Mittacondel the bed of the canal has to be carried through a rocky ridge by a cutting about three miles in length, and of a maximum depth of twenty-five feet. The excavation of the canal from Soonkasala to Banakacherla, at the end of the Mittacondel cutting, will be of a difficult character, rocky soil preponderating. But within the distance thus traversed it is estimated that at least 60,000 acres of land will be commanded for irrigation. From Banakacherla to the confluence of the Koondair and Pennair rivers there are no obstacles; the soil of the valley is of the richest description of cotton land, and this portion of the work alone will permit of 300,000 acres of highly-productive land being brought under irrigation. From Cumalapore the canal will take an easterly direction for about sixty miles along the southern bank of the Pennair river to Somaishwarum, in the Nellore district. Here, too, there are few difficulties to contend with, and the area which will be brought under cultivation will be of considerable extent. At Somaishwarum an anicut is to be thrown across the Pennair river, whence the canal will, after taking a slight curve in a north-easterly direction, wind round to the south-east, and fall into the Calair river a little above Kistupatam on the east coast, nearly midway between Madras and Nellore. This latter portion of the canal will, on its first construction, command 100,000 acres, but ultimately, when lesser and subordinate channels have been completed, 400,000 acres will be susceptible of irrigation. It is likewise proposed to create a constant supply of water, by storing it in tanks of very large dimensions, to be formed on some of the affluents of the main streams, from which the canal will derive its regular supply of water. The first of these is at Luckowally, in the Budra river. The second is in a smaller stream which runs into the Toongabudra, shortly below the junction of the Toonga and Budra rivers. The third and fourth will be formed by bunds, or retaining walls, formed across the Toongabudra itself—one at Hurryhur, and the other at Wallabapore, about fifty miles below it. A fifth on the Huggry river; a sixth near Soonkasala; a seventh at Takoor, on the Hindry river, which, it is estimated at inconsiderable outlay, will be made capable of storing 1,000,000,000 cubic yards of water; an eighth on the Chittravutty river, an important feeder of the Pennair; and a ninth on the Pawpugnee, another feeder of the same river.

We have thus laid before our readers the main features of the works already commenced, and in rapid progress, in an undertaking of no inconsiderable importance, not alone as regards the vast amount of, at present, unproductive land which it will cause to be brought under cultivation, but likewise as to the field it will open to the extension of commerce. For it will enable the merchant to transmit to the centre of the Peninsula his European wares at a moderate cost for carriage, obtaining in return the produce of some of the richest districts of Southern India. In addition to both these, it has one other recommendation of primary importance. Skirting, as this canal does, the foot of the Nullamully Hills, it offers a speedy and easy mode of access to Yerrachurla, a site admirably adapted for the settlement of European agriculturists. Yerrachurla is 2,600 feet above the plain, is altogether some 3,700 feet above the sea, and commands one of the most fertile districts in all Southern India. It is to such undertakings as this that the capitalist may most safely and most profitably turn his attention, as it is by opening up the country by piercing it with canals, and such like cheap means of transport, that the most felicitous results will be arrived at. By their means only can that improvement in the people in agriculture and civilisation be brought about which cannot but in the end be productive of advantage to those who take the initiative in their construction.—Englishman.

BURMAH.—The construction of a line of Electric Telegraph from Rangoon to Moulmein has been sanctioned. The line connecting Akyab with the Dacca line of telegraph has been laid. The 33rd N. I. returns from Burmah to Madras. The Commissioner of the Tenasserim and Martaban Provinces has proposed, and the Supreme Government have sanctioned, the abolition of the Income-tax in the different districts of those provinces, substituting in lieu of it and of the License-tax, an increase of 25 per cent. on the Capitation-tax. A Mr. Thorpe, employed in Rangoon, has been detected in a fraud, and falsifying the totals in commercial memoranda. In three months he made 3,500 rupees. There has been a slight shock of earthquake at Akyab. The Bishop of Calcutta, assisted by the Rev. L. Poynder, has just laid the foundation stone of the town church of Rangoon. The Bishop of Calcutta arrived at Moulmein on the 25th Dec. He was off Amherst on the previous day. The ship Hellespont, being leaky in Rangoon roads, and not being able to secure a sufficient number of Burmese to assist the crew in pumping her, was obliged to employ thirty Burmese females to do so. A Burmese official in Amherst has been sentenced to a fine of Rs. 500, and incarceration for six months, for malversation in office. The native crew of the Bussorah Merchant having been refused liquor when already intoxicated, armed themselves with cutlasses, knives, and other weapons, and seized the ship. The captain and officers escaped from the port-holes, whence they jumped on a raft alongside, and then succeeded in getting to the Amphitrite, where they obtained assistance. The mutiny was not suppressed without bloodshed. The steward of the International has just met his death at Moulmein at the hands of the cook, whom he systematically ill-used. The Rev. Mr. Vallings, Secretary S.P.G., has arrived at Moulmein on a tour of inspection. Capt. MacMahon, Mr. Treacy, and Lieutenant Munroe have been appointed Revenue Settlement Officers in Pegu, on salaries of Rs. 700, 500, and 400 respectively. There has been some excitement amongst the Burmese of Tounghoo on account of the supposed heresy of a Buddhist priest. He has flung away his idols, and declares his belief in God as a spirit, filling immensity, punishing evil and rewarding the good. He has a few adherents, who, with him, are subjected to much persecution. The amount of duty realised at the Custom-house at Bassein up to the 10th December was 50,000 rupees. Burmese robbers are disturbing the Prome and Arracan districts.

THE INAM COMMISSION.—The following are extracts from Mr. Taylor's Progress Report for the month of November last:—"The number of cases decided by the Deputy Collectors during the month, was 7,020, which raises the total number of cases decided, from the commencement of the undertaking to the end of November, to 2,28,341. Besides these, 5,233 cases of village service Inams were registered during the month, of which 3,111 come under the head of Government Village Servants, which, under the rules, are enfranchised on 5-8ths of their assessment, and 2,062 under the head of Village Artisans. The total number of the several descriptions of service Inams registered up to the end of November is 99,985. The total number of titles confirmed to the end of November was 1,88,514; of which 31,791 were in respect of religious and charitable grants of a permanent character; 99,493 were personal Inams enfranchised at the option of the Inamdars; 53,175 were personal Inams enfranchised compulsorily; and 4,055 were personal grants not enfranchised and confirmed on present tenures. The total number of title deeds which had reached the hands of the Inamdars up to the end of last month was 1,18,849. The total amount of quit-rent payable to Government in addition to former Jodi is Rs. 3,14,387. The amount paid in redemption of the quit-rent is Rs. 9,492-12-8. The combined quit-rent payable to Government for the future upon personal Inams confirmed to the holders amounts to Rs. 5,29,837. Of the number of personal grants confirmed during the month under report, 278 were cases of Jangi Kattubadi and Kavilgar Inams assessed at Rs. 4,578, and charged with a future quit-rent of Rs. 2,442, which being added to the number of this class of Inams previously disposed of, raises the total number of Police Inams enfranchised to 2,844, assessed at Rs. 69,176, and charged with a future quit-rent of Rs. 39,106."

SHIPWRECK.—The Superintendent of Marine notifies that the Commander of the French barque Glaneur has reported his having passed the masts of a sunken ship above water in about fourteen fathoms water off Ganjam.

MEDICAL FUND.—Annuities from the Medical Fund were granted on the 7th January to the following gentlemen:—To retired surgeon J. Hichens, a member on small annuity, a large annuity; to retired surgeon T. D. Harrison, a member on small annuity, a large annuity; to retired surgeon J. Reid, the established small annuity; to retired surgeon T. White, a member on small annuity, extra large annuity; to retired surgeon J. Grant, M.D. (not heard of for two years); to Surgeon-major A. Lorimer, small annuity; to retired surgeon T. G. Johnstone, M.D., a small annuity, extra large annuity; to retired surgeon J. Robson, M.D., a small annuity, extra large annuity. After providing for the above, there being still a surplus sufficient to convert a small annuity into a large one, the meeting resolves that the small annuity now held by retired surgeon A. Simpson (senior small annuitant), be converted into a large one.

HYDERABAD, Dec. 26.—The treaties of 1853 and 1860 stipulate that on the payment of a specific sum from the revenues of territories to be assigned for that purpose, the English Government will maintain a contingent for the Nizam of two thousand horse and five thousand infantry, and pay any surplus of revenue that may accrue to the Nizam's Government. At the time the first treaty was delivered to the Nizam, a schedule was presented to him with it, which exhibited the actual number of troops maintained as being somewhat more than two thousand three hundred horse, and the infantry somewhat more than five thousand five hundred. The finance committee submitted to the English Government that the numbers in excess of the amount stipulated for by treaty should be disbanded, as affording a saving for the English Government of more than one hundred and fifty thousand rupees. The treaties are a bar to this consummation, for they provided expressly that the Nizam's Government should receive the surplus. The recommendation of the finance committee, however, established one point positively, that the supernumerary numbers of the contingent might be reduced consistently with the treaties, and without detriment to the affairs of either state. As this conclusion has been arrived at, the Nizam's Government, which, though in an improved financial condition, by the recent restoration to it of some part of the districts that had been assigned to the English Government, is not overflowing with wealth, may fairly ask to have the proposed reduction made for its benefit. The English Government can have no plea for refusing the request, nor would it condescend to set up any. If it did, I should understand that further expositions of the question had shown that the reduction could not be made without detriment to the affairs of the one or the other of the two states. I do not know that the Nizam's Government will make the proposal; if it do not, it will be to the neglect of its own proper interest.—Englishman.

BOMBAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE CONQUERORS AND THE CONQUERED.—Another assault has been committed on two officers of H.M.'s 83rd Foot, stationed at Belgaum. The officers were out shooting, about two miles from the fort, near a village called Koodchee. The inhabitants must have been determined to pick a quarrel with them, for as soon as one of the officers fired, a man flung himself down on the ground and said that he was shot. Although the man was not touched, the villagers immediately mobbed the officers and pelted them with stones, while the officers, although armed with loaded guns, never once attempted to fire. At last the Patel, or head man of the village, interfered and they got off, but not without several bruises. One, too, had a valuable watch smashed in his pocket. The ringleaders, we are glad to hear, are in custody.

OIL MILLS IN INDIA.—A correspondent of the Times of India draws attention to the advantages that would be obtained from the establishment of oil mills in this country, instead of exporting seeds and importing oil as at present. The native methods of manufacturing the oil will not admit of their keeping pace even with local demand. After the oil has been extracted the refuse known as oil cake is used as food for cattle. But a large percentage of oil remains in the cake, and is thus lost. Mills on the principle of the English oil mills would utilise the whole of the material.

BOMBAY, BARODA, AND C.I. RAILWAY.—Mr. William Cooper, Deputy Managing Agent of the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway Company, has been suspended from office, on account of certain transactions effected by him during the absence on sick leave at Mahabeshwur of Mr. John B. Lane, principal managing agent. It appears that Mr. Cooper made purchases of rope, baskets, and other articles, at fabulously high prices, and in incredibly large quantities. Mr. Manning, storekeeper, who has been also mixed up in these transactions, tendered his resignation, but it has not been accepted. Colonel French, one of the directors of the company, and Mr. Lane are prosecuting minute and searching inquiries into these dark transactions; and it is to be hoped the long-standing reproach that this company has been robbed right and left will be removed by their report. Since writing the above, we have heard that Mr. Cooper and Mr. Manning, storekeeper, have been both dismissed the company's service. It is also stated that Mr. Sanderson, Chief Engineer, has applied to be relieved of his duties, in consequence, it is rumoured, of the Directors of the Company being dissatisfied with the mode in which he has conducted the duties of his office.—Bombay Gazette.

THE MAURITIUS.—The population of the Mauritius is 305,046, or that of half Calcutta. Of the whole the immigrant coolies make up 201,979, and the aliens, such as Chinese, 6,541, while the residents number 96,526, chiefly white and coloured creoles. On the abolition of slavery the planters received £2,112,632 from their 66,343 slaves. The education which the Indian Government as yet denies the coolies they receive in the Mauritius, where there are eight schools. With a spurious sentimentalism the Indian Government insists that the coolies' children shall be exempted from the compulsory education ordinance, because it was no part of the engagement of their parents, when they migrated to Mauritius, that their children should be educated. The Governor regrets this, and the Superintendent of Schools says, "A law more in the nature of that for the education of factory children in England is essential, when, as is the case of the Indians of Mauritius, both parents and employers are, as the general rule, opposed to the educational interest of the children under their care or influence. The voluntary system hitherto has proved a failure." What Indian labour has done for the Mauritius may be gathered from this fact that in 1812, 66,000 slaves produced only 969,260 French lbs. of sugar, while the same number of coolies in 1851 produced 137,373, 519lbs., and in 1859 201,979 coolies produced 247,463,245lbs. As a rule the Indian coolies are described as destitute of all religion, or imitators of the Mahomedans whose Mohurum they celebrate on what is generally known as the Indian Fête de Dieu, to distinguish it from that observed by the Church of Rome. Two Church missionaries are now at work among them, but the number both in Mauritius and the other colonies should be largely increased.—Friend of India.

BIRTH RETURNS, BOMBAY.—Dr. Haines, Superintendent of Mortuary and Birth Returns, has submitted to Government a report on the births in Bombay during the year 1860. From this it appears that the total number of registered births was 7,086, and still-born 361. These numbers are larger than those of any previous year. The male children born alive were 3,692, the females 3,033; the male births were, therefore, in the proportion of 1,217 to 100, which is rather higher than last year, but almost exactly the usual average. The still-born were 361, viz.: males, 238; females, 123; or in the proportion of 193.5 to 100. The disproportion is usually greater in the still births, but the excess is probably unprecedented. The still-born were 5.1 per cent. of the whole, exactly the same as last year. The proportion of the sexes in the different races differs considerably from what has been usually observed in previous years. It is as follows:—

|                   | Males to 100 Females. |       |                |                |
| Hindoos ...       | 119.4                 | 124.1 | 4.7            | —              |
| Mussulmans ...    | 124.6                 | 130.1 | 5.7            | —              |
| Parsees ...       | 126.2                 | 111.2 | —              | 15.0           |
| Jews & Christians | 117.0                 | 145.6 | 28.6           | —              |

But where the actual numbers are so small such variations need not excite much surprise, in another year the fluctuation may be in the opposite direction. The fall in the number of births of both sexes last year below the average has been fully recovered this year, the increase is chiefly observable in the Hindoos of various castes and among the Mussulmans. Among the native Christians the births are rather fewer than last year. The total number of births, however, is small as compared with that of deaths—only about one-half, and notwithstanding the general steadiness in the numbers, as well as in the proportion of the sexes at birth registered from year to year, it seems very difficult to believe that nearly all the births are recorded. The illegitimate births were 90, or 1.3 per cent. of the whole, being 40 males to 44 females, or 104.5 to 100.—Bombay Gazette.

BHATTIA CONSPIRACY CASE.—A case in which nine Bhattias were tried for conspiracy to obstruct the course of public justice, has excited great interest in Bombay. The men were tried before the full Supreme Court, Mr. C. Anstey for the prosecution, and Mr. Bayley for the defence. The Maharaj, high priest of a Hindoo sect, was charged by the Editor of a native paper with adultery and other immoral practices with the wives of his devotees. The Editor was prosecuted for libel and pleaded justification. The nine prisoners, representing this as a renewed attack on the Maharaj, bribed witnesses not to appear for the defence. The nine were convicted under Lord Campbell's Act. After an attempt had been unsuccessfully made to obtain a new trial, and the evidence of many of the leading English merchants had been given to the high character of the prisoners, Justice Arnould sentenced two to pay a fine of Rs. 1,000 each, and the rest to a fine of Rs. 500 each. The sentence was received with some sensation in the Court. Mr. Anstey applied to have the costs, amounting to Rs. 4,000, paid from the Fine Fund, and was told to apply to the Full Court. The sentence seems to us far too light. The case involved the principle of religious liberty which the prisoners attempted to stifle.

GENERAL LE GRAND JACOB.—At the annual exhibition and distribution of prizes of the Free General Assembly's Institution in Bombay, Gen. Le Grand Jacob was in the chair. Various essays were read by the pupils. Dr. Wilson pointed out two boys who had been sent to the Institution by a rich Hindu family; one of them was blind, but he had been taught to translate short sentences from English into Mahrattée. General Jacob said "he was about to retire from the public service after a labour of forty years, and during the remaining period of his life, which he intended to pass in his native country, he would continue to take great interest in this country and its inhabitants. Nothing would gladden his aged years so much as the progress of education, enlightenment, and morality among the people, in whose welfare he had spared no exertions." The average number of pupils in attendance in the school department was 300, in the vernacular department 100, and in the college department 26.

Mr. A. K. FORBES, Secretary to the Bombay Government, has been appointed Acting Sudder Judge, in the place of Mr. R. Keays, who has gone to England on sick leave. The Under Secretary, Mr. Shaw Stewart, acts for Mr. K. Forbes.

CHINA.

HONG KONG, Dec. 31.—Matters are quiet in Japan. As mentioned in our last issue, Mr. Alcock has made use of the power given to consuls to establish rules and regulations for the better enforcement of treaties.

From Pekin we gather that everything goes on smoothly, and, as matters have recently proceeded, this was to be expected. By advices dated Dec. 2 we learn that Lee-poo, an adherent of the late Council of Regency, has been banished to Sin-Keang. The new Government are busy redeeming the cash notes issued by Sushun, but never paid—a circumstance which caused much distress. This is felt to be a righteous measure, and is affording much satisfaction.

From the three northern ports we may not have much news for some time. New-chwang is closed up for the winter. Tien-tsin was accessible at the date of the last advices (December 9), but the river above that fort was frozen up. The rebels, who had been seen in the neighbourhood of Chefoo, have not been heard of since they were "shelled" away from the settlement.

Ningpo was taken by the insurgent forces on the morning of Dec. 9. Although the place was strong enough to stand a siege of months, there was very little fighting, the Imperialists having made a poor defence during the two days that the siege continued. In that space of time the latter became aware that resistance was useless, so they fled out of the city, the Taipings entering it by escalade. There was no massacre or killing of the people, or even burning of houses. The rebels in this case behaved with more moderation than their usual habits would lead people to expect, which may either have been the result of a changed policy in presence of foreigners, or of the absence of loot to seize and people to kill, all the Ningpo residents having pretty well cleared out with their goods and chattels some weeks before the Taipings took the city. The Taoutae of Ningpo escaped in a sampan, and was taken charge of by Admiral Protet, who protected him on board the Fei-loong, at present chartered as a despatch boat by his Imperial Majesty's Government. Chin-she chang, the Imperial generalissimo, at the moment of escalade quietly let him self down the city walls, and begged the hospitality of the British consul, which was at once extended to him. On the same night he was conveyed to the Scout, and eventually sent across to Chusan in the gunboat Kestrel. The prefect of the city has disappeared, and has not been accounted for by the latest reports. The Che-Hen committed suicide by swallowing goldleaf. The place is quiet now, almost like a sepulchre, and commerce has departed from it. An interview took place between Mr. Harvey, the British consul and the rebel chief, on the 12th ult.

The Yang-tze river is fast becoming a seat of commercial prosperity. The traffic up and down is a perfect marvel, considering the short time the river has been opened.

A rumour is current, but not likely to be true, that the Imperialists have made a successful sally from Hangchow, and routed the rebel army besieging that city.

From the other ports on the coast we have no news of importance. All is quiet at Canton.

At Manila, cigars are at a premium, in consequence, it is said, of the blockade in America, large quantities of tobacco leaf being required by the Spanish Government to balance a want of the usual supply from Virginia.—Overland China Mail.

WAR-OFFICE (Feb. 14).—The Queen has been graciously pleased to give orders for the appointment of John Peter Grant, Esq., Lieut. governor of Bengal, to be an ordinary member of the Civil Division of the Second Class, or Knights Commanders, of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath.

INDIA FOR THE INDIANS.

FOR some years past the philanthropy of the manufacturing districts has been warmly excited on behalf of our coloured brethren and fellow-subjects in the East, and stump orators have vied with each other in proving their own countrymen to be the most selfish, oppressive, and cold-blooded race on the surface of the earth. The depreciation of one's neighbour, and, above all, of a whole powerful and governing class, is a great aid to self-complacency, and the habit grows, like the dirus hydrops, with self-indulgence. The Indian Government generally, but especially the Civil Service, have, therefore, been pleasantly represented as a set of old fogies, in a mummified state of existence, who regarded every innovation as a step on the road to ruin, and scouted all idea of improvement as a suggestion of the Evil One. If not actually stated in so many words, it was insinuated with tolerable distinctness that India's only chance of prosperity was in being rescued from the hands of those who pretended to possess a practical knowledge of its present condition and future requirements, and transferred to empirics destitute of actual information, and, therefore, the more easily inflated with conceit and presumption. Their cry was ever "India for the Indians," and it was loudly proclaimed that until England learned to look upon her tenure of her Eastern possessions as simply a trust for the good of the Natives, she would stand in the position of an unjust stepmother, and could put forth no claim to the gratitude or respect of the many millions she ruled rather than governed. Alas, for human sincerity! These fine speeches have been rudely tested, and discovered to be nothing but glittering dross. If the Natives would show themselves worthy of sympathy, they must sacrifice their own interests to those of the Lancashire capitalists, and be content to labour for those who have talked nonsense for them.

It is still in the memory of all men how that eminent free-trader, Mr. James Wilson, became under financial pressure an old-world Protectionist, and imposed a duty of ten per cent. on all cotton goods, and of five per cent. on all cotton yarns imported into India. For a while this return to obsolete doctrines was borne with a semblance of patience caused by the stupor of astonishment. At first, too, other markets were open, and the manufactures of Lancashire were shipped in large quantities to every other region of the globe. By-and-by, however, there intervened the "difficulty" in North America, which, with one stroke, cut off the supply of the raw material, and one chief mart for the produce of the English looms. Under the pressure of an ever growing distress the Manchester philanthropists began to open their eyes to the force of the ugly truth that charity begins at home, and thus speedily arrived at the conclusion that the British operative was, after all, a more interesting individual than his swarthy cousin of Aryan extraction. The mask is now almost entirely thrown aside, and Parliament is invoked to interfere with the ways and means of the Indian Exchequer. It is certainly not our intention to advocate the retention of these import duties one hour beyond the termination of the necessity for the revenue thus obtained, but it never would have occurred to us to advance such reasons for their removal as appear satisfactory to the worthy and respectable gentlemen who constitute the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, and likewise the Cotton Supply Association. Little more than three weeks ago deputations from these opulent and influential bodies waited upon Lord Elgin, and tendered some well-intentioned advice as to the system of administration to be pursued by the noble earl, and with characteristic bad taste passed their feeble strictures upon certain of his predecessors, men in every way superior to themselves. Among other equally disinterested suggestions, Mr. Bayley proposed that "in the event of the Indian Exchequer requiring these duties, the revenue should be aided by excise duties on Indian factory production." In other words, that protection should be afforded to the English manufacturer at home at the expense of the local capitalist. "The great interest of India," he went on to say, "was to be agricultural rather than manufacturing or mechanical." But why so? It may possibly be to the interest of English manufacturers that India should be only a producer of raw materials, but it is not easy to perceive why it should be to her interest to renounce those arts which in other countries contribute so largely to the riches and welfare of the population. The same idea was again and again expressed at a more recent meeting of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, when the Hon. Mr. Egerton laid down as a law that tropical countries were chiefly intended for the production of raw material. It was also affirmed that the encouragement now temporarily afforded to Indian capitalists would ultimately result in their ruin—a mark of considerateness for which the latter will, no doubt, feel duly grateful—and yet at the same time a protest was entered against the exportation of machinery and the erection of mills at Bombay as injurious to the home trade. Nor did it escape notice that the local manufacturer would be in a position to intercept the best cotton, and that only an inferior quality would reach this country, and that the price even of that would be enhanced by its comparative scarcity. Finally, it was urged that these protective duties were unjust to the poor Hindoo in raising the cost of his simple garment beyond the reach of his humble means. There is something very touching in this sudden burst of anxiety to furnish the modest toilworn ryot with a more expensive fig-leaf, but if cotton manufactures are to command such high prices there must surely be room for the competition of Manchester. It is vain to kick against the pricks. There is no earthly reason why both natives and Europeans should not erect cotton mills in India capable in time of supplying the entire population with cheap and substantial clothing. The impetus once given, the movement will go on with constantly increasing speed and power, and by degrees India will become independent of Europe for many other products as well as cotton manufactures. Shall we murmur at this? Are we not incessantly prating of our bounden duty to civilise our Indian fellow-subjects, and to impart to them a fruitful knowledge of those arts and sciences which conduce to human happiness, and shall we start back in affright as soon as we perceive that our lessons are taking root and promising to flourish? Regardless of temporary self-interest, should we not rather take courage from the dawnings of success, and persevere in the faithful discharge of the stewardship which we profess to believe has been intrusted to us by Providence for the best and wisest purposes?

MR. GOLDWIN SMITH ON INDIA.

HOWEVER presumptuous it may seem for a mere student of history to differ from a learned professor, it becomes the positive duty of every journalist to protest against the fatal and inglorious theories propounded by Mr. Goldwin Smith. We shall not, indeed, apply ourselves to the easy task of demolishing his crude and untenable views as to the value of the colonial dependencies of Great Britain, nor do we propose to refute his strictures on their political relations with the mother country. In a journal exclusively devoted to the consideration of Eastern questions any disquisitions of that kind would be clearly out of place, though it must be admitted that it is difficult to resist the temptation of grappling with a professor taken at a disadvantage. On the subject of India Mr. Smith is quite as wrongheaded as on that of Canada, Australia, the Ionian Islands, and Gibraltar. He acknowledges that "India stands on a peculiar footing," and that we have assumed responsibilities which we are bound to discharge. He further admits that it is no light thing to have had the use of so conspicuous a stage for the exhibition of the manly qualities of an imperial race. But this advantage appears to him to have been dearly purchased by "a heavy annual expenditure of our best blood," and by "the paralysing sense of our weak point." With his characteristic love of epigram—that common trait of unphilosophic minds and superficial thinkers—he affects, too, to regard as "the main item on the side of profit," the "perennial supply of old Indians spending Indian pensions at Bath and Cheltenham." It might savour of hypercriticism were we to object to the conventional fiction of describing men slain in battle as the best and bravest of their race. In the course of ordinary parlance it is a kind and generous phrase, but one scarcely befitting a grave and argumentative discourse. As a fact, it is notorious that a wounded soldier is not necessarily a hero, any more than a dead one has excelled the members of peaceful professions in the qualities that most adorn mankind. But passing over this harmless platitude, we cannot allow Mr. Goldwin Smith's statement to remain uncontradicted that "the paralysing sense of our weak point" has resulted in the loss of dignity and force to our diplomacy in Europe, and in the Sikh, the Afghan, and, in a great measure, the Russian war. Indeed, he contradicts himself, for assuredly the campaigns he alludes to bore no signs of either moral or physical paralysis or feebleness. Besides, the Sikh wars were purely defensive, and originated with the Sikhs themselves as the aggressors. The Afghan war, we admit, was altogether a blunder, and very nearly a crime, but we are at a loss to conceive how it can be said to have proceeded from the cause assigned by Mr. Smith. There must, at least, have been a sense of power as well as of weakness in undertaking hostile operations for the purpose of checking the progress of Russian influence in Central Asia. No doubt the opinion was entertained by many statesmen at that time that the Russian Government meditated designs inimical to the stability of our Indian empire; but it is one thing to suspect the existence of a rival and quite another to fall so completely under the fascination of terror as to commit acts incompatible with a healthy frame of mind. And it does sound very like an Hibernicism to hear of violent action being the consequence of paralysis. Again, with regard to the late Russian war, it is really an insult to one's understanding to be asked to believe that Indian interests had anything to do with the intervention of England on behalf of Turkey. If this be the way Mr. Goldwin Smith reads and teaches the history of his own times, what confidence can be placed in his interpretation of the events of former days? The youths who sit under him are certainly rather to be pitied than envied.

The assertion that the pensioned invalids residing at Bath and Cheltenham represent the chief benefits accruing to Great Britain from her Indian possessions, is quite as absurd as the old native sarcasm, that when the British rule came to an end the only memorial of its existence which would survive would be so many dozens of empty bottles. It cannot, of course, be denied that the amount of salaries and pensions derived from India, and expended in England, forms no inconsiderable item in the well-being of the population of these islands, but this is as nothing in comparison with the immense advantages resulting from the commercial relations existing between the two countries. Were the British legions withdrawn from Hindostan, anarchy and civil war would immediately ensue, and both internal industry and foreign trade would pine away and perish; for we assume that even Mr. Smith would not desire to see the Indian Peninsula pass under the sway of any other European Power. It is beyond all dispute that our present Eastern trade is of almost incalculable importance from every point of view, whether political, economical, moral, or commercial. The loss, therefore, of so material an element in the prosperity and greatness of this country could not be regarded with other feelings than of regret and humiliation.

Mr. Smith then goes on to affirm, for his conclusions are founded upon no past experience, that unless the English succeed in converting India "from a dependency into a colony by settling it, taking the place of the Mahomedans, its last conquerors, and permanently forming the governing and civilising class," the days of their dominion are numbered, because the taxation required to give all the servants of the State "exile" pay and pensions will, sooner or later, bring about a rebellion. Now, any one in the slightest degree conversant with the history of the Mahomedan supremacy in India must be aware of the fact that those conquerors, directly or indirectly, extorted from the subject race a far larger percentage of their wealth than has ever been done by the British Government. So long as the annual imposts do not greatly exceed their present amount, there is little danger of a revolt on the ground of excessive taxation. There will, therefore, be no occasion for recurring to the alternative very properly deprecated by the learned Professor, of "always suppressing revolts in blood," though it may, parenthetically, be remarked that it is not true that "the horrors of the Indian mutiny cancelled the work of all our Indian missionaries ten times over." The conversions to Christianity since that mutiny have been far more numerous than in the same period of time previous to that event, and there can be no doubt that caste prejudices have been rudely shaken and brought to shame. At the same time, we are disposed to agree with Mr. Goldwin Smith that the money, talent, learning, and zeal expended on the missionary establishments in India would bear a richer harvest if applied at home. Much more is to be done by example than by preaching, and a layman who acts up to the principles and tenets of the Christian religion is likely to prepare the way for the conversion of the heathen far more effectually than the prayers and discourses of a dozen professional missionaries. But while to this extent we adopt the Professor's views on proselytism in the East, we protest with all our might against his calumnious assertion that "the English in India are sure to be always worse than the English in England, and by their vices to discredit their religion." There was a time, perhaps, when a very lax system of morality prevailed among the English residents in India, though it may be doubted whether even then they were much worse than their countrymen at home; but certainly in the present day the balance is rather in their favour than against them. In a small community where every one knows exactly what his neighbour is doing, the slightest offence contra bonos mores is published abroad, and escape from detection is well nigh impossible. Any aberration from the right path is commented upon on all sides, and nowhere is less forbearance exhibited towards any form of immorality than in India.

The views propounded by Mr. Goldwin Smith are not only strange in themselves, but doubly so as emanating from a writer who so completely proved their fallacy when put forth by Mr. Congreve. The surrender of Malta, Gibraltar, and the Ionian Islands, was especially insisted upon by that gentleman, whose most formidable opponent was the very same person who now advocates what he formerly reprobated. Mr. Smith's appointment to the Chair of Modern History at Oxford was, at the time, much canvassed by those who were familiar with his peculiarly crotchety disposition and his fondness for paradox—which he mistakes for farsightedness and originality. Though confirmed by Lord Derby's Government, it was to Lord Palmerston that he owed his nomination, in return for which good office he describes the Premier as being "old in ideas and unconscious of the great moral and material changes which have taken place in Europe since he first entered public life." His lordship is probably too much accustomed to ingratitude to feel very acutely the unkindness of Mr. Smith's caricature of himself, but he will doubtless regret his unfortunate choice of a teacher for the rising generation. We can only hope, for their own sakes, that those who are condemned to listen to him will receive his evidence with suspicion, and will learn to reject his inferences when, as in the present case, they are opposed to facts and analogy.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

MADRAS ARMY.

In reply to Colonel SYKES,

Sir C. Wood was understood to say that he was not aware that the Madras Government had circulated a memorandum in the Madras army that the memorials of officers to the Secretary of State on grievances arising out of the amalgamation scheme would not be forwarded in extenso. Various memorials had been received on the subject.

THE KIRWEE PRIZE MONEY.

In reply to Sir W. M. FARQUHAR,

Sir C. Wood was understood to say that it had not yet been decided what portion of the troops were entitled to share in the distribution of the Kirwee prize money.

EAST INDIA STOCK TRANSFER.

Sir C. Wood moved for leave to bring in a Bill to provide for the registration and transfer of the East India Five per Cent. Stock at the Bank of Ireland, and for the mutual transfer of such stock from and to the Banks of England and Ireland respectively.

Leave was given, and the Bill was brought in and read a first time.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FEB. 11.

INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

Mr. STACPOOLE asked the Secretary of State for India whether it was considered necessary that the successful candidates for the civil service of India residing in Ireland and Scotland should be required as heretofore to remain several weeks in London, or to return thither from their respective places of abode, to be inspected by a medical practitioner in London?

Sir C. Wood was understood to say that the Civil Service Commissioners held it absolutely necessary that successful candidates should be examined by their medical officer in London. He did not think there was any severe hardship in the matter, as they got an allowance of £100 each to defray their expenses.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FEB. 13.

INDIA STOCKS TRANSFER BILL.

On the motion to read this Bill a second time, Sir H. WILLOUGHBY said there was an impression abroad that as the dividends on these stocks were paid at the Bank of England, they were guaranteed by the British Government. Of course that was a mistake, but he hoped care would be taken to exclude from any Bill on the subject anything that would justify the idea.

Sir C. Wood was understood to say that no guarantee had been or was intended to be given by the British Government.

VICE-CHANCELLOR'S COURT, FEB. 11.

(Before Vice-Chancellor Sir J. STUART.)

HEALD V. HAY.

This was a suit to enforce an assignment, by way of security, of a pension granted in the year 1855 to the defendant, a retired military officer in the service of the late East India Company. The question was, whether the Act of the 47th George III., session 2, sec. 25, rendering assignments of pensions granted by the Crown for military and naval services void, extended to pensions granted by the East India Company.

Mr. Everitt appeared for the plaintiff.

The VICE-CHANCELLOR held that the Act of Parliament had no application to such a pension as that to which the present suit related, and made a decree giving effect to the plaintiff's security, and restraining the defendant from receiving his pension.

ORIENTAL INLAND STEAM COMPANY.

The report of the directors states that the last call on the A, B, and new issue shares taken up was generally very readily responded to, and the arrears on calls had been materially reduced. The directors look forward very confidently to the realisation of much profitable river navigation during the present year. The tug Rifle has been employed in conveying the laden barges from Kurrahee into the main stream of the Indus, in towing ships into and out of the harbour, and, by later advices received, in carrying the mail to and from Bombay. The Indus has proved herself to be a vessel of remarkable speed and efficiency, and realises in every way the expectations of the directors. The Indus commenced her first voyage on the 23rd of November last with a fair cargo, consisting of two barge loads of goods, and reached Mooltan in twenty-three days, being much less than the time taken by other steamers now running. The Sutlej steamer, heretofore plying on the Indus, was deficient in power, and has generally taken but one barge in tow; whereas two, at least, are required for a cargo to pay. This, together with the still existing competition of Government steamers, will account for the insufficient returns hitherto obtained from this vessel. However, now that the new steamer Indus is successfully at work, these remunerative but obligatory voyages have ceased, and the extra machinery ready at Kurrahee for the Sutlej will at once be added. By thus increasing the power of this vessel, she will doubtless, for the future, be enabled to work at a satisfactory profit. The directors anticipate a largely increased river traffic in India. Even without the invaluable aids of cheap water and land conveyance, the traffic returns from Bombay exhibit an increase of 90 per cent. within the last thirteen years. The board of directors continue to receive most satisfactory intelligence from Calcutta. Of the four vessels sent there to ply upon the River Ganges, three have arrived safely out, and are now in course of rapid re-erection. One of those vessels, the Soane, was launched on the 31st of December last. The balance-sheet to the 31st of December showed that £392,013 had been received and £348,243 expended, leaving a balance of £43,769.

RED SEA AND INDIAN TELEGRAPH.

The directors of this company state in their report that they have accepted the proposition of the Government to convert the present guarantee into a Government annuity of like amount, payable at the Bank of England; that all expenses of disbursements will be defrayed by the Government, and that, in the event of the Government deciding to redeem the annuity, they are to pay a capital sum which will be sufficient to purchase a Government annuity of £4. 10s. per annum on each £100 of the stock or capital of the company for the unexpired residue of the term. The new company having fulfilled the terms of their engagement with the Government by the subscription of two-thirds of their capital, and the despatch of a steamer to the Red Sea with two hundred miles of a new cable on board, made application to the Treasury in the month of December last for the stipulated transfer of the line and property of the Red Sea and India Telegraph Company, and the arrangement for the transfer of the line and property of the company has been carried out, subject to the necessary Parliamentary powers for the creation of the annuity, and the new company have undertaken to relieve this company from all further liability as from the 1st of February inst. The directors congratulate the shareholders upon the satisfactory termination of their protracted negotiations with the Government, in an arrangement which, while it converts the guarantee into a Government annuity of like amount, admitting of no doubt or question, also affords a fair prospect of bringing to a successful result the great national undertaking of the establishment of telegraphic communication with India. The capital account to the 31st of Jan. showed that £800,000 had been received, and £795,345 expended, leaving a balance of £4,655. The revenue account from the 1st of August to the 31st of January last showed that £5,410 had been received, and £7,613 expended, leaving a balance against the company of £2,203.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MR. JOHN PAXTON NORMAN has been appointed one of the Judges of the Supreme Court of Bengal, at Calcutta.

LUCKNOW PRIZE MONEY.—(India-office, Feb. 10.)—An immediate payment has been authorised in India of a first distribution of Lucknow prize money at the rate of Rs. 17 each share. Statements have been ordered to be prepared in India as soon as practicable of the names of European officers and soldiers entitled to share who have left India, and the amount payable to each, in order that the sum due to parties in England may be passed to them at the earliest possible date. Due notice will be given when the shares of officers and soldiers are payable in this country.—Gazette, Feb. 11.

MAJOR-GENERAL SIR THOMAS H. FRANKS, K.C.B.—The death of this gallant officer occurred on the 5th inst. He was second son of the late Mr. William Franks, of Carrig, Cork. He entered the army as ensign in July, 1825, and became lieutenant in September, 1826; captain, March, 1839; major, December, 1843; and lieutenant-colonel, March, 1845. He commanded the 10th regiment in the Sutlej campaigns of 1844, 1845, 1846, including the battle of Sohraon (for which he bore the medal), where he had a horse shot under him, and was slightly wounded, and in consequence was nominated a C.B. He again commanded the 10th regiment in the Punjab campaign of 1848 and 1849, including the whole of the siege operations before Mooltan. On the 17th of August of the former year he commanded the troops which repulsed the enemy's night attack upon the British camp at Mothee Thol, and on the 12th of September commanded the left column of attack at the defeat of the enemy in their strongly-entrenched position before Mooltan. After the action he succeeded to the command of the whole of the troops which were engaged, and held the position until relieved on the following morning, although wounded, and exposed to repeated attempts of the enemy to retake it. On the 7th of November he commanded the light brigade in the action at Scarg Kond, and with it led the attack; on this occasion he captured the whole of the enemy's guns without firing a shot. On the following 17th of November, in the carrying of the heights before Mooltan, he commanded the reserve on the extreme right, and directed the attack of its leading column. On the 18th of February, 1849, he joined, with the Mooltan force, the army under Lord Gough, and commanded the 10th regiment at the battle of Gojjerat; he was specially named by the Commander-in-Chief and the Governor-General for his skill, ability, and intrepidity upon this occasion, and was rewarded with the medal and clasps. He became colonel in June, 1854; and on the outbreak of the Indian mutiny he took a leading part in nearly all the most important actions, and was repeatedly commended in the despatches of General Sir Colin Campbell. In April, 1858, he was brigadier-general in command of the 4th infantry division of the army in the field, and obtained leave of absence to Calcutta for two months, and thence to England on medical certificate. The gallant general, however, preferred not to quit the scene of action, and was able accordingly to take an active part in the capture of Chanda. He was promoted to the rank of major-general in July, 1858, and nominated a K.C.B. for his distinguished services in the command of a column during the operations in India prior to and after the capture of Lucknow, and was also rewarded with the medal and clasp.

APPOINTMENT.—(Foreign-office, Jan. 25.)—The Queen has been graciously pleased to appoint Thomas Francis Wade, Esq., C.B., now Chinese Secretary and Translator, to be Secretary, Chinese Secretary, and Translator to H.M.'s Legation in China.

THE CHARTERED MERCANTILE BANK OF INDIA, LONDON, AND CHINA has announced a dividend of 5 per cent. for the past half-year.

"THE NIL DURPUN."—The following copy of a despatch from the Secretary of State for India to the Government of India, on the subject of the circulation, under the official frank of the Secretariat, of a pamphlet entitled "The Nil Durpun," and addressed to the Governor-general, was published on the 13th:—"India-office, July 25, 1861. My Lord,—I herewith transmit to you a copy of a letter, dated the 19th inst., from the Secretary to the Landholders and Commercial Association of British India in London, complaining of the circulation, under the official seal and frank of the Bengal Secretariat, of a pamphlet entitled 'The Nil Durpun.' That the pamphlet was circulated in the manner stated is admitted in the letter of the Secretary to the Government of Bengal to Mr. Fergusson, of the 3rd of June last, with a copy of which I have been furnished, and from which I observe that the occurrence took place 'during the absence of the Lieutenant-governor from Calcutta, and was not by his order.' I need hardly express to your Lordship in Council my entire disapproval of the conduct of the officer who made use of the official seal and frank of the Bengal Secretariat to give circulation to the publication referred to. Such a proceeding would have been highly improper at any time, but especially so when the position of the indigo planter in Lower Bengal was one of great difficulty and embarrassment, and when such a use of the official frank was calculated to lead to an impression (for which I am persuaded there is no real foundation) that the public authorities in Bengal entertain sentiments of hostility to the British settler. I request you will furnish the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal with a copy of this despatch.—C. Wood."

THE HISTORY OF THE OPERA,

BY SUTHERLAND EDWARDS,

Author of "The Russians at Home."

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"Mr. Sutherland Edwards has in these two volumes produced a lively and interesting history of the musical drama.

The narrative is thickly interspersed with biographical sketches of actors, authors, singers, musicians, and composers, and enlivened by numerous characteristic anecdotes."—Daily News, Jan. 27, 1862.

"Two very interesting volumes."—Critic, Jan. 25, 1862.

"This is a work of great value—undoubtedly the most interesting and trustworthy on the history of the Opera. Mr. Edwards is thoroughly conversant with his subject, and the fact of his having travelled much in continental cities gives to his two volumes additional worth, as it has enabled him to treat that section of them bearing on the Continental Opera in a masterly and exhaustive manner."—Caledonian Mercury, Jan. 31, 1862.

"It is interesting, and, on the whole, well done."—Examiner, Jan. 25, 1862.

"The numerous phases through which this great institution has passed afford great scope for a writer, and the work now under notice will be found to deal with the subject in a very comprehensive manner. . . . Anecdotes are plentiful throughout the work, and served to make 'The History of the Opera' a highly entertaining work."—Observer, Jan. 19, 1862.

"Mr. Edwards has here produced a work which ought to command a great sale, if its merits and the great number of Opera-goers may be considered. Completely master of his subject, and possessing a ready and pleasing pen, he in these volumes gives us an exceedingly interesting history of operatic performances. . . . A work of unquestionable merit and of exceeding interest."—Morning Herald, Feb. 3, 1862.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF MISS CORNELIA KNIGHT,

LADY COMPANION TO THE PRINCESS CHARLOTTE OF WALES.

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"We can heartily recommend the entire work to our readers as one of the most curious and authentic disclosures of State affairs in this country, and one of the most interesting and graphic journals of travel which the literary world has for a long time been called upon to notice."—Press, June 22, 1861.

"Before concluding a notice of a very pleasant book which, while it is full of what may be called private history, contains no prurient, scandalous, or positively frivolous gossip, it should be stated that the materials from which it has been compiled were placed by the family into whose possession they passed on Miss Knight's death into the hands of Mr. J. W. Kaye, who undertook the office of editing the work. Mr. Kaye, however, states that his time was so much engrossed by other occupations, that he knows not when these volumes might have been prepared for the press if it had not been for the assistance very cordially rendered by his friend Mr. James Hutton, of whose intimate acquaintance with the social history of the Georgian Era no better proof could be afforded than that which speaks out from his interesting volume on English Life, 'A Hundred Years Ago.' To that gentleman is to be assigned the main part of the credit of editing the work, and there are evident marks of a successful struggle with that most trying of all editorial difficulties—a superabundance of materials. Much intelligence, industry, and care have been bestowed upon the production of the book, and such literary conscientiousness will, no doubt, meet with its reward in the public favour."—Illustrated London News, June 22, 1861.

"The matters which will secure popularity for the Autobiography are those which resuscitate the stories that excited the curiosity of our forefathers, and made them invent other scandals, scarcely any one of which, fiction as they were, exhibited half the strangeness of the facts themselves, as they are now recorded."—Bell's Messenger, June 15, 1861.

"Our authoress writes clearly and sensibly, and will, we think, be found, on the whole, a much more amusing and agreeable companion than Madame d'Arolay."—Daily Review, July 1, 1861.

"The work of an acute and sensible woman of the world, a woman with a good head and a good heart. It does not, like the late Lady Charlotte Bury's 'memoirs,' deal with matters of scandal and of passing notoriety, nor does it bring forward into ill-natured prominence the weak points of dukes and duchesses of fifty years ago. We perceive in the entire two volumes not a single prurient or indelicate passage (a great thing to say of a work which treats of the court of the Regency), but attempts, like equity itself, to put the best possible construction upon events as they arise."—Universal News, July 6.

"Emphatically a readable book is this autobiography. Indeed, having once opened it, the reader cannot easily lay it aside until he has got through the whole. Not the least interesting part is the collection of miscellaneous anecdotes of persons and events which are clustered together as a sort of appendix at the close. It is a book fit to be read, but fit also for something better than a casual reading; worthy of a higher reputation than an evanescent popularity, merely founded upon the great names it introduces, and the amusing scraps of gossip it contains."—Morning Star, July 22, 1861.

"Of the popularity of these volumes, on account of their historical as well as gossiping merits, there can be no doubt whatever."—Athenæum, June 8, 1861.

"The journal of a clever and lady-like woman, who saw many men and many cities, and whose testimony is not heightened by the warmth of too lively an imagination, nor blackened by the tints of malice, must be—what we have found it to be—unusually interesting reading. It is, moreover, put before us in a form which must be considered exceedingly creditable to its publishers, and to those to whom they have entrusted it. Due editorial care, and a proper judgment in selection and annotation, are so extremely uncommon among those who generally prepare books of this class for the public, that we feel bound to express our cordial thanks to Mr. Kaye and his coadjutor, Mr. James Hutton, for the complete, and, at the same time, unobtrusive fashion in which they have performed their task. A short foot-note is applied to all names, with regard to which a reader of the present day is likely to feel curiosity; and where the Autobiographer refers to published books, their full title is given. In these and all similar points nothing is left to be desired by the most lazy or ignorant of readers."—Spectator, June 22, 1861.

"These volumes will be read in every country seat, at every watering place, this autumn. They are fresh; full of most attractive anecdotes and interesting revelations. Miss Knight, whose anecdote books and journals have supplied these two handsome volumes, was Lady Companion to poor Princess Charlotte: she was an observant and shrewd woman of the world, also. Among the great people who were her constant companions, she appears to have been an inveterate collector of lively anecdotes. Her learning and womanly accomplishments secured her the brilliant position she held. In Mr. James Hutton the 'far-famed Cornelia Knight' has found a most discreet and accomplished editor."—Weekly Newspaper, June 16, 1861.

"These are highly interesting volumes. . . . There is hardly a page of the pleasant memoirs now published of this remarkable woman that will not be read with interest, but the attention of every reader will of course be most strongly directed to those passages of the work which serve to throw an additional light upon the relationship that existed between the Princess Charlotte and her unfeeling father and unhappy mother during the brief but eventful period of eighteen months—from January, 1813, to July, 1814—that Miss Knight retained her office of lady companion. No one will rise from the perusal of that part of the work without a feeling of the deepest sympathy for the persecuted—and, as it would seem, systematically tortured—Princess; and of the warmest indignation at the unmanly spitefulness, not to say absolute malignity of the father's treatment of the generous, noble-hearted child. Miss Knight, speaking in the fulness of the knowledge derived from her confidential position in the princess's household, more than confirms what has been previously asserted of the prince's cruelty; and presents us with a picture of royal littleness in the father and of royal wretchedness in the daughter, such as we hope may never again be exhibited within the walls of an English palace."—Observer, June 30, 1861.

"The volumes are, indeed, a mine of anecdote."—Critic, June 22, 1861.

PREFACE.

The Mutiny Act and Articles of War having undergone considerable amendment in the present Session of Parliament, it has appeared to the authors a fitting opportunity to lay before the military profession a concise treatise on the laws under which they serve.

In so doing they have not confined their attention to Courts-martial, but have endeavoured to provide the soldier of every rank and every service with the means of ascertaining his privileges as well as his duties and liabilities.

The Acts relating to the Militia have all been enumerated, but their bulk renders it impossible to give them at length in a work like the present. The Government having pledged themselves to consolidate the Militia laws next Session, perhaps there may then be some hope of presenting them to the reader in a comprehensive form. The Militia Bill of the present session, as it introduces some new and important provisions, is given at length in the Appendix.

A full abstract of the Laws affecting Volunteers and Yeomanry Corps occupies a separate chapter, and the Act whereby they are enabled to acquire lands for practice grounds (which at the time these words are written is yet before Parliament), will likewise be added.

A shorter and more popular notice of these Acts might have been more agreeable to the majority of readers, but in the hope of making this book useful as a book of reference, not only to Volunteers, but to magistrates and other civil dignitaries, it has been deemed more advantageous to ensure accuracy by quoting the words of the enactments, than by curtailment to risk the omission of important matter. Any reader disinclined to peruse the Acts at length, may find any subject on which he desires to inform himself by reference to the Index.

The question of Tolls on the Metropolitan Bridges having lately excited some controversy, a notice of the exemption clauses in the several Acts will be found in the Appendix, where also the late General Order relative to retired pay to Adjutants of Volunteers has been subjoined.

The authors feel that they owe some apology for publishing a law book in the present novel form; but after much consideration and many friendly suggestions, they have preferred to compress matter which would well have filled a more bulky volume, into this handy and inexpensive shape, in order to bring it within the reach of every one.

Before concluding this preface, the authors are bound to record their obligations to many useful and elaborate work, "Hough's Military Precedents," with the assistance of which their labour would have been much extended. They also wish to acknowledge the assistance of "Simmons on Courts-martial," "Hall on Courts-martial," and H. B. Thompson's "Military Forces of Great Britain."

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

By the Bombay Mail of the 27th January we have received several official papers of considerable importance. In the foremost rank may be placed the Viceroy's Proclamation of the new Council of the Governor-general of India, the first meeting of which was held in the Government-house at Calcutta, on Saturday, the 18th January. The Councils of Bombay and Madras, however, did not meet until the 22nd, the former being opened by Sir George Clerk with an address, which will be found elsewhere. In addition to the Governor, the Bombay Council at present consists of the following members:—Lieut.-gen. Sir William R. Mansfield, K.C.B., Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay Army, and Second Member of Council; the Hon. M. R. Westropp, Acting Advocate-general; His Highness Abdool Doolair Khan Abdool Khair Khan, Nawab of Savanoor; the Hon. Mahadhoorow Wittul Vinchoorkur; the Hon. Rustomjee Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy; the Hon. H. W. Reeves, Third Member of Council; the Hon. W. E. Frere, Fourth Member of Council; the Hon. W. B. Tristram; the Hon. Shet Prembbhai Hemabhai, City Deputy Magistrate and Nug-gursett of Ahmedabad; and the Hon. Jug-gonath Sunkersett, of Bombay; Mr. Shaw Stewart, Acting Judicial Secretary to Government, officiating as Secretary to the Council.

Of the proceedings of the Madras Council we have not yet received an account, though in a position to state that its Legislative Branch is composed of the following additional members:—Mr. T. S. Smyth, Advocate-general, Mr. T. Pycroft, Chief Secretary, Mr. C. Pelly, Senior Member of the Board of Revenue, official members; Mr. W. R. Arbuthnot, Mr. R. O. Campbell, V. Sadagopah Charloo, non-official members. Mr. J. D. Mayne, barrister-at-law, has been appointed Clerk of the Council.

Another Government notification accords permission to public servants of the State to hold possession of landed property. This concession is fully justified by the high and honourable feelings that have become the usage of modern society. Certain restrictions are, of course, appended to the privilege, but only such as every right-minded man would desire for his own sake.

The third is a particularly interesting document, containing a dignified reproof to the Lieut.-governor of Bengal for his mismanagement of the indigo districts. For a fuller notice of this able and important Minute, we must refer our readers to our next issue. In the meantime, we may observe that the ryots have little cause for gratitude towards their late champions and adherents. Roused to action by the violent and fraudulent conduct of their too indulgently treated tenants, the English landholders have not only instituted an examination into the leases granted to the ryots, but have also set about remeasuring their holdings. The consequence is that the ryots are compelled to resign their filchings, and content themselves with the land for which they really pay rent. In many cases it has been discovered that they have gradually taken possession of more than double their legitimate claim, and while paying for, say, five beegahs, have appropriated the produce of twelve to eighteen. The rents are also being enhanced, and estates lately worth £10,000 are now valued at twice that amount.

The irreparable loss with which the Queen has been afflicted has excited the deepest sympathy of her Anglo-Indian subjects. An address of condolence from the inhabitants of Bombay has been dispatched by the present mail to her Majesty's Secretary of State; and others will no doubt follow in due time from other parts of the empire.

The House of Mysore has been visited with a sad disgrace in the person of Prince Kum-roodin, grandson of Prince Gholam Mahomed, and third in descent from the famous Tippoo Sultan, who has been found guilty of an attempted fraud on the Bank of Bengal in trying to pass off a Rs. 10 note which he had defaced, as a note for Rs. 1,000. The princely criminal has been sentenced to seven years' imprisonment, with labour, in Alipore gaol.

The work of reduction is going on briskly, and has now reached the Madras Presidency. It is proposed to disband eight native regiments, a measure that appears to be decidedly unwelcome to those whom it most concerns. Sir Hope Grant, it is said, is about to proceed to Calcutta, to remonstrate with the Viceroy, for there is nothing so universally unpopular as a retrenchment of expenditure.

Sir Charles Wood's "India Stock Transfer Bill" passed through Committee in the House of Commons on Monday, the 17th inst. This resolution was reported by Mr. Massey on the 18th, and agreed to.

The amount of specie that will be taken by the outgoing steamer with the India and China mail to-morrow is £126,397, distributed as follows:—£12,000 in gold to Alexandria, £8,241 in gold, and £66,941 in silver to India and Ceylon, and £39,215 in silver to China and the Straits.

Casualties by Death in the Armies of India reported since last Publication.

H.M.'s FORCES.—Brig. G. H. Robertson, C.B., and A.D.C. to the Queen, at Aden, Jan. 10. Capt. H. B. Conner, at Calcutta, Jan. 10. Lieut. G. Cronyn, of the Queen's 61st Regt. (by suicide), at Fort William. Capt. Blyth, of the Vittoria.

EMIGRATION OF LABOUR.

The tea-planters of Assam, Cachar, Sylhet, and of other districts favourable to the growth of the tea plant, one and all complain of the difficulty they experience in obtaining labour to carry on to a satisfactory result the operations they have embarked in. There is scarcely a tea company in India that is not obliged to contract its transactions, and therefore greatly to impede its progress and realisation of profits, by the great difficulty experienced in procuring a sufficiency of hands to carry on the desired work. It is the same case with the coal companies. They, too, complain of the utter inefficiency of the supply of labour, and of the loss of profits they one and all experience from this cause. And yet, while this subject, illustrated with indisputable facts, is being brought prominently to the notice of Government by the Landholders' and Commercial Association of Calcutta, we find that large indentments are being made on the labouring population of India for emigration to the French colonies of Guiana and Guadeloupe, in addition to the already large numbers of British subjects who have been shipped to the Island of Reunion. The agency established in Calcutta to promote and control the emigration of coolies to the French colonies is but one of several now fast appearing in other parts of India, under the sanction of Sir Charles Wood. We have maintained from the first, that it was impolitic in the extreme to send British subjects into servitude with foreign masters. It is absurd to argue that the servitude is voluntary, and that there are no elements of compulsion about it; for it cannot be for one moment upheld that the emigrants themselves have the most remote idea as to where, or into whose service, they are selling themselves. The agent who can hold out the largest pecuniary inducement will inevitably meet with the greatest success, so long as the emigrant is ignorant of all beyond the simple fact that he has to go abroad. He may be aware that he will be absent from his home for a given time; but he believes that, at the expiration of the term of his engagement, he will assuredly be returned to his native land, and to his home, in comparatively wealthy circumstances. He believes that the British Government is bound to see that in this respect, at any rate, the contract is fulfilled; he places his reliance on this, and trusts himself to the emigration agent, on the faith of the British Government. Irrespective of the glaring wrong done to British subjects entering into pursuits having for their end the improvement of irrigation, of means of transport, of agriculture, of mining, or of the various methods whereby India's prosperity may be advanced, the Government has pledged itself to more than it can perform. In the pursuit of philanthropy, in its anxiety to see the slavery of the African discontinued, it is indirectly selling its own subjects into a bondage, scarcely, if at all, different from that which has hitherto been the portion of the dusky son of Africa. In allowing, and even encouraging, an emigration to lands over which Great Britain has no control, it is virtually selling its subjects to a foreign Power. It is quite true that certain stipulations have been entered into by the high contracting Powers; but in the event of a rupture with France, can England enforce the fulfilment of those stipulations? If she cannot, she is directly sanctioning the obtaining of labour under false pretences. If we enter into a contract, binding ourselves to the performance of some specified act in return for certain benefits derivable by us, knowing that the performance of our part of the contract must, under certain contingencies, be beyond our power of fulfilment, we most assuredly render ourselves liable to punishment under certain criminal Acts. What is venal on the part of the individual cannot possibly be virtuous on the part of the Government. We therefore maintain that the Government of her Majesty the Empress of India, in permitting even the emigration of her subjects to French colonies, is guilty of a double wrong, inasmuch as those who should be their first consideration are ignored altogether, and their efforts at progress and improvement paralysed; and further, they are powerless to fulfil their part of the contract with the emigrant, which guarantees his return to his home, safe in person and in property.

These remarks, which have been forcibly impressed upon us since the introduction into India of French emigration agencies, have been called forth to-day by the information we have received of the establishment, at the French ports of Pondichery and Karikal, of British Consular agents, for the purpose of facilitating under the treaty between Great Britain and France the emigration from India to the French colonies of subjects of her Majesty the Queen. It is true that the Emigration Agency will be, by this measure, placed under the supervision of British officers; but it will be no easy matter for them to ascertain, even should they be desirous of so doing, the circumstances under which emigration has been induced, or what compulsion may have been used to obtain an unwilling acquiescence.—Englishman.

THE BENGAL MILITARY FUND—A BRIEF HISTORY.

About the year 1806 the officers of the Bengal Army established a Fund for the purpose of granting annuities to widows. The need for such a Fund had then begun to be felt. Appeals made by destitute widows to private charity, and to the princely liberality of the East India Company, were frequent and inconvenient.

This Fund, the "Old Widows Fund," on which a few annuitants still exist, was about the end of 1824 enlarged into the present Military Fund. The army had then been largely augmented, and among its officers marriage had displaced less honourable engagements. Countenanced and aided by the Government, the new Fund at first prospered, though by an unfortunate oversight there was left a worm at the root. The Court of Directors had allowed two shillings and fourpence for the sicca rupee. This was an ample allowance, but the Fund managers nevertheless granted to its widows the still more favourable rate of two shillings and sixpence for the sicca rupee; and before the loss caused by this was discovered and stayed, the fund had become, in the view of an actuary, insolvent. Yet it had many lakhs of rupees invested at eight per cent. in Government securities, and besides this, a large current income from the contributions of its members, and to the thoughtless looker-on it seemed rich to overflowing.

In the beginning of 1835 an anonymous writer in a Calcutta newspaper sounded a note of alarm. He was speedily silenced by a "Director," and the matter seemingly dropped. But the "Director," a good man and true, had been startled. Reference was made to the late Mr. Griffith Davies, and he in the year 1844 declared that the fund was in an unsafe state. Nothing was then done in the way of remedy. Further inquiry was, however, made, and Mr. Neison, having obtained from the India House data for the investigation of European mortality in India, applied the results to an estimate of the Fund's condition, and concluded that there was not much amiss. But, having acquired a better knowledge of the exchange transactions, Mr. Neison, in a second report, showed that the Fund had, owing to this cause, sustained a ruinous loss, and he then strongly advised that for this a claim should be made on the East India Company. Such a claim had indeed no foundation, and though much clamour was raised, the directors of the Fund were not misled, and did not make it. They did better, they increased the current subscriptions, diminished the widows' annuities, and curtailed the personal benefits allowed to sick officers. These measures, if carried out, would in course of time have retrieved the affairs of the Fund. This was not, however, permitted; the Court of Directors refused to sanction any reduction of the annuities of incumbent widows, and we fear that in consequence the progress of the Fund is still downwards.

The late change in the organisation of the Indian army had induced the Home Government to contemplate a dissolution of the Indian Service Funds. We have no precise information of this fact, but already it has been ordered that chaplains are no longer to be admitted as members of the Military Fund. This is truly the beginning of the end. Against the destruction of these Funds we would raise a most earnest cry. We say to the Government—reduce if you will the donations you grant, and shorten the privileges you have allowed in the way of interest and exchange. Relieve yourself as far as may be of all weight that oppresses you—but do not break up these Funds. They have done you, even you, an incalculable benefit—they have led your officers to live soberly, temperately, and healthfully, they have altered the face of Indian society; they have silently but certainly brought about a moral revolution. Look back to no distant date and see an universal concubinage with its attendant vices of all kinds. Destroy the Funds and look forward. But we pause.—Friend of India.

THE FUTURE OF THE MEDICAL SERVICE IN INDIA.

The scheme of medical amalgamation in the hands of Colonels Balfour and Hannington, the chief and the controller of military finance, is progressing towards completion at a more rapid rate than we expected, when we formerly sketched its probable outline. In a few weeks it will be submitted to the Governor-general. If not sent to England for approval before his departure, the plan will certainly accompany Lord Canning when he bids farewell to India. One of the last acts of the present Viceroy, as of his predecessor, will thus be an attempt to do justice to the Indian Medical Service.

At its present stage the scheme consists of the following recommendations. There will be full and complete amalgamation of the Indian with the Queen's Service, no local service being maintained. The commissions of all Indian officers will be ante-dated, so as to put them on a par with the Queen's surgeons. The Royal Warrant will be applied to all, and the Royal scale of pensions. Instead of head money, which Sir Charles Wood is anxious to abolish, a scale will be adopted giving each officer the pay of his rank, with graduated staff allowances for separate duties, great and small. We refrain from publishing the proposed staff scale, as it is only in embryo form and might excite false hopes. But even the greatest grumbler will acknowledge that it is liberal. The poor assistant-surgeon of five years' standing, who struggles on in some obscure civil station on 360 rs. a month, by the new arrangement will at once take his rank and pay of captain, with a staff allowance such as to make his income nearly one-half better than it now is. It follows, from the adoption of the Royal Warrant in its entirety, that promotion to the rank of surgeon will henceforth take place after ten years' service. The authorities hope to induce not less than a hundred and fifty of the eight hundred medical officers in the three Presidencies to retire, so as to allow the amalgamation to take place. All who have served twenty-five years—or perhaps twenty—will be offered the home scale of pension, in addition to the pension of the annuity fund, each, of course, paying up what may still be deficient in his minimum subscription to that fund. This is a most important provision, securing, as it does, not only the higher home scale of retiring pension, but the £300 of the fund to subscribers, years before they could have expected to be entitled to it. To all under twenty or twenty-five years' service, the option will be given of receiving back the whole amount of their fund subscriptions, or of continuing to pay on as at present, till they are entitled to their annuity, which will be guaranteed. This is simple justice, but it seems to us that the men, in Bengal at least, who do not prefer to take back the whole of their subscriptions, will be silly indeed. In Madras the Fund surplus of some thirteen lakhs of rupees will be of course returned to the Service, and fine spoil it will be. Government are aware they cannot legally touch it. It is in contemplation to make some exceptional provision for old officers now entitled to their full pension of £700, besides the Fund annuity, but how they will be dealt with has not yet been decided. The double controlling staff will, of course, be abolished, but with this exception,—the number of Deputy Inspector Generals' appointments will, it is recommended, be kept up.

To all this no objection can be made. The scheme is just to the Service and to the public, for whose interests the State must care. It is liberal—but not more liberal than is right, in the case of so useful and even distinguished a body of scientific men—to the seniors asked to retire, and to the juniors who remain. But there are a few points it does not consider, which we trust Lord Canning will not allow to pass without notice at a time so favourable for reform as the hour of amalgamation. The Widows' and Children's Fund should be guaranteed, and the five years' staff rule vigorously enforced. Even in the case of men of distinguished service like Dr. Forsyth, the rule should be formally adhered to by requiring re-appointment when the five years have elapsed. Justice will thus be done to junior officers, inefficient old men will be got rid of, and able and experienced surgeons will be retained on special grounds which all recognise. Though we fully agreed in the decision of the Home authorities, hard as it seemed, that none but pure British born subjects should be admitted into the amalgamated service, we do not overlook the claims of the East Indians and natives of India on the one hand, nor the advantage to the public of employing them on the other. A local service is not to be maintained, and physical as well as other reasons forbid that either of these classes should enter the general service. How is the difficulty to be met? Thus. There is already a "subordinate medical establishment," the highest grade in which is that of sub-assistant surgeons, who hold certain diplomas from the Indian medical colleges. Under proper supervision this establishment has proved itself most useful. Let it be extended; let the miserable Rs. 150 a month now offered to its highest grade as salary be graduated till it reaches Rs. 500, so as to attract not only skilled natives and East Indians, but those "uncovenanted" doctors now to be found in Calcutta and several stations in Bengal, and whom there is still a prospect of still more largely employing in civil stations when the amalgamation takes place. Let the admission to the highest grade involving this salary be secured only by a doctor's diploma from any of the English or European universities, and by ability. A new impetus would thus be given to medical education in India, the just claims of these two communities would be satisfied, a class of superior practitioners would be secured for subordinate appointments, and better men would be induced to settle as uncovenanted medical officers in civil stations, as private physicians, and as surgeons of emigrant ships and transports. We must not overlook the fact, that the first result of the amalgamation will be a wide field for private surgeons in India. The European community is increasing at a rapid rate. As in England, they must more and more learn to pay for their own clergymen and doctors, and to pay at somewhat cheaper rates than they are now forced by custom to do to the State surgeons who are not dependent on private practice.—Friend of India.

THE ASSAM FRONTIER.—The Englishman states "that on the last day of the expired year news came in to Jorehaut that a party of Bordubia and Shamsha Nagas, two hundred strong, occupying the hills to the south-east of Jorehaut, had attacked the people on a neighbouring plantation, and threatened to cut them up if certain demands were not complied with. It appears that the Nagas wished to be paid a rent, or black mail, for several tracts of land held in the district from the English Government, more, perhaps, with a view to extract presents than from any impression that the land was theirs, and to which they have not the slightest claim. The planter decidedly refused to entertain the demand, and referred them to the commissioner, informing them, at the same time, that it would be to their own interest to disperse as quickly as possible. The Jorehaut Police Guard have been promptly sent to the factory, accompanied by the Darogah, to investigate the case; and it is presumed no further trouble will be received from these tribes at present. It is scarcely matter for surprise that the semi-wild and savage tribes who inhabit the hilly tracts even within our boundaries, and who have, since our occupation of the country, been driven step by step further into the wilds which now form their homes, should make some effort to coerce those who occupy the soil which they at no remote period looked upon as their own, however untenable their claims may really have been, and to levy, in some form or other, the means of subsistence from those they can look on only as usurpers. However necessary it may be to enforce our rights to the soil, and to afford every protection to those who, relying on the strength of the Government to maintain them in their holdings, have settled on it, it is nevertheless extremely advisable that, while insisting that these Hill people desist from molesting their more peaceable and industrious neighbours, we should do so in such manner as to ensure quiet, rather than by provoking their enmity to excite them to overt acts of rebellion. There is but one means of effecting this; there is but one argument to which the uncivilised man will ever pay heed. Force, not used, but displayed, is the sole method by which these lawless Hill people can be kept in order. Let them see in their immediate vicinity, even quartered in their country, a force of British troops sufficient at once to crush any rising on their part, and make success hopeless, and they will become peaceable, if not contented, and will eventually settle down, as have similar tribes in other localities, into an orderly and industrious people. If the Government will at once send into Assam a force sufficient on the moment to crush any outbreak on the part of these Nagas and Abors, the country will be speedily settled. The cost of an adequate force may entail an expenditure of an additional lakh or two spread over two or three years, but it would effectually prevent the recurrence of the petty wars we have hitherto been constantly engaged in, which are far more costly; and will, in a short time, cause the entire population to settle to peaceable and profitable pursuits. Whereas the constant recurrence of petty but mischievous struggles can but have the effect of causing the people rather to sharpen their swords than to turn them into ploughshares."

CONVEYANCE OF CONVICTS.—Advices have reached us (Englishman) from Commercially giving us accounts of the manner in which upwards of one hundred and fifty convicts have been shipped on board the I. G. S. N. Co's steamer Simla, for conveyance to Calcutta. These men are, one and all, under sentence of transportation for life; many having been parties to the late mutiny and rebellion, and concerned in the murder of Europeans. Some are, indeed, well known characters; men who took an active part, and even leadership, in the sad occurrences of 1857, and for whose security effective measures should most undoubtedly have been adopted. With such a body of notoriously bad characters, comprising, as it does, the murderers of Mr. Cockerell and of Mr. Tucker, who, it may be recollected, was hanged by order of his once Deputy-Collector at Futtaypore, the old Rajah Ramnust Singh, of Goruckpore, and Nawab Ali Khan, of Banda, it behoved the Government to have detailed a party of European troops under a commissioned officer as a guard on board the steamer; indeed, we could hardly have believed any other course would have been adopted but for the positive evidence we have to the contrary. The Nawab Ali Khan had already succeeded once in bribing the native guard over the Allahabad gaol, and, but for a fortunate discovery of the plot, would have made his escape. Yet with this proof of the man's power to corrupt his guards, we find a party of most notorious transgressors of the law shipped on board a steamer with a small native crew, guarded solely by a party of some sixty to seventy native policemen under the command of a European inspector, who had to be removed from his post for misconduct on board the steamer on its arrival at Mirzapore; and though another was put in his place, his inability to speak or understand the language rendered him quite incompetent to fill the position he was placed in. The consequence of such imprudence, to give it the mildest term, on the part of the authorities at Allahabad, has been the successful tampering with the police guard on board, during a long passage down the river, and the general concerting of a plan for the escape of the entire body of convicts. There can be little doubt that they would have succeeded in liberating themselves and overpowering the officers and crew of the ship, but for the eagerness of the first prisoner who was freed from his shackles to escape. He contrived to get on shore, but was, fortunately, discovered, arrested, and returned on board, when, on examination of the rest it was found that they had been provided with files by the corrupted guard, and that twelve of the most notoriously bad characters had succeeded in nearly divesting themselves of their irons. There can be little doubt that had the first man but remained quiet till the rest had divested themselves of their irons, one and all would have escaped; and had the officers of the ship interfered to stay the general exodus there can be little doubt that they would have shared the fate of the former victims of some of the party, and have filled a bloody grave. The remainder of her voyage was completed in safety, and the prisoners were securely lodged in the Allipore Gaol on the 7th of January. We cannot, however, refrain from observing that the responsible authorities are indebted to the firmness, good judgment, and foresight of Captain Argles, for this lucky escape from the consequences of their own utter want of the most ordinary prudence in sending down such a number of men, convicted of such heinous crimes, under a guard of native policemen, some of whom had been actually servants of the leading criminals, thereby placing in jeopardy the lives and properties of many. It is, indeed, fortunate for the credit of the Government that the commander of the steamer was a man equal to the emergency, and we sincerely hope that Captain Argles may not be himself punished under some of the eccentric sections of the penal code, for the punishment we have heard he was compelled to inflict on the mutinous convicts.

PORT BLAIR.—The convicts have been dying off in a rather singular manner, and although only a small number are in hospital, the deaths have been comparatively more numerous than in any other previous month. One of the late runaways has returned to surrender himself, and though he reports that the aborigines treated him kindly, his experience of some considerable suffering will go a long way towards persuading his fellow convicts that even their penal servitude is far better than liberty among the Andamanese.

AN EARTHQUAKE was observed at Cuttack at about twenty-five minutes past noon on the 13th January. An undulating movement was felt and a low rumbling noise was heard, as of a heavily laden waggon passing over a pavement. Both these phenomena lasted about ten seconds. During the previous ten days the minimum temperature had been three degrees higher than in the earlier part of the month, and the weather was felt to be unusually close.

ODDH BRITISH INDIAN ASSOCIATION.—The first report has been published of the British Indian Association of Ouddh, which seems to owe its origin to a Bengali Baboo, also an Ouddh Talookdar, Dukhinarunjun Mookerjee Bahadoor. The committee consists of thirty of the leading talookdars. The first rule declares the object of the association to be "to take every lawful and constitutional measure so to help her Majesty's administration in Hindostan, and especially in Ouddh, that it may prove conducive to the welfare equally of the people of Britain and of this country." Strange words to come from men so lately in rebellion against our authority. "Every native talookdar of an undivided estate in Ouddh, paying an annual revenue to Government of Rs. 5,000 and upwards, shall be reckoned a member. Any other native gentleman of Hindostan may also be eligible to become a member. In order to defray the expenses of the association, the members shall have to pay an annual subscription, which, in the opinion of the committee, may be commensurate to their respective positions in society." Maharajah Digbijoy Singh, of Bulram-pore, who rescued Thompson and Delafosse after the Cawnpore atrocity, is President. The first measures on which the association have taken action are these. The Secretary is to apply for the restoration of villages to talookdars to whose estates they belonged prior to 1262 (revenue year); for the suspension of the penal code in Ouddh for a year, till the people become acquainted with it; to give preference to talookdars in consideration of their prescriptive right to jungle adjoining their estates, and to allow the talookdars to dismiss village Chowkedars, as of old.

MESSRS. D. WILSON AND CO. propose to convert their most profitable hotel business into the "Great Eastern Hotel Company (Limited)", with a capital of fifteen lakhs of rupees in six thousand shares of Rs. 250 each. Mr. Wilson has worked the concern for twenty-seven years, and for the first two years guarantees the shareholders a dividend of twelve per cent., while he himself holds fifteen hundred of the shares. If the great hotel companies of Europe and America have succeeded, still more ought this company to prosper.

THE RACE HORSE "ARAGO."—Mr. Betagh, of Allahabad, has been obliged to destroy his celebrated race horse Arago, on account of the severe injuries it lately sustained by an accident on the Turf. Arago's pedigree may interest many of our readers:—"His sire, Crassus, was by the celebrated Emilinus, and his dam, Lady Humphrey, was by the English horse Humphrey, brother of Humphrey Clinker, thus uniting by sire and dam the most aristocratic blood in the English stud book." Arago was bred by Mr. Vincent, of Barh, in 1856. Since 1859 he won stakes and plates to the value of some 13,000 rupees, beating many horses of respectable names, among whom were Sunrise, Tasman, Telegram, Orderly, Resheed, and the now famous Hotspur.

H.E. THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF left Rawul Pindoe on the 5th January for Murree, Abbottabad, and Hazara. He will rejoin his camp two marches from Rawul Pindoe. The camp moves on steadily to Peshawur. From Peshawur he goes down the whole Trans-Indus Frontier with Brigadier Chamberlain, and will minutely inspect the outposts. He has got quite over his two accidents. The first fall he got, not from his horse being spirited, but from the pig which he speared and killed in the act of charging him, upsetting his horse, which was indeed carried off its legs. The second fall he had when cantering along with a loose rein, his horse tripped and fell. The second was much the worst of the two. The 51st and 98th Regiments have improved very much in health since their arrival at Rawul Pindoe.—Delhi Gazette.

INDUSTRIAL ARTS COMMITTEE.—The Bengal Government have recommended, and the Supreme Government sanctioned, an additional grant of Rs. 12,000, to enable the Central Committee for Industrial Arts to carry out their object. His Excellency has also requested the Secretary of State to extend the period allowed for the reception, at home, of contributions to the Industrial Exhibition of 1862.

THE KIRWEE JEWELS.—According to a correspondent of the Englishman:—"Some short time ago the Secretary of State for India, in a despatch to the Viceroy, expressed his opinion that there was no longer any reason for deferring the sale of jewels captured by the force under General Whitlock at Kirwee, and added that, when sold, the proceeds might be deposited in the Government Treasury, pending the decision of the Crown as to the ultimate appropriation of the prize. It appears that Major Clifton, of the 12th Lancers, one of the prize agents for the Saugor Field Force, intimated to Sir Charles Wood that he had been informed by Captain Horan, of the 43rd Light Infantry, another of the prize agents, that, although he, the Captain, had made frequent applications to the Calcutta authorities, he had always been told that nothing could be done till instructions were received from home. It is now said that Sir Charles has written to Lord Canning on the subject, in no way calling into question the conduct of the Indian Government, but impressing upon his attention the necessity, as so great an interest is felt in the matter, of realising, as soon as possible, the jewels and bullion captured by General Whitlock's column. 'While this is not done,' says Sir Charles, 'the jewels are being depreciated, and the prize fund is losing interest by allowing so large an amount of jewels to lie idle in the Allahabad treasury.'"

PRIVILEGE LEAVE, C. S.—Some months ago we alluded to a memorial signed by a large number of Bengal civilians, which was forwarded through the Government of India to the Secretary of State for India, with, as we believe, the strong support of the Viceroy, praying for the grant of privilege leave at the end of the service, in modification of the existing rule, which insists on the recipient of privilege leave returning to his post for three months after its expiry. The Secretary of State, we have now learned, has refused to grant their prayer, on the ground of its shortening the period of residence in India qualifying for an annuity, and because it is objectionable that a civil servant, though entitled to three months' privilege leave, if remaining in the service, should enjoy the same when vacating an office to which he does not intend to return. The memorial, in short, has been altogether rejected, and civil servants retiring on annuities must, if they vacate their appointments prior to the first of May, remain subject to proportionate deductions from their pay—a perfectly reasonable ruling.

UMRITSUR.—The Delhi Gazette states that more rain has fallen in the district, and that though not much it has led to an improvement in prices, however small, by continuing to remove apprehensions for the outturn of the winter crop. Gram is said to be coming forward satisfactorily, and of wheat there will be an abundant outturn if more rain should fall, of which there was every prospect when its correspondent wrote. There had been, however, three days severe frost on the nights of the 9th, 10th, and 11th Jan. That of the 9th was more severe than any known for years, large pools of water in the open being completely frozen over. The result has been disastrous to gardens and also to the potatoe cultivation, which is beginning to extend around Umrtsur. The main channel of the Baree Doab Canal, which was filled on the 3rd, has been again closed up, but will be re-opened about the 7th Feb. The water was let in to fill cracks and crannies wherever such might exist. Captain Crofton having arrived from England, the staff of the new Sutlej Canal, to be cut at the expense of the Raja of Putteela, who has assigned twenty-five lacs for the work, has been formed. It consists, at present, of Major Blagrove, Lieutenant Forbes, and Mr. Paddy. Operations to commence about the end of January. His Honour the Lieut. governor passed through Umrtsur on the 13th, on his way to Calcutta by invitation from the Governor-general.

FORT WILLIAM will be lighted with gas before the end of July. It is the intention of Government to drop the time ball and fire the mid-day gun at one instead of noon as heretofore, to meet the wishes of the shipping community.

NEW YEAR'S-DAY IN CALCUTTA.—The fancy fair at the Calcutta Botanical Garden on New Year's day is pronounced by general consent to have been a great success. The number present in the course of the day was several thousands, including all classes of the community. Among the amusements provided were Aunt Sally and Punch and Judy—though the last was a failure. Beer was to be had "on tap" at a tavern improvised for the occasion. There was a theatre on the ground in which some dramas were well acted by amateurs. The articles exposed for sale at the various stalls were rapidly disposed of at highly satisfactory prices. Music and refreshments of every kind added to the enjoyments of the day. The pecuniary result must have been something considerable. The admirable arrangements are chiefly due to the numerous railway staff in Howrah. . . . Among the festivities of New Year's time at Calcutta, not the least interesting was the soirée which for the last three years has been annually given by a few of the leaders of society to the English sailors in port. On the 3rd January upwards of two hundred, who had been invited through the captains from every ship, met in St. Paul's School, and were there regaled with a substantial repast, known in some parts of England as a tea-dinner. Sir Bartle Frere presided; Mr. M. Wylie addressed the men, and Mr. Whitten sang some of his most national songs, the choruses of which were given by the sailors with tremendous effect. The fair hands of the highest ladies in Calcutta found occupation in cutting "junks" of tobacco for the men. After a delightful evening, each sailor left, and went straight to his ship, the possessor of a book which will remind him of Calcutta hospitality and Christian kindness.

AN ENTERPRISING NATIVE.—The Indian Field sketches the life of the late Govind Persad Pundit. He belonged to a respectable Cashmerian Brahmin family settled in Beerboom. He began life as a common Sircar in the employ of Messrs. Alexander and Co., the original proprietors of the coal mines now owned by the Bengal Coal Company. He then went to the Court at Hooghly and rose in the course of time to be a Deputy Collector. He acquired a putnee of a piece of land at Searsole, and wrote to his son-in-law to build a house there, and to see whether coal was not to be found in the neighbourhood. The son-in-law discovered some on the edge of a pond, a sample of which he sent to Govind Persad. The latter saw its value at once, obtained leave of absence to visit Searsole, and made arrangements for the working of the mine. The yield the first year was one hundred thousand maunds. At the age of thirty-nine he was a Talookdar, and the proprietor of an extensive Colliery. Yet, the moral element was wanting and his end is the gaol.

A WINDFALL.—The Government has, most generously, and liberally, issued an order, granting to the officers composing the regimental staff of all the corps recently reduced and disbanded, an allowance of three months' "staff" pay, to be disbursed immediately. This is intended as a compensation allowance during the time occupied in paying up and discharging the men, settling the accounts, and closing the existence of the regiments; and the grant shows great consideration on the part of the Government towards a large number of excellent officers, many of whom, consequent upon the disbandment of their corps, have been thrown out of employment, and to whom this windfall will be a seasonable and welcome relief.

MURDER OF AN ENGLISH GENTLEMAN. A most melancholy occurrence took place at Barrackpore on Saturday morning, the 4th January, in the bungalow of Captain McMullins. His nephew, Mr. Charles Andrew McMullins, who was living with him and had only arrived in the country about three months ago, was shot through the head by his own bearer. About half past eight in the morning the report of a musket shot was heard, and a private, who was standing near to the door of the bungalow, heard a noise immediately after of the breaking of some bottles. He went up to the door and saw the bearer running away as fast as his legs could carry him. He was met at the stables of the next bungalow by a boy, and since that time he has not been seen or heard of. Mr. McMullins having been in the habit of firing his gun in his own verandah, the inmates of the house were not at all alarmed at the report of the gun, nor did it strike the soldier who saw the bearer running away as anything unusual. About forty minutes after the report Mrs. McMullins, the mother of the deceased, had occasion to go into her son's room, and was horror-struck to see him lying just below the steps of his verandah in a pool of blood. Two doctors who examined the body were of opinion that the wound could not have been caused by accident or by an attempt at self-destruction, as the wound was on the back of the head; the hair was all singed and the neck was black with powder; that the gun must have been fired within an inch of his head and held on a level with it, which appeared to be so from the direction the shot had taken. An inquest was held on the spot within an hour after the sad occurrence, and the verdict of the jury was, "Wilful murder against some person or persons unknown." What could possibly have been the motive for so daring an act, it is impossible to say. The deceased, it is said, had treated his bearer and the other servants most kindly. The only cause appears to be the circumstance of the deceased having shot a monkey the day previous, and it is said the bearer being an up-country Hindu, and one who venerated the animal, considered himself bound at the cost of his own life to revenge himself for the supposed wrong. The deceased was about 19 years of age, and the son of Major McMullins, who is now at Umballah.—Hurkaru.

DEATH OF MR. E. M. WYLLY, C.S.—The Indian papers notice, with regret, the death, on the 7th of January, of Mr. E. M. Wyllly, judge of the Sudder Dewany and Nizamut Adawlut at Agra. This gentleman entered the civil service in 1837, and was at first posted to Rohilcund. The first affair that brought him into notice was the inquiry which he, then joint magistrate of Bareilly, carried on under the orders of Government, in the case of Lalla Jotee Persaud, which he conducted with much credit. Shortly after this he was appointed magistrate and collector at Meerut, where he remained till transferred to the Agra district as judge. He served during the mutiny in the militia, and on the 10th of May, 1861, was permanently appointed judge of the Sudder, which post he held till his death.

THE OUTRAM TESTIMONIALS.—The managing committee of the Outram Testimonial have formally notified to the subscribers that the following works are now in course of execution, in furtherance of the resolutions passed at the public meetings held in London and at Calcutta on the 5th and 6th of March last, viz.:—A statue (bronze) by M. Noble, to be erected in London. An equestrian statue (bronze) by J. H. Foley, R.A., to be erected at Calcutta. A silver dessert service (value £1,000) by Hunt and Roskell, to be presented, with an address, bearing the names of all those who have promoted the testimonial. It is in contemplation to present the silver dessert service, with the address, on Sir James Outram's return to England, and to invite him to a public banquet to be given for the purpose.

BENARES, Jan. 18.—The 92nd Highlanders received their orders yesterday to move on to Calcutta without loss of time. The officers of this regiment have an undisputed right of admission into the traveller's club, having in the last four years travelled from Bombay through Central India (with an eccentric chase through part of Rajpootana and Meywar after Tania Topee), to Dugshai, and from thence downwards to Calcutta. Four other regiments are talked of as being homeward bound. No regiment is yet named to take the place of the Highlanders, but it is possible that the 20th may be moved in from Goruckpore. A marriage in high life is about to transpire between the eldest son of Rajah Deonarain Sing and a daughter of the Rajah of Hutwa. The match is a very desirable one in every respect. The cost of the marriage on the part of the bridegroom's father is put down at 9 lacs of Rs.

H.M.'s 35TH REGIMENT.—The presentation of Indian medals to the officers and men of the 35th Regiment took place on the grand parade-ground at Agra, on Tuesday, the 14th January, at 4 p.m., in the presence of a large number of spectators. The weather was not very favourable, being windy and a great deal of dust flying, trying alike to eyes, hats and bonnets, but in spite of this the scene was a very pretty and animated one. The regiment, consisting of 960 of all ranks, was first drawn up in quarter distance column; on the flank there was an impromptu table, made of a small plank, placed on a large drum, covered with one of the old colours of the regiment. On this stood the medals on silver salvers. Officers of companies came to the front. Eri-gadier Troup then decorated Colonel Walters and the officers, and the latter taking each a salver with the medals for the men of his company, decorated them. There were eleven commissioned officers and three non-commissioned officers and men decorated. Since the medals were first transmitted to England upwards of one hundred and fifty casualties have occurred among those entitled to receive them. Medals to this number have to be returned to the War-office. Later in the day a shout of laughter greeted the arrival of a native potentate, riding on the top of a sky-blue stage-coach, on which dependents and ministers of state clustered in a thick crowd, like a swarm of bees, while an official, we presume it was the grand vizier we read of in the "Arabian Nights," "held aloft, fluttering in the air," not a snowy scarf, but a huge yak's tail. This barbaric vehicle, with its grotesque-looking group, came down at full pace four-in-hand, while as crowded as the first, drawn by two shaggy camels. The 35th passed round in review, in slow and quick time, and afterwards performed one or two manoeuvres, changing front, advancing in line, retiring protected by skirmishers, and finally the movement par excellence, without performing which it seems impossible for a regiment to parade, forming square. They then advanced in line to the general salute, and the affair was over. The 35th landed in India in November, 1854, were sent to Burmah early in 1856, where a portion of the regiment was almost constantly engaged with the rebel Karens; in May, 1857, the corps was re-called to Bengal in consequence of the outbreak of the mutiny; in April, 1858, they first took the field, and were engaged in the final dispersion of the rebels in the Shahabad district. During the campaign the regiment lost four officers and one hundred and eight non-commissioned officers and men, killed in action.—Delhi Gazette.

SUMBULPORE.—Khuggoo Naick, a leading man amongst the rebels, has surrendered himself, together with his son Kunye, to the Commissioner of the Division, on the arrival of the latter at that station in the course of his inspectional tour. Our readers are doubtless aware that this man was the proprietor of the Kalabirah Talooq, one of the finest and most productive estates in the Government Khalsa. Although occupying thus an influential and envied position, he did not hesitate to join the standard of Surroondhur Shah, the ringleader in the Sumbulpore rebellion, and thus set a dangerous and pernicious example to others similarly situated, and to the ignorant, many of whom dwelt in the same district. By casting in his lot with Surroondhur Shah and his confreres, he forfeited his estates as a matter of course.—Hurkaru.

THE 27TH INNISKILLINGS reached Lucknow on the 16th of January, and encamped at the Charbagh near the Dikooosha, under instructions from army head-quarters to halt till further orders. The carriage being paid up and discharged looks as if the halt will be a permanent one. It is not improbable that the regiment will remain there with the 48th, the 107th being sent to Roy Bareilly. Report says that Gondah is to be given up, and hence this change.

SOONDER SAI, the rebel leader, with his companions, are again troublesome in Sumbulpore, but measures have been adopted for the capture and punishment of the gang.

CHARCOAL IN FORT WILLIAM.—When the building of Fort William was completed, now some eighty years ago or thereabouts, it was resolved to lay in a store of fuel in case of siege; and with this view an enormous quantity of charcoal was buried in large square beds in the centre of the barrack squares, these beds being about four feet in depth, and about the same distance beneath the surface of the ground. Within the last few days these charcoal deposits have been opened by order of the General Officer commanding the Presidency Division, and although it appears that, from the nature of the soil, the fuel has been saturated with water for more than three quarters of a century, its value and its powers of combustion seem to be scarcely, if at all, impaired. We may, in connection with these diggings, remark that if in the year 1857 the European population of Calcutta had been obliged to take refuge in Fort William, and been there beleaguered, they would have found Lord Clive's precaution, as regards a fuel supply, of but little use indeed, as there would not have been forty-eight hours' provisions in the garrison; and the best thing they could have done with the charcoal would have been to blacken their faces, walk out, and claim brotherhood with the besiegers. The men who laid in the fuel in Fort William also, and at the same time, laid in a vast store of provisions; but they have long since disappeared, and we hope that they may never be required.—Englishman.

A MODEL MUSSULMANEE.—The Rast Goster the best native journal of Western India, eulogises the Secunder Begum of Bhopal for her enlightenment, and urges the Hindoos and Parsees to read the lesson which her example teaches to their wives and sisters. "We have pretty numerous instances of an Akilyabae, a Toolsabae, an Anandibae, a Baizabae, and a host of other Maratha baees, holding, like great statesmen, public durbars for the transaction of public business in connection with their respective kingdoms; and, like good Commanders-in-Chief, with shields buckled on their back, and long spears in their hands, taking review on horseback of their own armies. But very seldom indeed have we heard of Mussulman beebees performing the same exploits; for they were the school-mistresses from whom the Hindoo ladies have learnt the lessons of their modern gosha and purda wherever they are prevailing. Let every young Hindoo and Parsee, already engaged in elevating the character of their women in the scale of European civilisation and enlightenment, read this lesson of the high-minded Secundra to their wives, sisters, and daughters; let also the old gentlemen, and matron ladies who still tremble in the cause of the female right in India to enjoy the same liberty as the males, gather up courage, and pat the back of the rising generation telling them—boys and girls push on, and keep pace with the spirit and progress of the time."

H. M.'s 81ST FOOT, under command of Colonel Mathew Smith, are now encamped at Meean Meer, en route from Rawul Pindee to Jullundur. The strength of the corps present at head-quarters is nine hundred and ninety-seven non-commissioned officers and men, besides which there are about one hundred rank and file at Dera Ishmael Khan.

HIS HIGHNESS SCINDIA, taking his cue from the English Government in India, has instituted an Inam Commission in his territories, and seems determined to make everyone in possession of free land prove his right of possession.

ARMENIAN GHAT.—A correspondent calculates the money spent on crossing the Hooghly river at Armenian Ghat at fourteen and a half lakhs of rupees a year, and urges the construction of a bridge. We believe the sum to be more than that. But a bridge will be less necessary than ever now that it has been determined to construct one at Fulta Ghat, between Chandernagore and Serampore. The whole railway traffic of the North-West will cross over that, and so enter Calcutta along the eastern Bengal line.

CERTAIN PUNJAB CIVILIANS have applied to his Excellency the Viceroy for medals and clasps for the campaign of 1845-46, but, to their great dissatisfaction, his Excellency has refused to entertain their claims.

A NARROW ESCAPE.—Dr. Douglas, civil surgeon at Lucknow, has had a very narrow escape of his life. The particulars are simply these:—One of two brothers, prisoners in the Lucknow gaol, being very ill in hospital, Dr. Douglas obtained permission for the other to attend him. The sick man died, and immediately after his death his brother managed to escape from the gaol. The other morning a man was seen prowling about the precincts of the gaol under very suspicious circumstances, and on being taken up, a cutlass and a loaded pistol were found on his person, and himself soon after discovered to be the deceased prisoner's brother, who had absconded. He made no attempt to disguise his intentions, which were simply to shoot Dr. Douglas, for, as he averred, killing his brother in hospital. It, however, fortunately happened that Dr. Douglas came to the gaol half an hour later than usual, and to this circumstance alone is to be attributed his escape, as otherwise there was nothing to avert the impending catastrophe.

THE ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT.—The Government of India has ordered the erection of a second wire between Calcutta and Bombay. Except in the rainy season, this will do much to meet the complaints of the mercantile community and general public. At the same time it is intended to allow the Railway Company to open their telegraph line to the public, and private companies to establish lines where they please. The competition will be most healthy. The public will then have the redress of a long-standing grievance in their own hands. We doubt not small lines will be immediately constructed by private capitalists.

AGRA.—You cannot imagine how the cantonment portion of Agra has been improved since you were here, by the famine labour. All that portion about Adam's monument has been most tastefully laid out, and is now a luxuriant garden, a beautiful band stand of carved stone has been erected on the old lime kiln, with carved stone railing and seats, the tank has been enlarged, and the side nicely sloped and turfed. We who recollect the neglected roads and ruined bungalows of former days, can scarcely realise the changes that are going on for the better about cantonment. The small parade, as it used to be called, has been enclosed, and is to be made into a fruit garden, the lines of roads to the Taj have all been altered or improved, and I much doubt if there is a prettier cantonment in all India now than the Agra one.—Lahore Chronicle.

THE INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION.—The Bengal collection of articles for the International Exhibition is complete. It consists of 6,000 specimens or more than twice the number sent to the Exhibition of 1851. Yet the arrangements have been so well made that the articles will occupy less space than those displayed on that occasion. Among the many valuable private contributions are shawls, such as, the Umritsur connoisseurs say, have never before been sent to Europe. It is probable that Mr. Dowleins will accompany the collection to England and realise the proceeds which promise to do more than reimburse the state.

ON DTT.—It is said that both Mr. E. C. Bayley and Mr. Pearson (Judge of Cawnpore) have declined the appointment of Judicial Commissioner under the Chief Commissionership of Colonel Elliott. It is also said that the Home Government wished Mr. J. P. Grant to preside for another year over the destinies of Bengal, but that he means to adhere to his former resolution of retiring before the hot season of 1862.

PREVENTION OF SUTTEE.—The Government of India has determined to recover from all native states the cost of the imprisonment of such of their subjects as are confined in British gaols for suttee under Act V. of 1847. This will do more to enlist native chiefs against the crime than anything else.

ANDAMAN SEBUNDY CORPS.—The services of this corps have been dispensed with, and a European force is to be kept up there. Grants of land, however, will be made to any of the men of the above corps who may be anxious to settle at Port Blair.

THE ABORS.—A correspondent of the Hurkaru says an expedition, headed by Mr. Higgs, an honorary magistrate of Debrooghur, Assam, has succeeded in discovering property belonging to the persons murdered by the Abors in their recent raid, in seven different houses. Major Bivar, deputy commissioner, has erected a block-house and stockades in the path by which the Abors make their descents from the hills, but the savages may creep through the jungles. We shall resort to the policy, probably, of forbidding an Abor to show himself in the plains till the ringleaders are given up. This has proved successful on the Punjab and Scinde frontier. But Eastern Bengal must have a strong sepoy force.

AMERICAN MISSIONARY ESTABLISHMENT.—The following is the distribution of the American Missionary Establishment of the Methodist Episcopal Church, U. S. A., under the superintendence of Dr. Butler:—At Bareilly, Revs. Jackson, Waugh, and Hicks; at Shahjehanpore, Revs. Humphrey, and Thomas; at Budaon, Rev. Knowles; at Moradabad, Revs. Judd and Brown; at Bijnour, Rev. Hauser; at Nynsee Tal, Rev. Thoburn; at Philibet, Mr. Cawdell; at Luckimpore, Rev. E. Parker; at Seetapore, Rev. J. Gracy, and at Lucknow, Revs. R. Pierce, Baume, and Mesman. They have altogether 17 Missionaries, 12 native preachers, 21 school teachers, 93 communicants. Average Sunday congregation, 371; Sunday scholars, 223; schools, 18; scholars male, 371; female, 86. Baptisms, during the year 57, chapels, 10, school-house, 7.

SUICIDE.—There have lately been two cases of suicide in Calcutta.—Mr. Paul, an English photographer who came from the Cape some years ago, and was not very successful, and Lieutenant G. Cronyn, of H.M.'s 54th in the fort, who shot himself.

ODEYPOR.—The explanation submitted by the minister, relative to the occurrence of a suttee in Odeypore, was considered quite satisfactory, and the adopted son of the deceased Maharajah has been made the Rajah, and placed on the throne by the agent himself.

NOWGONG.—The district is at present perfectly quiet, and there is not the least sign of disaffection among the people. The Angami Nagas, some time since, took away, as captive, a Cacharee lad, and have since offered him as a sacrifice to the goddess "Jomouny," whoever she may be.

SIR R. BIRCH, K.C.B.—According to the Hurkaru, Major-general Birch is to receive six months' gratuity on vacating office, i.e., 21,000 rupees, less income tax, at 4 per cent., or 20,160 rupees.

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE.—The Lieutenant-governor has extended the Code of Criminal Procedure to the non-regulation divisions of Jhansi, Kumaon and Ajmere.

INDIAN PILGRIMS AT JEDDA.—Our attention has for some time been attracted to the large number of natives of India who embark from these parts for Jedda, and other places on the Arabian coast, but after their arrival there experience the severest privations, and become wretched outcasts in the streets. Some short time ago, the British consul at Jedda found the place swarming with destitute Indians, who earned a precarious subsistence by begging, and from motives of humanity shipped eighty-five of them back to this country, giving the commanders of the vessels on which they were sent conditional drafts on the Indian Government for the payment of the passage money. The consul could not guarantee the payment, as the result depended upon the manner in which his representations on the subject would be viewed at Calcutta. Had he any assurance on the point, there were hundreds of others whom he would have similarly despatched to their native country. We think the time has arrived when some restrictions should be placed on the embarkation of natives to the places named. It is impossible to suppose that so great a number would readily leave their native shores without the means of supporting themselves at Jedda, if they were fully alive to the distress which awaited them there; and we can draw no other conclusion than that the men are tempted to the step by false assurances, or the artful representations of interested parties. It, therefore, becomes the duty of the authorities here not to suffer any native British subjects to depart until they are satisfied that the men are leaving with some definite object in view; that they possess the means of subsisting themselves and of returning home; and, at all events, that they fully understand the horrors of being left destitute in a foreign country. The British Consul declares that Algerian and Javanese beggars are never seen at Jedda; and for the simple reason that the French and Dutch masters of the respective colonies refuse to permit their Mussulman subjects to resort to the Arabian coast, unless they are satisfied that they have the means to go and to return. Perhaps, in this respect, we may not be the worse by taking a hint from our neighbours. Independent of the destitution and suffering entailed upon those who leave India under mistaken hope of advantage, it is lamentable to think that persons are not unfrequently inveigled to Arabia for unholy purposes. We are aware of women having been artfully persuaded to embark from the Malabar coast, and afterwards sold to a life of slavery or prostitution in Mecca and Jedda. Persons have been known to contract marriages at Allepey and elsewhere, with the diabolical intent of conveying them away from their homes, and disposing of them for lucre. The occurrence of such things will, we trust, be sufficient to induce the Government to instruct their local officers to exercise the strictest scrutiny in respect to native emigrants to Arabia. Nothing but constant vigilance over the Arab craft frequenting our coasts can effectually prevent the practice referred to; and measures should be taken, without further delay, to impose effectual checks to the abuse we have pointed out.—Cochin Courier.

RELIGIOUS RIOT.—A Madras journal mentions that a disturbance recently took place at Negapatam, on the expression of the intention of a Brahmin lad of sixteen to embrace Christianity. He was anxious to be received by the Missionaries, but the people assembled in front of the Wesleyan Mission House, and commenced throwing stones at it. The police were soon on the spot, and dispersed the mob. The youth had made a previous attempt to attach himself to the Missionaries, but had been forced by the magistrate to return to his parents. The Missionaries at Negapatam eventually received him and took him on to Madras or Trichinopoly.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT TO COLONEL CRAWFORD COOKE.—We regret to state that on the 13th January, on returning from the levee of the Commander-in-Chief, a serious accident befel Colonel Crawford Cooke, Deputy Adjutant-general of the Madras army. Whilst riding over Government-bridge, in the direction of the island, his horse stumbled and fell, and, from the account which reached us, appears to have rolled over his rider. We are sorry to say that Colonel Cooke was taken up insensible, having sustained some very severe injuries at the back of his head. He was at once removed to his house in a palanquin, and Dr. Sanderson was immediately sent for, and subjected him to the necessary treatment. Up to going to press this morning, (Jan. 14) no further particulars have reached us.—Athenæum.

LIEUT. A. B. S. HAMILTON, of the 34th Regiment Madras Light Infantry, was recently tried by a general-court martial at Fort St. George for conduct unbecoming an officer, and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having assaulted and struck with a stick Lieut. C. Hayter, of the same regiment. The Court found him guilty, and sentenced him to be suspended from rank and pay for one calendar month. The Court explained that they awarded the above sentence because they found it impossible to estimate the extent of Mr. Hamilton's criminality in resorting to violence, apart from the consideration of the very gross insult offered to him and repeated by Lieut. Hayter; and that the act was prompted by the impulse of an unguarded moment at the instant the provocation was offered. The Provincial Commander-in-Chief considered the sentence to be a very lenient one; but in the hope that it might have the good effect of inducing Lieut. Hamilton to keep a bad temper under better control, he did not call upon the Court to revise its award.—Madras Times.

PROME.—Notwithstanding the lightness of the monsoon in the Promie district, and the fears that were in consequence entertained that the rice crop would fail, it has been exceedingly good; and that large exports of paddy are taking place thence into Burmah Proper, and of rice by the river to lower Pegu. The exports of rice into Burmah Proper from Pegu are expected to be unusually large this year; for while the paddy crop in the British possessions has been unusually large, it has been exceedingly scanty in the King's dominions. As every basket of grain which crosses the British frontier into Burmah Proper pays a duty to Government, the Custom House returns at Allan Myo and at Toungoo should show some considerable increase in their receipts.

THE SUPPLEMENTAL PUBLIC WORKS BUDGET added twelve lakhs of rupees to the amount to be expended in all India. Madras got one lakh and a-half. An official paper shows the manner in which this amount was to be expended. With one exception the works have special reference to the export of cotton. The exceptional work is the continuation of the Southern Canal to the Palar River. The canal ends at present at an insignificant village, and the traffic of the country to the south cannot be brought on it without first being conveyed across the Palar River, and then several miles by land. The works for the encouragement of cotton trade are chiefly roads leading towards ports of shipment. The Government of India approve of the supplemental works, and promise also three lakhs more for the Godavery.

MR. R. O. CAMPBELL, of the firm of Messrs. Binny and Co., has been elected president of the Madras Chamber of Commerce for 1862.

SURGEON MAJOR T. C. JERDON, Madras Establishment, has been placed on special duty for a period of six months, for the purpose of completing the work on the Natural History of the Vertebrated animals of India, on which he is now engaged.

COLONEL C. A. BROWNE, commanding the Nagpore force, has succeeded Brigadier Apthorp in command of the Hyderabad subsidiary force.

BOMBAY.*DEATH OF H.R.H. PRINCE ALBERT.

The sad intelligence of the death of his Royal Highness the Prince Consort has caused universal and profound sorrow in Bombay. All mourn for the loss which her Gracious Majesty, the Royal family, and the British empire have sustained. For her Majesty there has been a manifestation of sympathy, affection, anxiety and loyalty on the part of this whole community, so spontaneous and unaffected as to afford the best possible proof of their genuineness and sincerity. On the arrival of the mail which brought the mournful intelligence, the Government immediately issued the following Government Gazette Extraordinary:

"GENERAL DEPARTMENT.

"His Excellency the Governor in Council announces with deep concern the receipt of intelligence from England, communicating the demise on the 14th December, 1861, of his Royal Highness the Prince Consort, in the 43rd year of his age.

"2. His Excellency in Council directs that the flag at the Castle be hoisted half-masthigh at sunrise, so to continue till sunset; and that minute guns, to the number of 43, corresponding with the age of his Royal Highness, be fired from the saluting battery at noon.

"3. His Excellency in Council directs that similar honours be paid to the memory of his Royal Highness by the vessels of her Majesty's Indian Navy, the firing of the minute guns from the ships to commence as soon as the guns from the garrison shall have ceased firing, and to be continued under such arrangements as the Commander-in-Chief of the Indian Navy may direct.

"4. Similar marks of respect are to be paid on receipt of this order at every principal military station subordinate to this Government.

"5. His Excellency in Council is further pleased to direct that mourning be worn by the officers of her Majesty's Civil, Military, and Naval services of this Presidency, and he requests that a similar mark of respect may, on this melancholy occasion, be observed by all other classes of British subjects residing within the provinces subject to this Presidency.

"By order of his Excellency the Governor in Council,

"A. D. ROBERTSON,

"Acting Chief Secretary to Government.

"Bombay Castle, 20th January, 1862."

The whole community immediately went into mourning. The leading members of society addressed a requisition to the sheriff, requesting him to convene a public meeting of the inhabitants of Bombay, for the purpose of adopting an address of condolence to her most gracious Majesty the Queen. In compliance with this requisition the sheriff convened a public meeting, on the 24th of January, in the Town-hall. Such a concourse of citizens never before assembled on any occasion. The civil, military, and naval officers of all ranks (the non-official members of the European community), natives of all classes from the various populations of the city and island, composed the meeting, and unanimously, solemnly, and mournfully proceeded to accomplish the object of it, namely, to adopt the following address:—

TO THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

"May it please your Majesty,—We, the inhabitants of the Presidency of Bombay, approach your Majesty with the deepest sympathy and condolence on the occasion of the heavy visitation with which it has pleased an All-wise Providence to afflict your Majesty and the British empire by the removal from this life of your Majesty's beloved Consort. While we humbly present to your Majesty the expression of our heartfelt sorrow, we venture to offer at the same time the renewed assurance of our profound and respectful loyalty and devotion.

"Distinguished by his veneration for the ancient constitution of the realm, by his wide-spread philanthropy, and by the eloquent and never-ceasing support afforded by his Royal Highness to the advancement of learning and to the tasteful cultivation of the fine arts and of manufactures throughout all your Majesty's dominions, the late illustrious Prince Consort adorned his eminent position by the practice of every domestic virtue and of the most varied accomplishments.

"It is the fervent trust of your Majesty's subjects in this Presidency that through the Divine mercy your Majesty will find consolation and support in the gentle influence of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales and of their Royal Highnesses the other members of your family, for this we pray most heartily as well as for your Majesty's health, long life and honour."

FIRST MEETING OF THE NEW BOMBAY COUNCIL.

The opening meeting of the new Council of his Excellency the Governor of Bombay, appointed in accordance with the provisions of the "Indian Councils Act of 1861," was held on the 22nd of January in the durbar-room of the Town-hall. Precisely at eleven o'clock his Excellency the Governor took the chair, all the members of the Council being also in their seats—his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, the Honourable H. W. Reeves, the Honourable W. E. Frere, M. R. Westropp, Esq., Advocate-general, W. B. Tristram, Esq., his Highness Abdool Dulair Khan Abdool Khair Khan, Nawab of Savanor, Rustumjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy, Esq., Jugonnath Sunkersett, Esq., Madhorow Vittul Vinchoorkur, Esq., and Shet Premabhaee Hemabhaee, deputy city magistrate and Nuggur-shet of Ahmedabad, M. J. Shaw Stewart, Esq., Secretary to Government, acted as the recorder of the Council's proceedings. Close to the Council-table was the reporter's gallery, at which the representatives of the press were respectably accommodated. One half of the spacious room was set apart, by a temporary barrier raised by cords covered with red cloth, for spectators, admitted on application to the Secretary, among whom were observed his Excellency the Governor's Staff, A. D. Robertson, W. F. Marriott, J. Gibbs, J. B. Peile, J. Rich, J. M. Maclean, C. M. Keir, Esqrs.; Colonel H. J. Barr, Captain Day, the Rev. W. K. Fletcher, Dr. Bhawoo Dajee, Venayekrow Jugonnathjee, Venayek Wasudew, Moosa Khan, Babajee Kassinath, W. Bullock, G. R. Miles, E. T. G. Pearson, Esqrs., and a number of other gentlemen. The officers of his Highness the Nawab were also present. A few short preliminaries being completed, Sir George Clerk addressed the Council as follows:—

"I have called a Council in order to open the Legislative Department in accordance with the Act of Parliament which restores to this Presidency the power of making its laws and regulations. The new form in which this Government will exercise its power consists principally in the appointment of non-official members. Such members have, therefore, been appointed, and have now taken their seats. I feel satisfied that the zeal which some of them have at all times manifested for the public good, and the high character borne by the others in the management of their estates and chiefships, will ensure their undertaking these responsibilities with a due sense of their importance.

"On the manner in which these duties may be performed it will depend whether many millions of our subjects enjoy contentment and security, or lead a life of uncertainty and confusion. On the one hand, by over-legislating, you will be liable to keep the people in a state of doubt and alarm. On the other hand, by bearing in mind that none know better to govern themselves, individually and parochially, you may be constantly in the course of ameliorating their condition, while safely maintaining her Majesty's just sway over a contented people. And be assured that your consultations will lose nothing of safe guidance by occasionally looking for it in native discernment.

"Although your functions will be important, they need not be difficult. The several races subjected to our laws in this Presidency, and generally throughout India, are not of a restless character, unless rendered restless by misgovernment—and everywhere they have an innate respect for authority, whenever authority is respectable and wise.

"You will remember that you owe to those whom you represent a strict account of the fulfilment of your duties—to a people who reasonably desire your protection of their acknowledged rights, and to live in peace.

"An assembly on this scale has naturally a tendency to expand, and seeing it has pleased her Majesty's Government to consider that the time has arrived for conferring this privilege on you, it will doubtless, in due time, be enlarged, provided that in its early exercise you give proofs of sound judgment and discretion in your views of British Dominion in India.

"During a short rule I have endeavoured to see something of all classes. I find those of our own countrymen who, in this wealthy settlement, are engaged in commerce, enterprising and enlightened as they always are when they have fair play, and the best feeling subsisting between them and the Government; I find the native merchant active and prosperous; our many native chiefs loyal, and most grateful for the liberal and just measures adopted towards them by the present head of the Government of India, while the agricultural classes are steadily advancing from poverty to better prospects, by means of well-regulated reductions in a land tax which had been exceedingly burdensome. In these favourable circumstances, this Government was transferred to my hands by my lamented predecessor, whose unprejudiced and single-minded course of administration was such as always serves to improve British India, and to satisfy all classes of its inhabitants. With the aid of my experienced colleagues I have sought to uphold that system. It will now devolve mainly on your counsel to preserve so satisfactory a condition of affairs in this Presidency.

"I have directed the Secretary to lay before you some Bills which appear to me to require your early attention. With these and others which individual members may propose to move, you may find your duties at present more laborious than it is probable that they will be hereafter. For there are a few of our projects of law, to consider which there has not been time in the Legislature entrusted with them in Calcutta. These must, of course, come back to us. And there are some which I have not transmitted to that Council, because I foresaw that they must ultimately be disposed of here."

The speech being over, the Governor retired into the sitting-room with Sir William Mansfield, and the members rose from their seats apparently to interchange congratulations on the honours conferred upon them. To advocates of the "Shoe" question it may appear a satisfactory feature in the opening day of the Council that the Nawab of Savanor had, with the view to mark his respect, taken off his gold-embroidered shoes at the entrance to the Council-room. The other foreign member, Madhorow Vittul, appeared, however, in a pair of "Stunt's." The members separated shortly before noon.

The second meeting of the Council, was to be held on Tuesday the 28th Jan.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LIEUT. COL. J. A. BALLAUB, C.B., has been appointed Deputy Consulting Engineer in the Railway Department.

COLONEL MARGARY, of the Engineers, has been permitted at his own request to resign his appointment as Executive Engineer, Surat and Broach, and his services are placed at the disposal of the Commander-in-Chief.

CHOLERA of a bad type is hanging about the country. There are indications that we (Bombay) shall have a sharp visitation from this scourge in the coming hot season, and our municipal authorities will do well to ponder at once the measures of precaution that should be taken. "We deeply regret to learn," says a Madras journal, from a letter dated the 6th January, "that cholera has broken out at Vellore and Arcot, and prevails among the European, East Indian, and native inhabitants. The disease would appear to be of a bad type, as our correspondent mentions that death had occurred in some cases without any of the usual premonitory symptoms having presented themselves."

DEFENCES OF BOMBAY.—The following is the memorial to be addressed to the Secretary of State for India, and to the Governor-general of India in Council, upon the subject of the defences of the port:—"The respectful Memorial of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, sheweth,—That whilst Bombay is the greatest port of Western India, possessing already an aggregate annual commerce of about forty million pounds sterling, it is at present absolutely in a defenceless state, and liable to destruction by the ships of any enemy. That this commerce is carried on by means of shipping, whose annual aggregate capacity amounts to about 770,000 tons; but, although the harbour of Bombay is the only one of Western India in which ships can refit, they are exposed in it to the attacks of any privateer, and liable to be burnt, sunk, or plundered by any armed vessel under a hostile flag. That your memorialists, whilst hopefully trusting in the maintenance of peace, would earnestly condemn the apathetic confidence that may expose them to the consequences of war. That such a misfortune as the bombardment of Bombay, recognised by the community, and admitted by Government, to be possible in the event of war, would be at once a national disgrace and a national calamity, paralysing the important commerce of Western India, and seriously affecting the industry of Great Britain. That, with these important interests at stake, it is essential that the safety of the port be immediately secured, and that no considerations of false economy should prevent the adoption of necessary precautions, more especially as the Presidency has never been unwilling to meet the fair calls for revenue made upon it by Government, and cannot, therefore, contemplate without dissatisfaction and alarm its unnecessary exposure to foreign attack. That the sanction of the Imperial Government has been given to the construction of permanent harbour defences, and their necessity has thereby been practically admitted; but, from the parsimonious expenditure granted; for the prosecution of these works, that sanction has virtually become a dead letter, and the port cannot for years derive any security from them, but must continue at the mercy of any power with whom our country may be at war. That this danger may be obviated by granting the assistance of a small naval force, which, whilst affording the necessary protection to Bombay, would, at the same time, guarantee the safety of the neighbouring seas, and preserve from obstruction our important overland communication with England. That whilst your memorialists, therefore, would respectfully press for the vigorous prosecution of the harbour defences, they would, at the same time, strenuously urge the necessity of according for the present protection of Bombay such a naval force as may be deemed sufficient for that purpose."

ELPHINSTONE COLLEGE.—The Times of India learns that it is in contemplation to place the Elphinstone College, in two respects, upon a better footing than it now occupies. At present the college is located in a mean bungalow near the Babool Tank. It possesses no fit accommodation for mofussil students, who might wish to have lodging on the premises. And, on the other hand, the lecture rooms are poor and cramped, and hardly fit for the reception of rich men's sons. It is now proposed to move the college into Tankerville, a large house at the foot of the Gowalla Tank. By this measure, spacious and airy rooms will be obtained for the college and cotton goods are, or nearly are, to our imports; out of £155,855 of import duties collected at the Port of Colombo in 1861, rice yielded £97,864; cotton goods, £16,175; together £114,039, out of £155,855. The total duties collected at Colombo almost touched £200,000. The figures are:—Import duties, £155,855; export ditto, £37,421; total, £193,276.

Port dues and warehouse rates will more than make up the £200,000; and for all Ceylon we suspect the Customs' Revenue for 1861 will not fall short of £250,000. The import of rice at the Port of Colombo last year was very large—not less than 3,359,359 bushels, valued at £676,150, which, we suspect, is far below the true value. Nearly all the rice imported is consumed in the island. The case is different with cotton goods, our next great staple import. Cotton goods were imported to the value of £508,582; the entries for home consumption were to the value of £323,532; and the value of re-exported cottons was £125,151. At this moment the bonded warehouse is crowded with nearly 4,000 bales and cases of cotton goods; the importers holding on for higher prices, which the native dealers do not, as yet, seem disposed to give. The market will, probably, remain more or less paralysed until the great question of peace or war is decided. The same question deeply affects the Tinnevely cotton trade, in which many of our Colombo merchants have this year largely engaged. Of cotton wool 4,800 packages to the value of £25,587 were re-exported from Colombo, but this is a mere fraction of the interest which Colombo merchants have in the Tinnevely cotton crop of this season.

It appears that the total value of goods imported at the Port of Colombo in the year was £1,867,800, while specie is represented by the small figure of £50,100. The explanation is, that nearly all specie—whether silver from India, or gold from Britain and Australia—comes to the Island in the steamers which resort to Galle. At that port, the goods trade of which is not large, specie is imported to a value equal to two-thirds of that of goods imported at Colombo. The mail steamers from Bombay were wont, in former days, to touch at Colombo to land specie for the banks, but for years back this arrangement has ceased. The boxes of rupees are landed at Galle; there laden in bullock bandies, and escorted seventy-two miles to Colombo by an armed guard of the Ceylon Rifles, the banks paying for the protection as well as the carriage. There is another curious anomaly in our trade. It may be puzzling at first to notice that while only twenty-four vessels arrived from England at Colombo in 1861, no fewer than eighty-seven sailed to that country. The solution of the discrepancy is that a large number of vessels which brings coals to Galle come round to Colombo to be laden with coffee. Some vessels, too, come to Colombo "seeking," from Australian and Indian ports. It is certainly an inconvenience that while Colombo is the seat of Government—the undoubted capital of the island—the centre of its commerce and population—Galle, some seventy-two miles distant, should be the steam port at which all our mails are landed and taken up, into which the specie required for our commerce is poured, and to which the bulk of the ships engaged in that commerce first resort. Take away the steamers and the coal ships, and Galle at once sinks back into little more than a fishing village. It remains to be seen how the opening of the Indian railways will affect her. Meantime she is about to become the centre of the French steam line as well as the English; the sheds and stores belonging to the Messageries Imperiales are rapidly being erected, and the first homeward trip is announced for the end of March.

While the value of the import trade at the port of Colombo in 1861 was—goods, £1,867,800; specie, £50,100; total, £1,917,900; or somewhat under two millions sterling, we find that the value of the export trade of this port was upwards of two millions and a quarter, thus:—Goods, the produce of Ceylon, £1,876,610; imports re-exported, £237,153; specie, £152,050; total, £2,265,813. It must be noted, however, that very large sums in specie are taken away by native merchants and immigrant coolies which are never reported to the Customs officers. Were all the specie reported, the figures would probably be £2,500,000 for the total value of the export trade of Colombo.—Colombo Overland Observer.

THE STRAITS.

COCHIN CHINA.—Persecution of Christians is so severe in Cochin China that the Roman Catholic Bishop Sohier has been compelled to fly from the country. Monsieur Gautier, the Catholic Bishop of Southern Tonquin, and a native priest have been put to death. The Bishop of Northern Cochin China has escaped. A priest of his diocese has been slain. The King of Cochin China is determined to fight the French to the last, and is fortifying Hue, disciplining his soldiers, and is evidently resolved to resist the invaders usque ad mortem. A Christian village has been destroyed by the Cochin Chinese, where men, women, and children were drowned, shot, stabbed, and cut down, whilst many had their necks twisted round till they died. The French have taken possession of the small group of islands generally known as Pulo Condore, lying about forty-five miles distant from the entrance of the western branch of the Mekong or Cambodia River. The steamers carrying the mails between Saigon and Singapore will, in future, touch at Pulo Condore, on their way to and from Singapore, and an effort will probably be made to attract trade to this point and make it a depot for the produce of the neighbouring countries. It is well situated for this purpose, being right in the fair way of the route between China, Siam, Singapore, &c. The navigation of the river Mekong up to Saigon is tedious and intricate, and the latter can therefore never become a port of call to ships not expressly bound there. Pulo Condore will form a very convenient station, at which vessels can touch for refreshments and information or orders in reference to the state of the Saigon market. Political and strategical reasons have also, no doubt, had their influence in inducing the French Government to secure for its new colony of Cambodia such an important outpost as Pulo Condore. In case of war it would form a most convenient port of outfit and retreat for cruisers, as from it they could sweep the Gulf of Siam and southern part of the China Sea.

LABUAN.—In consequence of the sides of the coal-pit at Labuan having given way, the working at that spot has been abandoned. The site was originally badly chosen, and it has been a constant effort to prevent the works from being periodically flooded. Borings have been recently made in other places, and the result is that a locality has been selected where there will not only be room on all sides to work the main seam without much danger of being drowned out, but another seam, four feet six inches in thickness, has been found at a short distance from the surface, from which supplies of coal will be obtained in a few months. As soon as this seam is reached it will be worked, while at the same time the sinking of the shaft to reach the main seam will be proceeded with. The railway, wharf, &c., are all completed, and there are sufficient stores of all kinds in Labuan for two years. Although the Labuan Coal Company have been rather unlucky in the outset, from having taken up the abandoned works of the Eastern Archipelago Company, they have no intention of giving up their design of working the Labuan coal fields. The coal is there in abundance and of good quality, and they are resolved to have it. Considering the great importance to a port like Singapore, visited by so many steamers, of having a productive coal field within a moderate distance, we should be sorry to see the Labuan Coal Company prematurely abandoning their undertaking at such an early period after commencing it.—Singapore Free Press.

PROCLAMATION.

Whereas it is declared in the XLIV. section of the Act 24 and 25 Vict. cap. 67, called the "Indian Council's Act, 1861," that the Gov. gen. in Council, so soon as it shall appear to him expedient, shall by proclamation extend the provisions of the said Act, touching the making of laws and regulations for the peace and good government of the presidencies of Fort St. George and Bombay to the Bengal division of the presidency of Fort William, and that he shall specify in such proclamation the period at which such provisions shall take effect, and the number of councillors whom the Lieut. gov. of the said division may nominate for his assistance in making laws and regulations; and whereas it is further declared by section XLVII. of the said Act that it shall be lawful for the Gov. gen. in Council as aforesaid by such proclamation as aforesaid to fix the limits of any presidency, division, province, or territory of India, for the purposes of the Act, and further, by proclamation to divide or alter from time to time the limits of any such presidency, division, province, or territory for the said purpose, his Excellency the Governor-general of India in Council, by virtue of the authority vested in him as above, does hereby declare and proclaim that the provisions of the said Act touching the making of laws and regulations for the peace and good government of the presidencies of Fort St. George and Bombay are extended to the Bengal division of the presidency of Fort William, and that they shall take effect from the 18th January, 1862. And H.E. in Council does further direct, in conformity with the provisions of the said Act, that the number of councillors whom the Lieutenant-governor of the said division of the presidency of Fort William may nominate for his assistance in making laws and regulations shall be twelve, and his Excellency in Council doth further direct, in conformity with the provisions of the said Act, that the Bengal division of the said presidency of Fort William in Bengal shall for the purposes of the said Act extend to and include all the provinces, districts and places which are now administered by the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal.

Possession of Landed Property by Public Servants.

Notification.—Revenue.—The foll. orders passed by the Right Hon. the Sec. of State in Council, on the subject of the possession of landed property in India by public servants, are published for general information:—

Extract from the Secretary of State's Despatch, No. 22, dated the 10th August, 1861.

I have had under my consideration in Council your Excellency's letters dated the 25th, 26th, and 31st October, 1860 (Nos. 37, 38, and 39), and 8th March (No. 5), 1861, on the subject of the possession of landed property in India by the public servants of the State.

4. I have carefully considered in Council the entire subject, and I am now prepared on the part of her Majesty's Government to lay down the following rules for your future guidance. I should premise that these rules refer only to the acquisition or possession of lands intended to be applied to agricultural purposes, and are not to be construed to include lands occupied merely by buildings for residence and their usual appurtenances.

5. Officers of the Covenanted Civil Service are at liberty to acquire and possess lands anywhere out of the presidency to which they are attached, but are absolutely precluded from holding lands within their own presidency. Thus, an officer of the Bengal Civil Service may hold lands in Madras or Bombay, but cannot be permitted to hold lands in any part of the Bengal Presidency, notwithstanding that, at the time of their acquisition, he may himself be actually employed in a different lieutenant-governorship from that in which the lands may happen to be situated.

6. Regimental military officers may hold lands in any part of India, with the distinct understanding, however, that a military officer possessing land will be disqualified for temporary employment in any civil capacity in the district within which his land is situated; but military officers who are placed in permanent employment in the civil administration must, like the officers of the Covenanted Service, be prevented from holding lands in the presidency, to any part of which they may be sent.

7. No restrictions are to be placed on the possession or acquisition of lands by uncovenanted officers of any description, whether of European, Indo-British, or Native descent, beyond those now in force.

8. Officers of all classes (including candidates for office) must, however, be required to make a declaration of the fact of their being in possession of, or of their having acquired, landed property, stating the district within which it is situated, with such other particulars as you may consider necessary, of which registers should be kept at the seat of Government of each presidency or Lieutenant-governorship. Although uncovenanted officers are not to be precluded from holding land, it may, nevertheless, be inexpedient that appointments which necessarily confer a considerable amount of power and influence on their occupants, such as those of sudder ameen, deputy collector, and Tehsildar, should be filled by persons holding landed property within their jurisdiction; and it is right that the several governments should always have at hand the information necessary to guide their judgment in selecting individuals for such offices.

9. It will, moreover, be incumbent on the several local Governments to take care that no officer who may be in possession of landed property in India or elsewhere, to whatever class of the service he may belong, shall apply any portion of the time and attention which ought to be devoted to his public duties, whether civil or military, to the management of that property, and that longer or more frequent leaves of absence are not to be permitted on that account.

2. Secretary of State's Despatch, No. 29, dated Nov. 30, 1861.

With reference to the letter from your Excellency in Council, dated Oct. 1 last (No. 16), which has been considered by me in Council, I have resolved to accede to your recommendation for a modification of the terms of my despatch of Aug. 10 last (No. 22), so far as to permit officers of the Bengal Civil Service, attached to the Lower Provinces, to acquire and hold land in the Upper Provinces, including the Punjab and Oude. Similarly, officers attached to the Upper Provinces may be permitted to acquire and hold lands in the Lower Provinces of Bengal. It will, of course, be understood that such officers possessing lands in either division are absolutely precluded from employment under the local Governments of the division in which their lands are situated.

W. GREY,
Sec. to the Govt. of India.

NOTIFICATION.

Financial Dept., Fort William, Jan. 3.—Notice is hereby given, that the treasury of the Secretary of State for India in Council, and of her Majesty's Indian Government at Calcutta, shall, from and after the first day of March, 1862, be established at the Bank of Bengal. All payments to be made by or to the Secretary of State in Council, or to the Government of India, or the Government of Bengal at the treasury of the East India Company, or of the Secretary of State in Council, or of the Government at Fort William, shall and may from and after the above-mentioned date be made at the said Bank of Bengal.

The issue of Government promissory notes provided for by Act XIX. of 1861 shall take effect from and after the aforesaid date.

The terms on which the business of the general treasury and the Government paper currency shall be conducted by the Bank of Bengal are contained in the following

AGREEMENT WITH THE BANK OF BENGAL.

Memorandum of agreement made and entered into this twenty-sixth day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-one, between the Secretary of State in Council for India of the one part and the Bank of Bengal of the other part.

Whereas the Governor-general of India in Council, under and by virtue of the provisions of Act VI. of 1839, of the Legislative Council of India, on the eleventh of February, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-one, gave notice, in writing, to the Bank of Bengal, that from and after the expiration of twelve calendar months from the date of the said notice, the Bank of Bengal, and its then powers and authorities, would be modified, and by Act XIX. of 1861 the powers and authorities of the said bank have been accordingly modified, as by that Act appears. And, whereas at the time when the said notice was so given, negotiations and arrangements were pending between the Governor-general of India in Council (acting in the premises on behalf of the said Secretary of State) and the directors of the Bank of Bengal, having for their object the transfer to the said bank of the business of the Government treasuries at Fort William and elsewhere in the Presidency of Fort William and the provinces annexed thereto, and the superintendence and management by the said bank, for the Government of India, of the issue of the then proposed Government Paper Currency. And whereas the general terms of the said proposed arrangement have now been finally settled and agreed upon between the Governor-general in Council and the directors of the said bank, and by the said Act of 1861 the said bank have been empowered to enter into an agreement in that behalf with the said Secretary of State in Council: And whereas by Act XIX. of 1861 of the Legislative Council of India provision has been made for the issue by the Government of India of promissory notes, payable to bearer, on demand. Now this indenture witnesseth, that for the purpose of carrying out the said arrangement, and in consideration of the payments and covenants hereinafter respectively mentioned and contained, and by, and on the part of the said parties to these presents, respectively, to be paid and performed, each of them, the said Secretary of State in Council and the said Bank of Bengal doth and do hereby for himself and themselves, and his and their respective successors, covenant and agree with the other of them and their and his respective successors in manner following, that is to say:—

First.—From and after the day to be appointed by the notification mentioned in the 20th paragraph of these presents, the business of receiving and paying money on behalf of the Supreme Government of India and the Government of Bengal, heretofore transacted at the general treasury at Fort William, shall be carried on and transacted by the Bank of Bengal subject to the provisions of this agreement, and to such orders and directions with regard to receipts and payments as may, from time to time, be given to the said bank by the Governor-general in Council or any of the officers of the Government of India authorised in that behalf, and for the purpose aforesaid, such account or accounts shall be opened in their books by the said bank with the Government of India and Government of Bengal, as the said Government of India shall from time to time direct.

Second.—The cash balance now in the general treasury shall, from and after the day appointed by the notification aforesaid, be deposited with the Bank of Bengal, who shall also hereafter receive and hold for the said Government of India and Government of Bengal, respectively, all moneys and balances which, but for these presents, would have been received or held by the said general treasury, and the bank shall transact, at their principal office in Calcutta, all such business for the Government of India and Government of Bengal, respectively, regarding the receipt, collection, payment, and remittance of money and securities and other matters, as is usually transacted by bankers for their customers.

Third.—That from and after the day appointed by the notification aforesaid, the said Secretary of State in Council shall pay to the bank the actual costs and expenses of packing and shipping specie remitted under the preceding clause, and for which costs and expenses contingent bills shall from time to time be submitted to the civil paymaster, Fort William, for the time being, and be passed by him on approval; and the said Secretary of State in Council shall, from and after the last-mentioned day, further pay or cause to be paid to the said bank the yearly sum of Rs. 43,606 in full of all costs and expenses attendant on the maintenance by the said bank of the establishment of clerks and servants necessary for the carrying on of the said Government banking account and business; and the bank shall not charge any interest or commission on the said account, except under such arrangement as in the next following clause mentioned.

Fourth.—That so long as the average cash balance for any month in the hands of the said bank on the said Government banking account shall not exceed seventy lacs of rupees, the said bank shall be at liberty to use and employ such balance, subject to the provisions of their present Charter Act, or any future Act relating to the said bank, and to appropriate the profits arising from such employment, without being charged with any interest in account. And that when and so often as the monthly average of such cash balance shall exceed seventy lacs of rupees, the directors of the said bank, for the time being, shall forthwith either set aside such excess or surplus in cash to be kept in reserve in a separated cash room or place of deposit on account of the said Government of India, or shall at the option of the directors of the bank invest such excess or surplus on account of the Government of India, either in the purchase of Government securities, or railway debentures guaranteed by Government, in the name of the Accountant-general or of such other officers as the Government of India shall, from time to time, direct, or in the discount of Government acceptances or other claims against the Government, and so that such surplus shall be withdrawn from employment as part of the general funds of the bank, and so on from time to time as often as an uninvested surplus cash balance above rupees seventy lacs shall, on the taking of the monthly average, appear to be in the hands of the bank. And the said bank shall at all times be answerable and accountable to the Government of India for the surplus cash balance for the time being so set apart or invested but shall be entitled to draw and apply the interest or dividends arising from such investment, from time to time, to their own use. But when and so often as the cash balance in the hands of the said bank shall, on the taking of the monthly average, appear to have been less than rupees fifty lacs, then, in addition to the profit which the said bank may acquire by the employment of such balance, free from interest as aforesaid, an additional allowance or remuneration, by way of compensation, shall be made to the bank by the payment by Government of interest on the difference between the amount of the actual balance of Government and the sum of fifty lacs, the interest being calculated at the average rate of interest paid by the public on fixed loans during the month.

Fifth.—That the books of account, and minutes of proceedings of the bank relating as well to the said Government banking account and business as to the general accounts and business of the bank, shall, from time to time, and not less than once, and not exceeding four times, in any one year, be submitted to the examination and audit of an officer or officers to be from time to time appointed or authorised by the Governor-general in Council for that purpose, and the report of such officer or officers as to the state of the banking account between the Government of India and the bank, or as to the cash balances invested or uninvested for the time being in the hands of the bank, or as to any proceeding relating to the said banking account or business shall first be laid before the directors of the bank to enable them to furnish any explanation or further information touching any of the matters referred to in the report, and such report, together with the explanation, shall then be submitted to the Governor-general in Council, whose order, decision, or finding on such report shall be binding and conclusive on the bank.

Sixth.—That from and after the day appointed in the notification aforesaid an agency of issue shall be established at the principal office of the Bank of Bengal as the agency for the circle of issue (of Calcutta) under Act XIX. of 1861, and that the said bank shall and will act as agents for the said Secretary of State in Council and the Government of India in and for the issue to the public at Fort William and the circulation of the government currency note established by the said Act, and in the payment and cashing of such notes, and in all things required to be done by such agents or at such agency, under or by virtue of the said Act.

Seventh.—That all demands for the issue of Government currency notes that shall be made in the circle of issue of Calcutta, under the 9th section of the said Act XIX. of 1861, may be made at the said agency at the principal office of the Bank of Bengal at Calcutta; and that the said bank shall and will, from time to time, issue and deliver from and at such agency such amount of the said Government currency notes as may be duly demanded or applied for at the said agency, by any person or persons, or body or bodies corporate, desiring and entitled to have the same issued under the provisions of the said Act; and shall and will for that purpose, from time to time, apply to the head commissioner of the department of issue, established under the said Act, for such Government currency notes of such denominations as shall be necessary to enable the said bank to make such issue and delivery.

Eighth.—That whenever the said bank shall issue and deliver at and from such agency any Government currency notes under the 2nd clause of the said 9th section of the said Act, in exchange for standard silver bullion, or foreign silver coin, or under the proviso in the said section, in exchange for foreign gold or gold bullion, the said bank shall and will, before such issue and delivery, require the production by the person tendering such coin or bullion of a certificate signed by the Master of the Calcutta Mint that such coin or bullion has been weighed and assayed and has been deposited in the Mint to the full amount in value of the notes so to be issued, or shall otherwise satisfy themselves that such bullion or coin to the amount in value of the notes so to be issued at the rates authorised in the said clause and proviso, respectively, has been deposited with the said department of issue to the satisfaction of the said Head Commissioner, according to such mode as shall, from time to time, be directed, with the sanction of the Government of India, by the said Head Commissioner.

Ninth.—That whenever the said bank shall issue and deliver at and from such agency any Government currency notes under the 1st or 3rd clause of the 9th section of the said Act XIX. of 1861, in exchange for current silver coin of the Government of India, or for other currency notes of the Government of India, payable to bearer on demand, or other amounts issued within the said circle, or under the proviso in the said section, in exchange for gold coin of full weight of the Government of India, the said bank shall carry the amount of the said current silver coin or notes, or gold coin of the Government of India, received by it in exchange for the notes so issued, to the credit of the Issue Department of the said Government in such account as the said head commissioner, with the sanction of the Government of India, shall, from time to time, direct for that purpose.

Tenth.—That the said bank shall not issue or deliver any of the Government currency notes provided and supplied to it by the said head commissioner for the purpose of being issued under the said Act, except to such person or persons, or body or bodies corporate as shall be entitled to demand the same according to the provisions of the said Act, and shall have complied with the conditions of the 9th section thereof, or otherwise than according to the provisions of the said Act.

Eleventh.—That the said bank shall and will, during the continuance of these presents, pay and satisfy on demand to the holders, the amount of all Government currency notes duly issued according to the provisions of the said Act XIX. of 1861, either in Calcutta or in any other circle of issue within the Presidency of Fort William in Bengal, which shall be presented for payment or conversion into cash at the principal office of the Bank in Calcutta.

Twelfth.—That a settlement shall take place at least twice in every week, and, if required by the bank or by the head commissioner of the Issue Department, daily at the office of the bank in Calcutta, between the bank and the said Department of Issue, in respect of the notes issued, the bullion on coin, and notes in exchange for which the same have been issued, and the notes cashed or converted, under these presents or the said Act by the bank, and the difference in Government currency, notes or in cash and bullion (as the case may be) shall on such settlement be adjusted, transferred, and paid.

Thirteenth.—That so much of the business of the said Issue Department as shall, from time to time, be carried on at the bank's office, shall be under the direct control and inspection of the head commissioner of the said Department of Issue.

Fourteenth.—That the bank shall, if required by the officer in charge of the Government Issue Department so to do, provide and keep a separate strong room or strong box for the reception and safe keeping of all currency notes, coin, and bullion belonging to the said Issue Department, and such room or box shall be under the separate control of the said Issue Department, and its contents shall always be kept separate from the bank funds and property, and shall be at the exclusive risk of the Government of India, except in case of loss through the neglect, default, or misconduct of the bank or any of its officers or servants.

Fifteenth.—That the bank shall at any time during the continuance of this agreement, when and if, required by the Governor-general in Council, but not otherwise, provide a sufficient and convenient office for the Department of Issue at Calcutta, and for the Head Commissioner of the said office upon the premises of the said bank in Calcutta, at which office the said Head Commissioner shall and may conduct the whole, or any such part, of the business of issue of the said Department of Issue as the Governor-general of India in Council may from time to time direct, and that the bank shall and will provide the necessary accommodation and establishment of clerks and servants for carrying out the current duties of the said office.

Sixteenth.—That the whole responsibility for loss or damage that may be occasioned by, or arise in respect of, the theft or loss of any Government currency notes made under the said Act 19 of 1861, from and after the time of the said currency notes being delivered from the said department of issue, to and at the said bank for issue, or to any servant or agent of the said bank for delivery to the said bank for issue, and the whole responsibility for any loss or damage that may be occasioned in respect of the wrongful payment, exchange, or satisfaction, through mistake, or otherwise, at or by the said bank of any Government currency notes, which ought not to be paid, exchanged or satisfied, or of any forged or spurious notes purporting to be Government currency notes, or in respect of the forgery or alteration of any Government currency notes, or in respect of any error or mistake committed by the said bank or by any of its officers or agents in conducting the agency aforesaid, although the same shall have been conducted under the control and inspection of the said Head Commissioner of the Issue Department, shall, as between the said Secretary of State for India in Council and the said bank, rest solely and entirely with, and shall be borne by, the said bank, who shall have no claim upon the said Secretary of State in Council for compensation or indemnity for and in respect of any such loss.

Seventeenth.—That as and by way of remuneration to the bank for their conducting, as aforesaid, the said agency for the issue of the Government Paper Currency and for cashing and converting such notes after issue, the bank shall be entitled to charge the said Secretary of State in Council with a commission, calculated at the rate of three-fourths per cent. per annum on the daily average amount of Government currency notes outstanding and in circulation through the said agency of the Bank at Calcutta, and which commission may be debited to the said Secretary of State in Council in the said banking account between the Government of India and the Bank, the amount of such cost to be established (if required) to the satisfaction of the officer for the time being in charge of the said Issue Department.

Eighteenth.—That in case a separate office shall be provided by the said bank for the said head commissioner of issue, upon the requisition of the Governor-general in Council, under the 14th clause of these presents, the bank shall also be paid by the said Secretary of State in Council the cost of providing such separate office and of any special establishment that may be provided for, and any special expense incurred by the Bank in respect of the same.

Nineteenth.—That if at any time during the continuance of this agreement, the said bank shall establish a branch office at any town or place other than Calcutta, and the Governor-general of India in Council shall order to the directors of the said bank for the time being, and the said directors shall on behalf of the bank accept the business of bankers to the Government of India for the district or locality within which such branch shall be established, or the business of issuing and circulating the Government paper currency within such district or locality, then, and in every such case, the business so arranged to be taken up and performed by the said bank shall be carried on under and subject to the provisions of this agreement, and on the basis of the clause cited in the margin, being the 3rd and 5th paragraphs of the Government memorandum of the 20th of March, 1861,* relating to the establishment of such branch bank, except in so far as the provision of this agreement or of the said clauses may be modified or altered by any special agreement which the said Secretary of State in Council, through the Governor-general of India in Council, may, from time to time, enter into with the said bank in reference to the business so to be carried on at the particular branch bank.

* 3. As regards the establishment of branch banks, the Government will in each presidency prefer dealing with the presidency banks when the ground is unoccupied. But when other banks have been established before the presidency bank thinks fit to establish a branch, the Government considers that they will have a preferable claim on equal terms, and finding proper security.

5. If it be clear that the interest on the average cash balance at such place is not enough to make a fair contribution towards the expenses of the branch bank, the Government will give such fixed annual payment as may be agreed upon in each case, not exceeding the saving of cost to the Government at such place by the Bank taking its business.

Twentieth.—That this agreement and the powers and authorities herein contained, and the covenants hereby entered into, shall come into operation from and after a day to be fixed by the Governor-general in Council by notification in that behalf, which shall be published in the Calcutta Government Gazette within six calendar months from the date hereof and continue for the term of five years from this date, at the expiration of which time the same shall and may, by notice in writing from the Governor-general in Council to the directors of the said bank for the time being, be renewed, with or without any modifications, as may be agreed on between the Governor-general in Council and the said directors.

The Mint Master at Calcutta, or the person officiating in that capacity for the time being, shall be the head commissioner of the Department of Issue.

The Calcutta Circle of Issue, within which the Government notes will become a legal tender, shall embrace all the districts subject to the control of the Government of Bengal (except the districts noted in the margin),* and shall include also the districts of Ghazepore, Mirzapore, and Benares, belonging to the North-Western Provinces.

The Bank of Bengal is prepared at once to establish branches at Benares, Mirzapore, Patna and Dacca.

Any persons who prefer applying at the Mint for notes in exchange for coin or bullion may apply there instead of at the office or agency at the bank, provided they apply for not less than rupees 2,000 at a time. They will in such case receive the notes at the office of the Head Commissioner at the bank one clear working day after their applications.

The notes will be taken and paid at all the Treasuries comprised in the Circle of Issue mentioned above.

MEERUT.—On Thursday evening, January 9, Colonel De Salis's charger fell with him. The colonel was much bruised, but we are happy to say he is now perfectly well. H.M.'s 8th Hussars could ill-afford to have lost the man who so gallantly led them at the charge of Balacava, and has given to the corps a name in the annals of the British army not inferior to that of the 2nd Dragoons—the "Moodkoewallahs."

THE BANK OF BENGAL.

"THE Directors have the satisfaction of adding that no bad debts have been incurred during the six months just ended." There is a sensation paragraph for the benefit of London Bankers! What a striking proof is this of the enervating effects of an Eastern climate! No bad debts can only mean no enterprise. How, then, is India to be regenerated? How are its resources to be developed? How are mines to be worked, railways constructed, canals excavated, waste lands cultivated, and the land-tax redeemed, if there are to be no bad debts? And then, by way of capping this ridiculous state of things, the Directors actually proceed to declare a dividend of  $9\frac{1}{4}$  per cent. per annum. Why, a London Bank would not lay claim to a higher rate of profit immediately previous to stopping payment. And yet Mr. Bright assures us that nobody in India—that is, no English gentleman in the service of Government—can work a rule of three sum. Nevertheless, we find a Government Bank dividing  $9\frac{1}{4}$  per cent. per annum, without incurring a single bad debt in the course of six months. Another curious thing is, that the Directors deplore the low rate of discount; even at  $4\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. business continued in a state of prostration, although they had hoped that such easy (!) terms would have given a stimulus to trade. It was certainly very hard upon them that no doubtful customers could be obtained even at  $4\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. It almost makes one suspect that the Calcutta merchants must be doing a very safe and snug business of their own, seeing that they cannot be tempted even by what they would call cheap money. However, as we have already remarked, the Directors have been able to declare a good dividend, and yet add a trifle to the Reserve Fund. They have also opened a Branch at Rangoon, which, within two months after its first establishment, showed assets to the amount of Rs. 236,987. Branches are also to be simultaneously established at Mirzapore, Benares, Patna, and Dacca, for the purpose of acting as pay circles for the new paper currency. At the close of the year the cash balance amounted to Rs. 2,21,85,058, and the advances to the public to Rs. 1,47,28,243. Owing to the comparative low quotations of Government Securities, the Directors were induced to increase their investments in Five and Five and a-Half per Cents. to 56 lakhs. For the moment the value of Government paper has been slightly depreciated in consequence of the Trent outrage, but, no doubt, a rise will take place as soon as the liberation of the Southern Commissioners is known in Calcutta. It is certainly not every Bank that can look its constituents in the face with such confidence as that of the Bank of Bengal.

THE PAPER CURRENCY MEASURE.

ST. DAVID'S-DAY seems destined to found a new commercial era in India. On that day her Majesty's Indian Government at Calcutta will transfer to the Bank of Bengal the charge of its Treasury, and "the business of receiving and paying money." In return for all this trouble the Bank has stipulated for a fully adequate remuneration. Indeed, it has made a very excellent bargain, and has every reason to be abundantly satisfied. In the first place, it is to be repaid all the costs and charges of packing and shipping specie on account of the Government, besides receiving an annual allowance of 46,606 rupees towards the expenses of its establishment. Then, so long as the average cash balance for any month does not exceed seventy lakhs, the Bank is to be at liberty to employ the same, and appropriate the profits, without paying any interest for its use; but if ever the monthly average shall fall below fifty lakhs, the Government is to pay interest on the difference between the amount of the actual balance and the sum of fifty lakhs. Again, if the monthly average balance shall exceed seventy lakhs, the surplus is either to be placed in a separated cash-room, or invested in the purchase of Government Securities, or Railway Debentures sanctioned by Government, or in the discount of Government acceptances; but the profits are still to go to the Bank. On that same first of March an agency of issue is to be established at the Bank as the Agency for the Calcutta Circle of Issue—the whole business of the paper currency being conducted at that office! The Calcutta circle is to embrace all the districts subject to the Bengal Government, with certain specified exceptions, and will also include those portions of Ghazepore, Mirzapore, and Benares that belong to the North-West Provinces. Branch Banks, as we have already observed in another article, are about to be established at Benares, Mirzapore, Patna, and Dacca, so that every facility will be afforded for the circulation of paper money at those great native marts. But we have not yet done with the enumeration of the good things the Bank will derive from this alteration in its business. The 17th article of the agreement provides that, "As and by way of remuneration to the Bank for their conducting as aforesaid the said agency for the issue of the Government Paper Currency, and for cashing and converting such notes after issue, the Bank shall be entitled to charge the said Secretary of State in Council with a commission calculated at the rate of  $\frac{1}{4}$  per cent. per annum on the daily average amount of Government currency notes outstanding and in circulation through the said agency of the Bank at Calcutta." On the other hand, the Bank is to be held solely responsible for any loss or damage arising from theft or loss of notes, or from wrongful payments or other mistake, or from forgery or alteration of value. This clause is not unlikely to furnish a serious drawback—especially at the commencement of the experiment—to the otherwise capital arrangement entered into by the Bank of Bengal. The temptation to forge these notes will be irresistible, and Sir Mordaunt Wells may confidently look for many a confirmation of his opinion as to the native tendency to fraud and forgery, varied by perjury. There is one point, however, respecting which we shall lose no opportunity of expressing our deep regret. The entire issue is only to the extent of four millions sterling, an amount wholly inadequate to meet the requirements of such a large and active commercial community as resides within the Calcutta Circle alone. Ten millions would not have been one pie too much, and we have little doubt that the experience of less than twelve months will induce the Government to arrive at the same conclusion. Then the minimum value of the notes is decidedly too high. Five rupee notes would be certain to command a brisk circulation, especially among the natives, who for some time to come may be expected to look with suspicion on notes for a large amount. Still the measure is a good one so far as it goes, and bids fair to give increased stability to the tenure of our Indian possessions.

THE NEW COUNCILS.

THE experiment of self-government has at length been introduced into the minor Presidencies, and henceforth the authorities at Madras and Bombay must be held chiefly answerable for the progress or retrogression of their respective territories. It will no longer be possible for them to throw the burden of their shortcomings upon the Supreme Government, or to complain that all their plans of reform and local improvements have been systematically neglected and cast aside. With themselves it will rest to conceive new schemes for the benefit of the people placed under their care, and to devise the means for carrying them out. The Governor-general, indeed, and à fortiori the Sovereign, will possess the right of veto; but it is scarcely probable that the power will often be exercised. The most despotic Viceroy will recognise the inadvisability of interfering, except under very peculiar circumstances, with the resolutions of the local Councils, and will rejoice at being spared the weariness of discussing projects of merely provincial importance. The utmost publicity is to be given to the proceedings of each Meeting of Council, and strangers will be freely allowed to be present at the sittings on receiving an order of admission from the Clerk; but nothing is said about reporters for the press, nor do we see that any particular advantage is to be derived from such miserably inaccurate reports as usually appear in the Indian papers. Five members, including the President, constitute a quorum, and in any case where opinions are equally divided the President is entitled to a casting vote. The meetings of the Council will depend upon the Viceroy, or Governor, both as to time and place, for the sittings are not restricted to the Presidency towns. Occasionally some personal inconvenience may be caused by this innovation; but, unquestionably, public interests are likely to gain by it. The President of the day is a sort of autocrat, from whose decisions as to order there is no appeal:—"The decision of the President on a point of order shall be heard in silence, and shall be final." To hear is to obey. Another salutary regulation is that which prohibits members from speaking on any question save the one before the Council, the effect of which will be to check desultory discussions and personal altercations. With regard to petitions, they must relate to some Bill or other business actually under the consideration of the Council, and are to be couched in respectful and temperate language, concluding with a distinct prayer. It is the Clerk's duty to make an abstract of each, which will be read to the Council in lieu of the petition. If the petition be received, any member can make a motion founded on its prayer, and in the event of a Bill peculiarly affecting private interests, any individual so affected may petition to be heard by himself or counsel, and in such a case alone will this privilege be granted. But if such petitioner or his counsel should become "unduly prolix or irrelevant," the infliction may be summarily cut short on the motion of a member. Three days' notice must be given of the intention to bring in a Bill, and if leave be accorded the Bill itself must be sent to the Clerk to be printed, together with a full statement of objects and reasons, and any other explanatory papers. If its principles be affirmed in the introductory discussion, the Bill may be referred to a Select Committee for report, and its general provisions and purport will be published in the Official Gazette. Should a Bill be sent in when the Council is not sitting, the Governor or Viceroy may still authorise its publication, and it will then be unnecessary to move for leave to bring it in. Select Committees may also sit and report on Bills or other matters when the Council is not in session, and their reports may be taken into consideration at any time, after a week has elapsed from their being placed in the hands of members. Notices of amendments must be sent to the Clerk at least three days before the discussion comes on; but the President has power to make an exception to this rule if it appears to him desirable that any particular amendment should at once be considered. As soon as a Bill is voted by the Council it is to be signed by the President and forwarded to the Governor for his written assent or dissent; but before the Bill can become law the assent of the Governor-general has also to be obtained. Such are some of the chief rules and regulations pertaining to the new Councils, and it must be allowed that they appear to be perfectly simple and straightforward, and calculated to answer every reasonable purpose.

Prepared by W. PRICHARD, Apothecary, 65, Charing-cross, London, in bottles, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d. and 11s. May be had of all medicine vendors.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.—

REMARKABLE CURE.—Mothers and nurses should read the testimonials to the efficacy of Holloway's remedies in subduing scarlatina, diphtheria, and those inflammatory complaints which are now committing such havoc both amongst children and adults. A parent writes: "I had only rubbed your ointment on the throat two days when my child began to improve in a most remarkable manner, and in less than a week was quite well." Such testimony should be known to persons liable to throat affections, and all having the charge of children. The worst ulcers, sores, and wounds become clean, and soon grow up under the application of Holloway's Ointment, which invariably prevents the spread of inflammation and unhealthy action.

THE HISTORY OF THE OPERA,

BY SUTHERLAND EDWARDS,

Author of "The Russians at Home."

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"Mr. Sutherland Edwards has in these two volumes produced a lively and interesting history of the musical drama. The narrative is thickly interspersed with biographical sketches of actors, authors singers, musicians, and composers, and enlivened by numerous characteristic anecdotes."—Daily News, Jan. 27, 1862.

"Two very interesting volumes."—Critic, Jan. 25, 1862.

"This is a work of great value—undoubtedly the most interesting and trustworthy on the history of the Opera. Mr. Edwards is thoroughly conversant with his subject, and the fact of his having travelled much in continental cities gives to his two volumes additional worth, as it has enabled him to treat that section of them bearing on the Continental Opera in a masterly and exhaustive manner."—Caledonian Mercury, Jan. 31, 1862.

"It is interesting, and, on the whole, well done."—Examiner, Jan. 26, 1862.

"The numerous phases through which this great institution has passed afford great scope for a writer, and the work now under notice will be found to deal with the subject in a very comprehensive manner. Anecdotes are plentiful throughout the work, and served to make 'The History of the Opera' a highly entertaining work."—Observer, Jan. 19, 1862.

"Mr. Edwards has here produced a work which ought to command a great sale, if its merits and the great number of Opera-goers may be considered. Completely master of his subject, and possessing a ready and pleasing pen, he in these volumes gives us an exceedingly interesting history of operatic performances. . . . A work of unquestionable merit and of exceeding interest."—Morning Herald, Feb. 3, 1862.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via Southampton, on the 13th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

WE have received by the Calcutta Mail of the 23rd January our usual files of papers, which are chiefly taken up with the discussion of questions already noticed in this journal. The first meeting of the Governor-general's Legislative Council was held on Saturday, the 18th of last month, when the following members were present:—

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-general of India.

ADDITIONAL MEMBERS OF THE COUNCIL.

MEMBERS OF THE SUPREME COUNCIL.

The Hon. Sir H. B. E. Frere, K.C.B.

The Hon. Cecil Beadon.

Major-general the Hon. Sir R. Napier, K.C.B.

The Hon. S. Laing.

The Hon. W. Ritchie.

ADDITIONAL MEMBERS OF THE COUNCIL.

The Hon. H. B. Harington.

The Hon. H. Forbes.

The Hon. C. J. Erskine.

The Hon. W. S. Fitzwilliam.

The Hon. D. Cowie.

The Hon. Raja Deo Narain Singh Bahadur.

The Hon. Raja Dinkar Rao Rugonauth Bahadur.

After the oath of allegiance had been administered, and likewise the oath to faithfully discharge the duties of their office, the Council adopted the standing orders to regulate their proceedings, which were laid on the table by the Viceroy, in accordance with the Act of Parliament. At the second meeting, which took place on the following Wednesday, January 22nd, notices were given by official members of their intention to introduce no fewer than seventeen Bills—many of them, however, having been partially carried through the extinctive Legislative Council. The business actually transacted seems to have been of the most meagre description, and so little interest was taken out of doors in the proceedings of the Council, that only seven strangers were present, five of whom were connected with the local press.

Lord Canning's Minute on the conduct of the Bengal Government with regard to the refractory ryots in Lower Bengal has been hailed with loud acclaim by the unofficial community, though some regret is expressed at the tardiness of its publication. The lamented death of Viscountess Canning has probably had something to do with his lordship's delay in expressing his opinion. However, he has spoken out at last, and in a manner not to be misunderstood. But time alone will remove or soften the asperities that still embitter the relations of landlord and tenant, planter and ryot. The attention of European settlers is, besides, being directed to more certain and not less profitable speculations. Two new companies for the cultivation of the tea plant were formed in a single week, with abundant capital for working upwards of twenty thousand acres of land. The chief difficulty is in procuring a sufficiency of labour. The Assam Company, for instance, though they obtained the additional assistance of 556 coolies, were unable to make the most of their gardens, especially of the one in Cachar. During the past year they have turned out upwards of a million of pounds, or nearly eighty thousand pounds in excess of the previous year. It is also a hopeful sign that capitalists in this country are looking to India for permanent investments. In our advertising columns will be found the prospectus of a company for the construction of tramways as feeders of railroads, and to provide means of transport and accelerated communication between important towns in the interior lying off the main lines of railway. There can be little doubt of the beneficial results to India from the execution of these works, and quite as little of the profits likely to accrue to the shareholders of the company.

The last instalment of articles for the International Exhibition has been shipped from Calcutta, and may be expected at Southampton in a few days. Considerable progress in the industrial arts has been made during the last ten years, and persons competent to judge express a decided opinion as to the interest and admiration that will be generally excited by these samples of Indian taste and ingenuity.

The capture of Ningpo by the lawless Taepings is the chief item of news from China. Owing to the firm and resolute attitude assumed by the British Consul, the majority of the inhabitants were enabled to escape before the entrance of the rebels. Those, however, who remained were barbarously maltreated, and the city polluted with rapine and murder.

BENGAL.

TENASSERIM FORESTS.

The forests within British territory in the Tenasserim and Martaban provinces are eight in number, viz., Beeling, Gounzaleem, Doondamee, upper and lower, Salween, upper and lower, Attaran, Hlinebouay, Houndrow, and Thoungyeen, upper, lower, and middle forests.

In the Beeling district the area of the teak localities is estimated at nine and one-sixth square miles, yielding, on an average, 24,480 trees per square mile, of which thirty-six per cent. are first class, thirty-four per cent. third class, and the second and fourth classes each fifteen per cent. The teak forests in this district stretch along the banks of the Beeling river and its tributaries, the Magwine and Maynaunoi, whence the logs can be floated down during the rains, when the river is at its highest, to Moulmein.

The teak localities in the Younzaleem valley form several isolated tracts, extending over eleven square miles, with an average of 8,900 trees to the square mile, of which the first and fourth classes each number about 25 per cent., the second class 13 per cent., and the third 37 per cent. The Younzaleem forest is situated on either side of the river of that name, which runs from north to south, to the westward and nearly parallel with the Salween, into which it empties itself at Kankareet, from sixty to seventy miles above Moulmein. In no part are the forests situated above a mile or two from the river, to which they are easily conveyed in the rains by the numerous small streams which intersect them; and in the dry weather by means of elephants.

The Doondamee forests are intersected by a large stream bearing a similar name. The upper forests are by far the most important as regards their productiveness, but the difficulties attending the transport of the timber are great. They are several miles from the Doondamee river, but some smaller streams intersect the forests, which are affluents of the larger stream; but these are only open during a short period of the year. It is probably owing to the expense of removal that this forest has been but little worked. It only passed into British possession on the close of the war of 1852-53. The upper forest numbers 5,370 trees to the acre; 32 per cent. first class, 28 per cent. third class, 25 per cent. fourth, and 15 per cent. of second class. The lower Doondamee forest, including the lower Salween forest to the west of that river, are the nearest teak forests to Moulmein, stretching down to Paghat, about thirty-two miles above Moulmein. They extend over sixty square miles, and number 2,000 trees to the square mile—of the first class, 15 per cent.; second, 20 per cent.; third, 30; and fourth, 35 per cent. The Salween and Doondamee rivers form the means of transport, but in many instances the timber will have to be dragged considerable distances to the water way.

The upper Salween forests lie immediately on the right or west bank of the Salween river, and extend from the British boundary line at 19 deg. N. latitude, to the confluence of the Salween and Thoungyeen rivers, eighty miles in a direct line nearly south. The trees to the square mile are 2,477, of which there are about 23 per cent. of first class trees, 12 per cent. of second, 30 per cent. of third, and 35 per cent. of fourth class. The trees generally grow on the slopes of the Bithoko mountains, or on the spurs which are thrown out from the range to the very banks of the Salween. In many instances the most valuable trees are perched on almost inaccessible acclivities; and to obtain these, not only are skilful foresters requisite, but a thorough knowledge on their part of the locality. There are numerous small streams by which timber felled in the mountains may be floated to the river during the height of the monsoon. The cold and hot seasons are therefore employed in girdling, felling, and dragging to the various water-courses the trees felled in previous years, ready for advantage to be taken of the rise of water in the river, which causes the mountain streams to become flooded.

The Attaran forests have been so much, and so recklessly worked, that they are, in their present state, of but trifling value.

The Hlinebouay and lower Salween forests lie east of the Salween river. These forests, likewise, from their proximity to Moulmein, and facilities offered for transit, have been greatly overworked. Moreover, the timber is not generally valuable. The trees grow, almost without exception, in low ground; and while the surveyor looks for it in vain on the sides and summit of the hills, he finds it of uneven and stunted growth in situations where, as a rule, it is never elsewhere found. The timber obtained from these forests is chiefly valuable for ships' crooks, bends, and knees. The fine tall regular stature of the mountain teak is here nowhere seen, and it is vain to look for the clear tall stems rising without a branch to 60, 100, and even 120 feet, which constitute the value of the forests in the mountains more remote from the river.

The Houndrow forests are now of little importance. They are widely scattered tracts, only very thinly stocked with trees; the result of recent surveys giving only 240 first class trees to the square mile. The Houndrow river, which, on its joining the Hlinebouay at Gyne, forms the river which falls into the Salween a little above Moulmein at Kuddo, and is called after the town situated at their confluence, offer but few facilities for floating large timbers, and in this respect differs in every way from that which bears on its bosom the teak felled in the Attaran forests. For this reason trees of large girth and great length which have either been girdled or felled, now stand or lie in the state in which they were left some ten or twelve years ago. Others, again, have been cut into short lengths to facilitate transport, but many, even of them, remain on the ground, evincing the difficulties in the way of the forester.

The Thoungyeen forests follow the course of the river of that name, which, running in a directly opposite direction from the Salween, viz., from North to South, joins the latter stream near the Kutswoh, where the two rivers, mingling their waters, flow on past Martaban and Moulmein, and discharge their waters into the sea at Amherst, in the Gulf of Martaban. These two rivers form the British boundary to the eastward, and separate our territories from those of the Zimay and Nnine Shans. The forests are divided into three portions—upper, middle, and lower. The lower forests commence at the Maythee Choung, or rivulet, which empties its waters into the Thoungyeen river about forty miles from its confluence with the Salween, and extend to the Kamakla gorge, about thirty-five miles up stream in a direct line. The trees in this forest are far from numerous, averaging about 900 to the square mile, of which 370 may be considered of the first class, and the remainder distributed equally between the other three classes. Five considerable affluents of the Thoungyeen, which rise in the Daunat mountain range west of the river, and run parallel through the entire length of the British territory, offer facilities for exporting the timber when once felled and dragged to their banks. The total area covered with teak forests in this locality does not exceed forty-eight square miles.

The middle Thoungyeen forests form a continuation of the river, and extend south to the Meglar. The trees found in the hills in this locality are peculiarly fine, growing to immense height, unencumbered with branches. The average per square mile is 2,570, of which 25 per cent. are first class, 6 per cent. only second class, 19 per cent. third class, and 50 per cent. fourth class. The total area of teak producing land in this forest is estimated at 175 square miles.

The upper Thoungyeen forests, extending from the Meglar southwards, are as yet unsurveyed; but they are supposed to be similar, in all essential respects, with the middle forests. It has, however, been ascertained that a very large quantity of seasoned timber is now lying in the forest, ready for removal, all of superior size and quality.

MISSIONS, EDUCATIONAL AND EVANGELISING.

The general public may not be aware that for the past thirty-five years a controversy has been maintained between two classes in India and in England engaged in the support, or in the work, of what is emphatically known as "Missions." Again and again has the question been discussed, and often with bitterness, whether missionaries in India should devote their attention to education, or should restrict their labours to evangelising. This controversy, long confined to India, about the time of the mutiny was extended to England, and in some of the churches has so continued as to paralyse operations here. In Scotland especially the effect has been to give the lukewarm an excuse for doing nothing, and the earnest and intelligent a reason for pausing before doing more. Meanwhile death and sickness have been busy in the ranks of the Scotch missionaries, and removals have been frequent. For years the Scotch Kirk has maintained in what was once so famous as the General Assembly's Institution, only one European agent, whose quiet zeal, however, has not been extinguished by the discouragements he has met. That building, known as the Free Church Institution, and identified with the name of Dr. Duff, has clustered around its history and that of its founders associations second in interest only to those of Tinnevely and Serampore. But one by one Dr. Duff has seen his colleagues depart, till, when Dr. Mackay leaves India from sickness, he will be left with only one European at his side in Calcutta and one in Chinsurah. The old generation has passed, is passing away, and we look for their successors. Engaged in a controversy as to the missionary policy to be pursued, the Free Kirk at home has left its agents without support here.

It seems to us marvellous that such a discussion should have ever arisen in India. One would suppose that the land was the size of an English parish, and that its people presented the same uniformity of education, habits, and thought. Is there not room for all—for the Christian preacher, and the Christian preacher and teacher combined? Are there not subtle Hindoos, fanatic Mahomedans, apathetic Buddhists, savage devil-worshippers, barbarous Meriah-sacrificers, and unclothed Kayans—men in whom a civilisation must first be destroyed by the missionary, and men in whom the soil is ready for the seed? Or, admitting that there is so vast and varied a field for action, is it not common sense to suppose that different policies would suit differing civilisations? The only question a missionary has to decide for himself in India is, whether he will address himself to the educated classes and obtain a hold over the plastic minds of their young; or with, it may be, higher spiritual but meaner intellectual powers, will evangelise among the poor, the outcast, and the savage. The only question a Church has to ask is, whether it will direct its missionary power into the one channel or the other. To avoid waste of effort, each Church should confine itself to one of the two, unless the spirit of its people who pay, and of its missionaries who work, demands both. In any case each should be well done. Even had a man the gifts, he cannot both preach to the ignorant and the intelligent. He will do neither well. In a modified sense the same principle is applicable to a Church or any agency.

Now, from the first, what is popularly known as Dr. Duff's Mission has confined itself to teaching in the large cities, and it has been, in point of the number of baptised converts, as successful as the evangelising system among the poorer class. In its indirect influence on the Christian portion of India it has been far more successful. No one will doubt this who compares the character of the Government system of education thirty-five years ago, when Tom Paine was adored, and Christian teachers were excluded from the Hindu College, with what it is now when a Catholic University examines in Paley and Butler, the Bible is in every library, masters apply for permission to teach it in the school-room and grants-in aid are given to missionaries. We do not consider the educational system perfect any more than the evangelising. Its main object is that which alone, humanly speaking, will convert India—the training of native missionaries. Partly from an excess of zeal at first, which resulted in raising native preachers over-educated and over-paid, and partly from an insufficient knowledge of native character in their teachers, there is a lack of zeal in the native ministers. But the fire is there waiting for the breath of heaven to kindle it into a flame. And the great defect in the system would be removed by insisting that, whether for teaching or evangelising, every missionary shall master the vernacular, which is the key to the nature of the people. If the educational system has not produced a native apostle, it has come nearer to such a result than the evangelising. Looking at the character and intellectual power of the races of India on the one hand, and at the Government system of education which is destined to give place to private effort aided by grants as in England on the other, we consider that it is through schools, taught by missionaries at once of ripe zeal and fair scholarship, that England will most truly evangelise India.

Believing this, we rejoice in the close of the uncertainty that has lately affected for evil the missionary operations of the Free Kirk in India. In a conference held six weeks ago in Edinburgh, the controversy was finally closed by a declaration that, whatever shades of difference there may be as to the different modes of conducting foreign missions, strictly evangelistic on the one hand, or strictly educational on the other, the Church is determined to support its labourers in India to the utmost, though it is not committed to any one mode of carrying on missions that shall exclude others. Men who were personally ignorant of the whole facts of the case could not have come to a wiser decision. It involves a degree of energy on their part which they have not shown of late years. The absence of a missionary spirit among the young ministers may be owing to the leaders who constituted this conference. India presents even a more attractive field than before 1857, and should appeal still more effectually to the home Churches. Year by year the fields grow whiter to the harvest, and the labourers fewer in number and inferior in strength. The close of this controversy should remove the mists that have hitherto clouded the East in the eyes of young men, who are eager enough to crowd to it through the Civil Service examinations but not through the Church. And we rejoice to learn that in Calcutta the educational policy of Dr. Duff's Mission will be carried out in all its entirety, and its educational staff strengthened. As the first fruit of this determination a medical missionary has been appointed to Calcutta, who, with his professional duties, will undertake the department of physical science in the institution. The existence and promised extension of the grant-in-aid system offers to the Churches of England and the missionaries to India a means for evangelising the East, to the importance of which they have not yet awoke.—Friend of India.

THE RAJPOOTS AND THEIR REPRESENTATIVE.

During Christmas tide, in an ancient city planted on one of the low ridges of the Aravalli range between Ajmere and Malwa, was witnessed a spectacle which, for its political significance as well as barbaric splendour and historical associations, demands prominent record. In Oodeypore, the granite capital of Meywar, the oldest and greatest of the States of Rajpootana, a young prince succeeded to the throne of his ancestors, in the presence of once discontented nobles, amid the acclamations of thousands of his subjects, and under the protection of the representative of British power, justice, and mercy. Neither history nor tradition can point further back than the time when the Rajpoots, claiming descent from Rama, and each, as his name signifies, the son of a king, ruled the whole of the peninsula of Hindostan, filled every throne, and administered every province. The warrior caste of those Aryas who colonised at once Europe and Southern Asia, the Rajpoots were the first of the successive nationalities who have held sway in India. For at least two thousand years their power was unquestioned, till Sultan Mahmood led the Mussulmans to victory. The star of the Rajpoots paled before the crescent. Three centuries after, in 1303, Ala-ud-deen took Chitor, in which the Rajpoot strength had concentrated itself, and at a later period Meywar yielded to Baber. But long did the warrior caste resist the growing power of Delhi; it was only in the reign of Shere Shah that they were forced in words to acknowledge it. It was when Akbar again sacked Chitor, that Oodey Sing removed his capital to its present position and called it by his own name, Oodeypore. Still, stripped of political influence, the Rana of Meywar, representative of all the Rajpoots, could boast of the purity of the blue-blood of his family. Never had one submitted to enter the Moslem harem, or dared to introduce Mussulman blood into the stock. The other Rajpoot houses had done this, and it was long till Meywar would intermarry with even them. Wars were made and treaties negotiated in which Meywar at last made this concession, but still the rule was maintained that the son of a Meywar princess, however young, should always take precedence of the royal offspring of other mothers. This desire to maintain the purity of the stock became the source of that infanticide which has prevailed nowhere so terribly as among the Rajpoots.

The Rajpoots gave way to the Mussulmans, and on the death of Aurungzebe their power in turn was available for the strongest, for their race was effete. But the Rajpoots were unable to recover it. Mahratta and Affghan were striving for the empire of the East, when the British stepped in and seized it for civilisation. The historical significance of the installation of the young Maharana of Meywar consists in this, that he is the representative of the old Rajpoots as Nana Saheb is of the Mahrattas and Bahadur Shah of the Moguls. If the national law of Europe were at this moment to be applied to India, one of these three men must be recognised as its paramount ruler. How different the fate of the three dynasties we have successively supplanted! Thanks to their weakness, defeated by Mogul and bearded by Mahratta, the Rajpoots, in the mountain fastnesses to which they were gradually confined, made no attempt to contest with us for supremacy, but in comparative peace saw us hew their old enemies hip and thigh. Lord Hastings had no sooner swept Central India of the predatory bands of Pindarees who were the sequela of the Mahrattas, than it was resolved to ask the Rajpoots to give guarantees for their peacefulness by entering into subsidiary alliances with us. The treaty of 1818 saw them, and Meywar at their head, amalgamated with our empire, and acknowledging the supremacy of the third great power which has ruled Southern Asia since they were kings. At this day their head, a mere boy, and he adopted, is peacefully seated on a feudatory throne amid the thunders of English artillery, while the representative of the Peishwas, Nana Saheb, is a homeless felon with a price set on his head, and the last of the Moguls is an imprisoned pauper whose years only have spared him from the meed due to his crimes.

But besides this historical interest, the Maharana's accession has a political meaning which our Indian feudatories will not fail to understand. Just one year before, his predecessor, in common with his fellows, had been assured by her Majesty's Minister and Viceroy that so long as he and his house faithfully served the British, he would never want an heir to sit upon his throne. He had been guaranteed of the right of adoption on failure of natural heirs, in terms which even his ancestral law and custom did not concede to him so fully. The Maharana, Suroop Singh, died on 10th November last, after a long reign, of which he had spent more than one-half in wasting sickness. So far had our counsels prevailed that his last instructions were to prevent any acts of Sutttee among his wives or slaves; yet one slave girl managed to evade the prohibition. Not long before his death, he adopted his grand-nephew as his successor, an aristocratic, pretty boy only fourteen years of age. Here was an instance, the first on a large scale, of the security guaranteed to our feudatories by her Majesty in the exercise of this cherished right. The installation of this boy on the 28th December last was a pledge to the princes and chiefs of India that the British word is sacred, none the less that many of the feudal barons of Meywar are in heart opposed to the new Rana.

It was fitting that the attendant circumstances of the Act should be unusually impressive. Accordingly, a week before, General St. P. Lawrence, the Governor-general's agent, accompanied by Major Taylor, C.B., the political agent of the Meywar Court, and his own staff, and attended by the moveable column from Neemuch, arrived in Oodeypore, the capital. On the 23rd they paid the young Prince a visit of condolence. On the afternoon of the 26th the grand installation was held in the court yard of the palace, a fine massive pile of white stone, towering over the whole of the city, and standing out in bold relief against the dark hills in the background which surround the city on all sides. The durbar assembled in a large shameana, and the Rana's throne was covered with a gorgeous canopy of embroidered crimson velvet, the gift of Lord William Bentinck to Rana Jewan Singh. The troops of the moveable column, and the escorts with General Lawrence and Major Taylor, formed a living street from the palace gateway to the durbar tent, and the surrounding walls and balconies were crowded with the populace who thronged to see the spectacle. The agent and politicals proceeded to the palace under a salute from the British guns, which thundered forth so loud that every discharge made the poor little Rana jump in his throne and kept his lips in a constant quiver. Not only was the concourse of natives a striking contrast to the durbars of former days, but the Thakoor of Meywar, who had mostly been long alienated from their ruler, and kept aloof from his presence, were invited to attend on this occasion, and almost without exception responded to the call. There were not less than a hundred of these feudal barons who came to welcome Sumbhoo Sing's accession to the throne. General Lawrence, in a short but pithy speech in the vernacular, congratulated the young prince, and in the name of the British Government announced his installation as Rana. He bade him follow in the steps of the best of his ancestors; and when the time should come for him to govern his country in person, hoped that he would prove a wise and humane ruler. The Rana was then presented with the khillut bestowed by the Governor-general on the late chief for his loyalty during the rebellion, when he protected the Europeans who escaped from Neemuch. A handsome tiara, necklace and pair of bracelets were placed on the youth, and a salute of seventeen guns again thundered through the air. General Lawrence then addressed a few words of counsel to the sirdars. He observed that it was an auspicious day for the State that they had now assembled to do honour to their chief, as had not been done for years. Let them forget the past, and be faithful, loyal and obedient to their ruler, and so would he prove true to them. After the usual ceremonies the assembly broke up, and on the 28th the young chief appeared for the first time in public, and returned the agent's visit at the Residency. The troops were again drawn up to form a street, reaching from the tent to the gateway. In this durbar even more nobles and grandees were present than before, and the concourse of people who thronged to witness the scene was more dense than ever. Every hillock in the distance which commanded a view of the durbar shameana was covered with masses of people, and it would be impossible to calculate the number of Raj troops and retainers of the chiefs who swelled the pageant. Judging from its commencement the reign of Rana Sumbhoo Sing bids fair to be unusually popular. The prince, his chiefs, and people seem alike delighted with the pomp and grandeur of the ceremonial. The moveable column marched back to Neemuch, and the agent's camp is now wending its way to Jhaira Patun, where a royal wedding is to take place, between the Maharao Raja of Allwar and a princess of Jallawar.

It is difficult to over-estimate the effect of this spectacle, not only on the young prince and his barons, but on his subjects and his fellow chiefs throughout India. Our duty as rulers is not merely to govern our own people, but to influence our feudatories by our advice and example to act on our principles, while we set an example of just, merciful, and successful administration to all the potentates beyond our frontier.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE GREAT PUNKAH-PULLING PROBLEM, which had a far more intense interest for Anglo-Indians than the quadrature of the circle or perpetual motion for scientific monomaniacs, has been solved. Often as this has been declared to the public in such tempting phrases as "the sleepy bearer superseded," and to Government attended with promises of enormous financial saving, our readers may really believe the present announcement. By new adaptations, almost ludicrous from their simplicity, one coolie may henceforth pull all the punkahs of the largest house or barrack, noiselessly and with an incessant swing of eight feet; and tatties may be far more effectually watered than heretofore from a rude trough, which may be purchased for a few rupees, and will require the bheestie to fill a cistern supplying it with water, as he does the morning bath-room, only once a-day. Coolness, whether from punkah or tattie, is health and life to the European resident in India for eight months of the year. The invention which secures it cheaply and unfailingly, night and day, is of unspeakable importance. First as to the punkah. Mr. Grant, the inventor, is an Englishman, a supervisor in the Public Works Department of the North Western Provinces. Convinced that the great mistake of all previous mechanists consisted in attempting to adapt machinery to existing punkahs, he resolved to adapt the punkahs to simple machinery. Accordingly a year ago he submitted to his superiors the following plan. We prefer to state it in the words of Captain A. G. Priestly, Executive Engineer at Benares, who has seen the experiments there:—"The punkahs are those ordinarily used in barracks, a frame six feet long two feet wide, covered with cloth, and having a fringe attached. They are hung by an iron rod firmly fixed to the frame and working on a pivot attached to the beam supporting the punkah. The extremity of this rod is not at the pivot, but it is continued above it for about one and a half feet. The usual ropes are given as checks. The punkahs are connected by iron wire, fastened to these rods and two points, one, the upper extremity of the rod above the pivot, and the other at the same distance from and below the pivot. The wires of the end punkahs are not led directly to the machine, but are first fastened to a rod working in a slit of the wall. So much for the hanging, now comes the pulling apparatus; from the extremities of the rod (or lever) in the wall, wires are carried, connecting each end with the vertical arm of a bent lever. The horizontal and longer arms of these levers are weighted more or less, to constitute a counterpoise to the weight of the number of punkahs to be pulled. I have here to notice a simple and ingenious arrangement, by which the power of the descending treadle is increased and the ascending one lightened. A moveable weight is connected with the produced extremity of each, which, flying out when it commences its ascent, returns towards the fulcrum when it begins descending, thus giving a considerable increase of power to the man working it. The pulling machine takes up little or no room, and can be put up in the verandah of a barrack so that no space is sacrificed to it. It is not easily put out of order. One coolie is quite sufficient to work it; and supposing, at the outside, four reliefs, four coolies would thus pull all the punkahs of a barrack. The experimental one pulls with the greatest ease twenty-five punkahs sixty-two feet, the entire number on one side, not end, of a building 353 feet long;

twelve coolies are employed to pull by hand the corresponding punkahs on the opposite side of the same building. The connecting wires show no sign of straining, they have never snapped and they work noiselessly. There is no 'Bengal' side to a Punkah, the pull being alternately in either direction. It economises labour, by enabling a man to use his weight." In the three barracks and hospital of Benares there used to be 254 punkahs drawn by 114 coolies at a cost of Rs. 2,512 for 5½ months. On Mr. Grant's plan the same punkahs were pulled for Rs. 528 for 5½ months last hot season, after paying for the cost of each machine at Rs 25, and of altering each punkah at Rs. 4. The cheapness and advantages of the whole plan are so obvious that the Commander-in-Chief expressed his thanks to Mr. Grant. The Governor-general, on his last visit to Benares, was so satisfied with its successful action that he has directed measures to be taken at once for the "extension of this useful invention." Mr. Grant has accordingly been directed to introduce it into the Meerut barracks, and thereafter to proceed from station to station for the same purpose. The trough consists of a simple half tube, the breadth of the tattie, fixed above it like the spout which runs round the eaves of English houses. Water is admitted to it from above, and it is so hung with weights graduated according to the water required, that once a minute it tilts over the water it contains on the tattie, which is thus kept perpetually moist without the necessity of shouting to lazy bheesties, who for the moment make a splash which is disagreeable, and allow the tattie to become dry till they are again summoned to their duty. The trough may be put up for four rupees, with any vessel of sufficient capacity to contain water, which might be filled daily. Mr. Grant has taken out a patent for his tattie apparatus, and Government have determined to introduce it into all barracks and public offices. As a preliminary reward for his inventions Mr. Grant has been promoted to the grade of sub-engineer. As soon as the full extent of the saving throughout India caused by his punkah-pulling apparatus is known, he will receive a proportionate pecuniary reward. At this moment Mr. Grant's tattie is working admirably in our office. Measures should be taken to introduce it, and the new punkah machines, into all the barracks of India before next hot season. Such a description as we have given, with drawings, will enable the engineer of every station to make the arrangements.—Friend of India.

PESHAWUR CORN MARKET.—Advices still reach us (Englishman) from the Punjab to the effect that the price of grain is rapidly rising in the Peshawur valley. It is already higher than it has been for some years, and fears are entertained that it may reach a figure bordering on famine prices. The reasons assigned for this apparently unaccountable rise in price are the demand for export into Afghanistan and the mountain tracts bordering on Peshawur, where scarcity to some extent is said to exist, and the anticipation of a short crop in our own provinces. We imagine, however, that the Mahajuns themselves are the direct cause of the present rise, as they, with few exceptions, are offering similar advance of price in the grain market throughout India. If they happen to have money uninvested in other ways, and if they see any chance of a short, or even a moderate harvest, they invariably invest all their means in grain, with a view to bring about a scarcity in other quarters, and thereby realise large profits. When coupled with short crops in our own provinces, the neighbouring States are suffering from a scarcity, the Mahajun's gains are not only certain, but enormous. Our belief is, that the present scarcity in the Peshawur valley is the fruit, not only of any actual dearth of grain, but of the Mahajun's greed after gain.

COMMANDANT OF ARTILLERY.—The Commander-in-Chief is to be made Commandant of Artillery, Colonel Swinley will be a kind of Brigadier under him.

LIEUTENANT GLUBB has been temporarily appointed to the post of Fort Quartermaster, v. Green, who has accepted the £150 bonus.

MEETING OF CIVILIANS AT AGRA.—We extract from an up-country paper the following account of a meeting of civil servants held at Agra on the 14th January. Present: Messrs. M. R. Gubbins, A. Ross, W. Wynyard, James Simson, R. Wall, R. H. Warrand, and A. Sella. Present by proxies: Messrs. J. H. Batten, A. Boulderson, B. Hall and H. D. Robertson. Read the replies received by the Honorary Secretary to the circular issued by the Agra Committee, dated the 21st Dec. last. Twenty-eight unconditional assents have been recorded. There are a large number of conditional assents, the condition mainly insisted upon being that of uncompromising hostility to the Calcutta Committee's proposition. Read also the printed circular issued by the Lucknow Committee, dated the 31st ultimo, forwarding copy of the resolutions passed at a meeting held at that station on the 26th ultimo. Proposed by Mr. Ross and seconded by Mr. Wynyard:—"That this meeting do adopt, and recommend for adoption to the members of the Civil Service of these provinces, generally, the following portion of resolution II. and following resolutions passed by the Lucknow meeting on the 26th of December last; and that the necessity of maintaining in its integrity the existing rules providing for pensions for officers compelled to retire from the service on account of certified sickness, be further prominently urged." Extract from the Lucknow resolutions:—"This meeting considers that the most equitable, as well as most appropriate form of compensation, would be the grant of absolute pensions, on a liberal scale, irrespective of an annuity derived from any fund raised by subscriptions of the members of the service. III. This meeting will, for the sake of ensuring unanimity, waive its own opinion regarding the rates at which such absolute pensions should be asked for, but would suggest that the minimum period of service entitling to a pension be reduced to twenty years. IV. This meeting is still of opinion that it is advisable at present not to raise the question of winding up the Annuity Fund. V. This meeting is of opinion that the necessity for the unconditional guarantee of the benefits of the Civil fund to existing subscribers has not been urged in sufficiently impressive terms in any draft memorial they have yet seen." The following amendment was proposed by Mr. R. Wall, and seconded by Mr. R. Warrand:—"That the words 'to twenty years' be omitted from resolution III." This amendment was not carried. The original resolution was then put and carried. Proposed by Mr. Simson, seconded by Mr. Ross, "That the members of the meeting, who have voted for the above resolution, do send their proxies to E. C. Bayley, Esq., Calcutta, empowering him to vote for them according to the tenor of the above resolution at the general meeting, to be held in Calcutta on the 29th inst. And that the members of the service in the North-Western Provinces generally be invited by a notice to be issued to the Delhi Gazette and the Mofussilite, to send their proxies to Mr. Bayley in like manner." Carried unanimously.—(Signed) M. R. Gubbins, Chairman.

CRICKET.—The glorious uncertainty of this noble game has again been exemplified in the result of the return match played between the Eleven of H.M. 68th L.I. and the Calcutta Club. The latter, though beaten in the first match, were determined to "play up," as indeed they were warned to do; and although, from circumstances over which they had no control, they lost the services of no less than eight of the Eleven originally selected, they were not the less resolved to maintain the reputation they have so long held. Calcutta C. Club:—First innings, 194 runs; second, 83; total, 277. H.M. 68th L.I.:—First innings, 132; second, 90; total, 228. The Club thus winning, with forty-nine runs to spare. The 68th are now on their way back to Rangoon.

CAPTAIN E. K. O. GILBERT, at present Brigade Major at Dinapore, is appointed Deputy-assistant Adjutant-general at the presidency, in place of Captain J. Hudson now, officiating, who is appointed Assistant-Adjutant-general at Lahore.

CAPTAIN BARTER, of the Staff Corps, has been appointed to the command of the 15th N.I.

DELHI, Jan. 14.—We are having our share of cloudy weather, and although a sufficiency of rain does not fall, we may yet get enough to lighten the hearts of the cultivators. There is a cold cutting easterly wind blowing to-day, and heavy clouds coming up from the same quarter. A remount party, consisting of about 350 of the 21st Hussars, came in on the 11th, and are to march to-morrow. I believe they were to have left this morning; but either the rain or the dance to be given by the 82nd to-morrow night has detained them. There is also a detail of artillery here, the latter travelling by bullock train. The Lieutenant-governor of the Punjab, accompanied by his secretary, Mr. Davies, is expected either to-morrow or next day, en route to Calcutta. There are, of course, various conflicting rumours regarding the object of this sudden move; but I think I may state that it is nothing of vital importance. We are expecting her Highness Sekunder Begum of Bhopal. Brigade parades and private inspections are plentiful now. Our new brigadier is commencing well, and is full of energy and activity. He has rendered himself popular to the church-goers by returning the seats to their former positions, an arrangement most people approve of, as it tends to lessen the noise and confusion consequent upon the assembling of the congregation with all the seats in a lump, and everybody to sit where he pleased. The principal seats are now ticketed, as they were before the mutiny. Another thing I may mention is, that the experiment of lighting the church with gas is about to be tried; the materials being on the spot there will not be much difficulty about the matter.—Englishman.

SIR R. MONTGOMERIE, accompanied by Mr. R. H. Davies, secretary to the Government of the Punjab, was to leave Lahore for Calcutta on Monday, the 13th of January. There can be little doubt of the cause for Sir R. Montgomerie's desire for a personal interview with Lord Canning prior to his departure for England. It is not long since Sir Bartle Frere recorded in a minute his sense of the unsatisfactory financial condition of the Punjab, in a great measure brought about by extravagant expenditure on military objects. It is urged in defence of the Punjab Government from the charge of extravagant expenditure for military purposes, that that Government had no control whatever over the military expenditure complained of; that troops to any extent, and in any force, could be quartered in the Punjab, without the Government of that province having any voice in the matter; and that it was competent to the Government of India to order any number of men into the Punjab and make them chargeable on its revenues without making any reference whatever to the local authorities. Moreover, that at the time Sir Bartle Frere wrote this minute, there was a far larger force in the Punjab than there was any necessity for. Such being the case, Sir Robert Montgomerie can scarcely fail to feel aggrieved at the reflection on his administration; and it is with a view to protesting against this minute, and to confer with the Viceroy before his departure, that he is now on his way to Calcutta.—Englishman.

MAHARAJAH JUNG BAHADOOR has arrived at Bootwal, and has expressed himself as well satisfied with the supplies furnished for his camp by the Rajahs of Butteah and Ramnugger. The runners who convey the British daks between Katmandoo and the foot of the Hills have become very troublesome; those at least who are Nepalese subjects, and they often threaten to throw up their situations unless allowed to carry the mails at their own convenience. The British authorities have called upon the Durbar to interfere.

NAVIGATION OF THE INDUS.—A scheme for the improvement of the Indus has been sanctioned at a cost of Rs. 55,906 per annum. Vessels plying on the river are to be registered and to pay certain fees, which are expected to bring Rs. 16,384 into the coffers of Government. *

MRS. RENNY, wife of Brigadier-General Renny, presented the Indian Medal to seven officers and about 220 non-commissioned officers and privates of the 2nd Dragoon Guards at Lucknow.

LUCKIMPORE, Jan. 2.—Perhaps you are not aware that some time ago the Commander-in-Chief issued a circular to the military officers employed in Upper Assam, intimating his desire to possess any of the valuable information which could be afforded by officers whose spirit of enterprise led them to visit remote districts, particularly those bordering on Thibet or China. His Excellency said that he would feel much obliged if they would transmit, through their commanding officers, journals of their travels, or any information they could gather as to the countries through which they passed, the more ample and detailed the better. His Excellency also said that such information would be useful to the Quarter Master General's Department, and the scientific portions of such journals would also be interesting to geographical and other societies. The military officers in Upper Assam were thus encouraged to travel about the country and prosecute their journeys beyond the frontier. Since this, however, I have heard that the agent at Luckimpoore has brought the matter to the notice of Government, observing that, though the moving about of officers in remote parts of the British territory may be attended with advantage, their extending their journeys beyond the frontier might, in this quarter, give rise to difficulties, on account of our relations with the Abor and Shamsha tribes, which are not on such a footing as to render any exploration of the tracts they occupy advisable. I am told, further, that the agent has recommended that no officers should be allowed to proceed beyond the frontier in this direction without first communicating with the civil authorities; alleging as a reason for such caution the fate which so recently befel the French missionaries, M. M. Kirch and Bowry, in their endeavour to reach Thibet, and also the hostile feeling of the Abors, which has rendered needful two expeditions against them—one in March, 1858, and another in February, 1859.—Englishman.

H. M.'s 75TH REGIMENT.—Orders have arrived from England, and been conveyed to H. M.'s 75th Regiment, now garrisoning Fort William, directing the return home of the regiment with the least possible delay; and it was the intention of the Horse Guards that the corps should have gone to England earlier in this cold season; but much was, as usual, left to the discretion of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief. The regiment will be ordered to volunteer immediately, and will leave after the 1st Battalion H. M.'s 6th Royals, at Barrackpore, shall have been got out of the way. The 75th Regiment has been more than twelve years in India, and has done good service; having, when at Umballah in 1857, been one of the first regiments to advance upon Delhi, serving with the force throughout the siege, storm, and capture of the city, and afterwards in Oude, and at the fall of Lucknow.

H. M.'s 92ND HIGHLANDERS, now at Benares, are ordered down by river steamer to the presidency, to relieve H. M.'s 75th regiment garrisoning Fort William, and about to return to England as soon as replaced by the above corps. The 92nd Highlanders are the next regiment for home service; and will, should nothing unforeseen occur to detain them in India, return to Europe next cold season. The regiment is very strong; and will be an acquisition at the Presidency, having been most popular wherever it has served in India. His Excellency the present Commander-in-Chief in India rose in the 92nd Highlanders, and left the regiment, we believe, on his promotion to the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel. The regiment may be expected at the Presidency in the beginning of next month, and the 75th will get away about the end of it.

LIEUT.-COLONEL G. E. VOYLE, Commissary of Ordnance at the presidency, in Fort William, has been appointed Director of the Artillery School of Instruction at Meerut, in succession to Colonel C. Hogge, C.B., proceeding to Europe on sick leave. The abolition of the artillery school was contemplated in the commencement of the year; but we are glad to find it has escaped the blows of the financiers.

THE NANA'S JEWELS.—A good deal of surprise has been manifested in certain quarters at the unaccountable determination of the Government not to dispose of the jewels, &c., belonging to the miscreant Dhoondo Punt Nana Sahib, which were seized at Bithoor, and which are valued at several lakhs of rupees. They have been lying in the Treasury godowns for the last few years. It is said that the pearls in particular are being ruined by damp, and that the costly silks and shawls are being totally destroyed by white ants. The attention of Government has been repeatedly called to this fact without eliciting any instructions.

REDEMPTION OF LAND TAX.—A correspondent of The Hills writing from Dehra on the 28th December states that the fee-simple order has given the native proprietors their unqualified satisfaction. He says:—"Having so earnestly advocated the cause of fee-simple you will doubtless be glad to know how its being granted is received among the natives. It is with most unqualified delight. The large landholders are straining every nerve to take immediate advantage of the great boon. 'You approve of this measure,' I asked of one of the largest landed proprietors this morning. 'Approve of it, yes; I would willingly have paid thirty years' purchase to have got rid merely of the constant interference of the Government officials.' This man has already sent in his application for the redemption of every beegah of land he possesses. The universal benefits of a fee-simple tenure—benefits which are founded on some of the main qualities of human nature—may be learnt from any book on political economy. That the native of this country should lay such stress on this one point of freedom from official interference, apart from being an additional testimony in favour of the wisdom of the measure, shows how important a part particular circumstances may play in legislation, a truth which is overlooked by those who deprecate all special legislation for India."

THE 1ST BATTALION H.M.'S 6TH ROYAL REGIMENT now at Barrackpore, embarked at the end of January on board the Champion of the Seas, four hundred and seventy-five strong, having thrown off three hundred and thirty-three volunteers. We (Englishman) understand that such of the married officers of the regiment as wish to go to England overland, and can afford it, are permitted to do so; in our opinion a most excellent arrangement, as a ship totally devoted to the carriage of a large body of troops is not exactly the place where ladies can be accommodated with comfort and convenience to themselves, and, we may also add, to the officers and men. Until the new six thousand ton iron steamers begin to ply round the Cape, all married officers of regiments coming out to India or returning home should be permitted to select the overland route. In the new vessels there will be separate accommodation for all classes and ranks.

LUCKY SUBALTERNS.—The retirements have made fifty-six ensigns the richer by 50 rupees a month by their promotion to Lieutenancies. The days have gone by when cornets and ensigns were fifteen years getting their promotion.

THE NEW INDIAN CURRENCY, bearing "the image and superscription" of her Most Gracious Majesty, will shortly come into circulation. Several new dies are now being prepared at the Calcutta Mint after the patterns that have lately arrived from England. A few silver coins have already been struck by the authorities of the Mint, and submitted for the approval of the Mint Committee.

H.E. THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF left Rawul Pindee on the 5th January for Murree, Abbottabad, and Hazara. He will rejoin his camp two marches from Rawul Pindee. The camp moves on steadily to Peshawur. From Peshawur it is said that he goes down the whole trans-Indus frontier with Brigadier Chamberlain, and will minutely inspect the outposts. He has got quite over his two accidents. The 51st and 98th regiments have improved very much in health since their arrival at Rawul Pindee.

COLONEL TUCKER, at present at the Presidency, has been appointed to a brigade, which he is shortly about to take up.

CUSTOMS DUTY.—The Board of Revenue has lately decided that the duty paid on unopened parcels, whether they contain old wearing apparel or otherwise, shall not be refunded. The case which elicited the above decision appears to be the following:—Some time ago a case of old apparel was passed free through the Custom-house by a military officer. A few months after the same parcel was remitted from England to Calcutta, and the agents of the aforesaid officer, who is now ordered to the frontiers, cleared it from the Custom-house by paying the usual duty. As the contents were only old and used clothes, the owner applied to the collector for a refund of the duty, and the above decision was brought to bear in this case.

THE MUNICIPAL REVENUE OF CALCUTTA is nearly 7½ lacs, while the area of the city is 6½ square miles. In Bombay the revenue is more than 9 lacs, while the area of the island is 19 square miles, or about three times the area of Calcutta. In Madras the municipal revenue is only 2½ lacs, whilst its area is 20 square miles,—more than four times that of Calcutta.

COPPER COINS.—As a few more ships laden with copper coins are on their way to Calcutta, and as by the time they reach that port the Treasury cash balances will have been made over to the Bank of Bengal, instructions have been issued to the authorities of the Bank to take charge of the specie direct from on board the ships.

MR. R. TEMPLE.—Mr. R. Temple, President of the Civil Finance Commission, intends shortly to proceed to Rangoon, with the view of making certain local inquiries into the expenditure connected with the establishments of various public offices there, particularly those in the Public Works Department, to which the attention of the said Commission is at present directed.

THE FANCY FAIR.—It is gratifying to learn that the proceeds of the sale of fancy articles on New Year's Day, in the Botanical Garden, and of the tickets purchased for passage by the ferry steamers, amounted to upwards of Rs. 10,000, which will shortly be made over to the Honorary Secretary to the Howrah General Hospital.

THE TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT.—The Director-general of Telegraphs intends shortly to proceed on a tour of inspection of the several telegraph lines in the N.W. Provinces, Bombay and Madras. Mr. Teile, special assistant to that officer, will probably remain in charge of the Calcutta office during the temporary absence of Lieutenant-col. Douglas.

THE MAHA RAJAH OF PATEEALAH.—The Maha Rajah of Patealah has taken up his quarters at Cossipore. On Thursday, January 16, according to Oriental custom, a present of a large quantity of provisions for his Highness' followers and other servants was made on behalf of the Government, agreeably to the orders issued from the Foreign Department.

MR. H. T. PRINSEP has been appointed to officiate as Registrar of the Sudder Dewany Adawlut during the absence of Lord Ulick Brown, and took charge of the office on Monday, Jan. 20.

G. W. KELLNER, Esq., assistant secretary of the Military Finance Department, has been appointed to officiate as superintendent of army clothing, vacated by the retirement of Colonel H. P. Burn. Mr. Kellner will officiate in this post (conducting besides his own duties in the finance office) until relieved by Lieut.-Colonel Atkinson, the permanent successor, now acting as secretary to Government in the military Department, and will continue to do so until the arrival of Colonel Norman, appointed to this post.

DIRECTOR-GENERAL OF POST-OFFICES.—It is said that the Director-general of Post-offices intends shortly to proceed on a tour of inspection to the N. W. Provinces. As he has been in those Provinces for several years, he has already sufficient knowledge and experience of the postal lines there. If he really intends to serve the public he will do well to inspect the Madras and Bombay lines, where certain improvements are much needed.

CAPTAIN GORDON, of the 10th N. I., goes to Landour to do duty for the ensuing year with the Convalescent Depot there.

MR. LIBLEY, the present chief engineer of the North-West Provinces, will, it is rumoured, relieve Mr. Turnbull in Calcutta. The latter gentleman goes to England, and Mr. Betagh will take over his duties in Allahabad.

A BUDDHIST PRIEST is causing considerable excitement amongst the Burmese of Tounghoo. He is branded as a heretic for declaring his belief in God as a spirit, filling immensity, punishing evil, and rewarding the good.

NEEMUCH.—The moveable column which proceeded to Oodeypore to assist at the coronation of the new Rana has returned to Neemuch. Major Taylor, C.B., has been appointed guardian to the newly-crowned Rana. The Neemuch Brigade has been abolished.

WOLVES are becoming unpleasantly numerous in Allahabad.

CAPTAIN HUDSON, deputy adjutant-general of the Presidency Division, has been removed to Lahore, to take the place of Captain Mills, recently displaced by the Commander-in-Chief.

CAPTAIN ROBERTSON, of the 10th (late 65th) N. I., has been appointed to the Interpreterships of his regiment and the station of Dinapore, vice Moseley, who gets an appointment elsewhere.

THE ESTIMATE OF THE POSTAL DEPARTMENT.—As required by the new budget system, the amount of annual expenditure in the postal department for the year 1861-62 has been estimated at about Rs. 55 lakhs and a-half, of which the sum of Rs. 85,000 appears to have been reserved to meet any future contingency.

SUB-ASSISTANT SURGEONS.—The Government of India some time ago inquired of the head of the Medical Department as to the probable cause of so many sub-assistant surgeons resigning the service. Some of the students after completing their education in the medical colleges never accept Government service at all, while others who do accept it resign their posts after holding them for a short time only. In reply to the above query the principal inspector general is said to have observed that sufficient inducements and certain higher prospects should be held out to those officers. In conformity with the above recommendation the Government of India, under instructions from the Secretary of State, has sanctioned the grant of personal allowances from rupees 50 to 100 per mensem to sub-assistant surgeons employed in the Education Department and to some of those in independent charge of civil stations.—Hurkaru.

THE STATE OF HYDERABAD.

Advices just received from Hyderabad give but gloomy prospects of the harvest; and so great are the fears entertained of a famine by the Nizam's Government that a prohibition has been put on the export of grain from the Hyderabad territory. With reference to this prohibition, an active correspondence is being carried on between the British Resident and the Minister of the Nizam. The resident, in the interests of a liberal policy, is opposed to any conservatism of the kind, and has endeavoured to imbue Salar Jung with a conviction of the unsoundness of any attempt on the part of a government to interfere with trade. Enlightened as the minister undoubtedly is, and open as he may be to conviction of the soundness of Col. Davidson's arguments, there are many reasons why he should not follow out the theory attempted to be inculcated. It is not sufficient that the minister should himself see the justness, and even the advantage to the State, of inaugurating a liberal policy, which shall disconnect the State from all direct interference with the commercial and trading community to ensure success; the Nizam himself must be convinced of the soundness of his minister's views, or the opposition of a party about the throne who look upon all invasion of now well nigh absolute sovereign prerogative as a sure sign of decadence, will surely succeed in thwarting every effort in the right direction. Those who have had no experience of the intrigues which are for ever being carried on in the court of every ruler of semi-independent States in India, can form no idea of the difficulties which surround the proposer of any measure, having for its object state reform of any kind. In every native court there is a large community of most bigoted conservatives; men who would rather see the continuance of the worst system of oppression than the introduction of any innovation upon established customs or reform, however mild or limited its object. It is with such parties in a State that the officers of that British Government, and the rulers themselves, have most difficulty. They are by nature opposed to change of every kind; and they look with the utmost suspicion and disfavour upon every suggestion for improvement or reform emanating from the representative of the British Government. If the slightest inclination is manifested on the part of the ruler to fall in with the views so expressed, this party at once assails him with tales of past grandeur of his predecessors; and of how the present deteriorated condition of the State has supervened on heed being given to recommendations of the representative of the British Government. The Government itself is looked upon as the steadfast enemy of everything native; and as being anxious, by creating difficulties, to find some pretext for absorbing the petty State into the empire it has erected on the relics of past monarchies. That such conservative parties have some reason for its suspicions of the motive with which suggestions are made by the officers of Government to native potentates, the history of India in the past affords but too much proof. But unfortunately for the native States still in existence, the very conservatism which seeks, by crushing every effort at reform, to keep them intact, is the main cause of their, one by one, falling into difficulties which eventually necessitate the interference of the British Government and ultimate absorption. The oppressive form of taxation pursued, and the usual system of plunder by all classes of officials, first reduces the agricultural population to abject poverty, and then necessitates their seeking the means of livelihood in some other direction. The revenues thus, year by year, become less and less, until at length the State becomes hopelessly mortgaged to greedy and exacting creditors; and to maintain order, the dominant power has at length to step in. This once done, the future of that State belongs to the history of British India as an integral part of her Majesty's dominions. This reasoning applies as immediately to his Highness the Nizam's dominions as to other native states.

One great benefit to the country has been achieved by Salaz Jung; he has effectually, for the time at any rate, suppressed dacoity in the Nizam's dominions. The Rohillahs, who some few years back were thrown out of employment, and forming themselves into bands ravaged the country in every direction, have been successfully dispersed with little chance of their again being able to collect in sufficiently formidable bodies to re-enact the scenes of pillage and murder now so successfully suppressed. We further learn that the visit of Dr. Forbes and Mr. Haywood to the cotton districts of the Hyderabad Deccan has been postponed sine die. The reasons for this delay in visiting an important section of the cotton yielding districts are not given; but if all that our Bombay contemporaries assert be correct, we may not unreasonably surmise that the controversy the latter gentleman has entered into with the Bombay press, through the medium of the "Manchester Cotton Reporter," may occupy so much of his time as to prevent his making such progress in the object with which it was believed he came to this country as he otherwise might.—Englishman.

COUNCIL OF MADRAS.—On Wednesday, the 22nd of January, came off an event which has been looked forward to with much interest for some time past. On that day the Madras Legislative Council held its first sitting. The Governor, Sir William Denison, presided, and all the members, official and non-official, took their seats. Of the former there were present his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief (Sir Hope Grant); the Hon. W. A. Morehead, and E. Maltby (Members of the Executive Council); the Honourable T. S. Smith, Advocate-General; T. Pycroft, Chief Secretary; and C. Pelly, Senior Member of the Board of Revenue. Of the latter there were present, the Hon. W. R. Arbuthnot, of the firm of Arbuthnot and Co.; the Hon. R. O. Campbell, Chairman of the Chamber of Commerce; and the Honourable V. Sadagopah Charloo, a native Pleader of the Sudder Court. The last six named gentlemen are the additional members who have been appointed under the provisions of the Act of Parliament passed during last session. Messrs. Smyth, Pycroft, and Pelly hold their seats ex-officio, and the others are the non-official members. Of Messrs. Arbuthnot and Campbell all that can be said is, that they are esteemed members of society, and that they have yet to win a reputation as public men. Of V. Sadagopah Charloo all that is known is, that he is a successful pleader in the Sudder Court, is a member of a high caste Hindoo family, and has on some few occasions been a conspicuous speaker at public meetings got up to agitate native grievances.—Athenaeum.

THE VALUE OF A DEGREE.—An amusing incident with reference to our Madras University has recently turned up, which throws some light upon the working of that institution amongst the native community, and the rapidly increasing value which attaches to the University degrees. Last year a native gentleman named Soobroyloo, after several years' laborious study at the Presidency College, took his degree as Bachelor of Arts. Accordingly, within the last few months, another Soobroyloo has made his appearance in Washerman's Pettah, and announced himself to the admiring neighbourhood as the veritable Soobroyloo who had taken his degree. This statement immediately gave him great weight amongst the native community in that locality; and our adventurer forthwith opened a school, and seemed to be in a fair way of profiting considerably by the imposture. But the fame of this great celebrity secured his speedy ruin. It so happened that another native gentleman, who had failed in the university education, was making another effort to pass the ordeal. A third party, who had been deeply impressed with the honours assumed by the false Soobroyloo, introduced him to the disappointed candidate as an eligible person for preparing him for the second trial. The result was that the imposture was discovered at once, for the "plucked man" was naturally acquainted with the names and faces of all those who had been more successful than himself. The false Soobroyloo was at once cross-examined as to the subjects he had studied, and other circumstances connected with a university course. He asserted that they were two Soobroyloos, and that he would immediately send for his gown and hood; but, unfortunately, the messenger despatched on the latter errand came back with the news that the gentleman in charge had gone into the Mofussil, and consequently the necessary proofs could not be obtained. The false Soobroyloo then acknowledged that he had not studied several subjects which are indispensable to a University degree; and at last completely exposed himself by stating that he had taken a law degree after studying the "law of jurisprudence," a statement which at once disclosed his real character. Whether this exposure will really affect his scholastic career remains to be seen.—Athenaeum.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CAPTAIN BURTON, the famous traveller, has been removed from the strength of the Bombay Army.

THE HANDBOOK TO THE COTTON CULTIVATION of the Bombay Presidency has been published. The work of compiling it was entrusted by the Government to Mr. W. Cassels, a leading merchant in Bombay. It has been prepared from the Government records, and other authentic sources of information, and the general conclusions at which Mr. Cassels has arrived are thus stated:—"It is important that the actual position of India, in regard to the cotton supply, should be clearly defined. The pleasant illusions of temporary demand must not be allowed to conceal the less agreeable features of sober reality. The expenditure of some lakhs of rupees in cotton experiments and the experience of a century of the cotton trade have at least furnished data for distinct conclusions, and it is now time that the case should be rightly understood. Leaving the other Presidencies to speak for themselves, the following results are clearly deducible from the facts of cotton cultivation in Bombay:—Exotic cotton cannot be successfully cultivated on a large scale in the Bombay Presidency, except in a limited portion of its southern districts. Indian cotton may be improved in cleanness and somewhat reduced in cost, but the general characteristics of the staple will not be materially altered. In so far as this quality of cotton is serviceable to the manufactures of England, India can compete with America, but if a finer description be required, India cannot adequately supply it. Unless, therefore, such alterations in machinery can be devised as may render the manufacturer indifferent to length and fineness of staple, and of the probability of this others must judge, India is not likely to replace the United States. It seems evident, then, that Indian cotton must continue to hold a subordinate place in European markets, and that there is a point at which its competition with other growths entirely ceases. It is almost impossible to state with any approach to accuracy the quantity of cotton produced in this presidency. The annual returns of cultivation do not include alienated land, and the produce of the neighbouring districts of supply can scarcely be accurately estimated. There is, however, no doubt that there is still room for a considerable extension of cotton cultivation, should remunerative demand invite it."

THE REMOVAL OF LIEUT. PENGELEY.—The Bombay papers allude to the removal of Lieut. Pengeley from the charge as British agent at Muscat, but assign no reason for the fact. The following details may help, perhaps, to show the reason why. After Brigadier Coghlan's successful mission to Zanzibar, and the acceptance of the award made by the Government of India by the Sultan's (brothers) of Muscat and Zanzibar, Captain Pelly was appointed as our agent to succeed Colonel Rigby at the latter, and Lieut. Pengeley to occupy a similar position at the former place. This gentleman was accepted solely for his somewhat limited knowledge of Arabic. It was Hobson's choice, and the Government appointed the only person they could find even with this small modicum of the needful tongue. In addition, Lieutenant Pengeley was a respectable man, and, being of a serious turn of mind, prudence it was thought might prove one of his qualifications. But on his arrival at Muscat he found the Sultan in full force, and bent most solemnly on chastising another brother in possession of a province as Governor not very far away. This young man was wilful in the extreme. He admired beauty, especially in women, and indulged the taste. He agreed with Solomon, and loved good wine—a leetle too much. He despised financial economists, lived luxuriously, and was by no means particular from whence the money came. Citizens complained frequently, not so much of the loss of their wives as the abstraction of their profits. And hence his brother's anger and the threatened chastisement. Lieut. Pengeley tried persuasion: it was of no effect. He started off with a British ship of war, and reached a place about midway from Muscat and the culprit's place of residence, at which the Sultan very soon arrived in force.

He then invited the sinning younger brother to meet his angry relative, and sent a pass of safety to and fro under the British seal, guaranteeing personal security from the time he came until he might return home. He, believing in English faith and the word of an Englishman, came down. An hour was named for the meeting of the brothers. He promised, but did not come. He wrote apologising, and named another hour of the following day. Lieutenant Pengeley seems to have forgotten both his honour and his word, and thought only that a night must pass, and the recreant might run away. He told the brother, and advised arrest. The end was clear. A British agent's pass of safety was waste paper, and the victim of misplaced confidence was a prisoner in his brother's hands, and such a brother, too! The Bombay Government did all they could to retrieve the fatal step. The recal would have been made before, but no one could be found to take the agent's place. A letter was written to the Sultan deprecating the course pursued, and disavowing the act of treachery, we were almost saying, committed in the British name. But now another and a very fitting agent has been found, Lieutenant Pengeley is recalled. These are the simple facts, and need no comment, as we observed before, to show the reason why.—Hurkaru.

PUBLIC BONDING WAREHOUSE.—Notice has been given that as it is the intention of Government to close the Public Bonding Warehouse established under Act XXV. of 1836, no goods will be received in public bond after the expiration of three months from the date of the present notification; and the Government Bonding Warehouse will be formally closed at the end of a further period of fifteen months. Parties having goods in the Public Bonding Warehouse are therefore required to clear or remove them to a private licensed warehouse within that time. No goods except liquor in cask or cases will be received for bond in the public warehouse during three months from the present date. All goods now so in bond, together with all liquor in casks or cases received during the next three months, will be allowed to remain in the public warehouse for the full period of fifteen months from the date of the execution of the bonds referring to them. But no bonds will be renewed on any pretence whatever for goods to remain in the public bonding warehouse; bonds may, however, be renewed for goods to be removed to a private bonding warehouse licensed under Act XXV. of 1836.

RIVER VERSUS RAIL.—The statistics of the traffic between Kurrachee and Kotree show that the quantity of freight carried by Government steamers is at present about double what goes by rail. Since the opening of the Sind railway the demand for tonnage on account of private traffic in the Government steamers has continued steadily on the increase. "The absence of facilities for the interchange of the river and rail traffic at Kotree has hitherto prevented the railway from receiving its due proportion of the traffic." The causes alleged by the natives for the preference for river carriage are the saving it affords from the anxiety of boatmen to hold their ground against the railway, the injury done to goods by the railway, the inconvenient arrangements connected with the storing and transhipment of goods on the railway, and the difficulty of communicating with the officials of the railway, many of whom are unacquainted with the vernacular. These are all causes which will gradually disappear.

ABOLITION OF THE INDIAN NAVY.—We understand that the Government of India have decided upon the abolition of the Indian Navy, and that instructions will be shortly sent to Bombay to give immediate effect to this resolution, by putting the vessels out of commission and pensioning the officers.

TRANSFER OF NORTH CANARA.—Sir Charles Wood has, the Bombay Saturday Review learns, overruled the objections of the Madras Government to the transference of North Canara to the Bombay Presidency; and the arrangements for completing the annexation will, in all likelihood, be made before the end of February.

CHINA.

HONG KONG, Jan. 15.—The Columbian, with the English mails of November 10, due here on the 20th ultimo, arrived on the 8th inst., having had to put into Manila for coal on her passage from Singapore.

The London mail of November 25 has not yet arrived, and is about five days overdue.

The principal news during the past fortnight has reference to the loss of Ningpo by the Imperial party, and its capture by the rebels. On the first intelligence of this event most moderate people here, while anxious to believe that the rebels were beginning to show signs of humanity in their deportment towards those who fell under their power, had grave doubts as to the reality of the change, at once sudden and satisfactory, that was said to characterise the progress of the insurgent campaign. We have recorded that nearly the whole of the city population fled on the advance of the Taipings; but unfortunately some poor women, mostly old, were left behind, with a certain proportion of younger ones; these latter have been subjected to every sort of indignity, some being ultimately left to die in the streets. The streets themselves are literally strewn with dead bodies, all form of burial being quite disregarded. Altogether, the city presents a spectacle of the most revolting description, by no means creditable to the decency of its present occupants. Towards foreigners alone has moderation been practised, and that is solely attributable to the dread they entertain of us. No general massacre took place, as there were few people left to kill; no houses were burnt, in compliance with a promise given to our consul at Ningpo, before the city was taken. The trade and prospects of the place are, however, hopelessly ruined.

The following authentic heads of news from that port have been received by us, and will doubtless prove interesting to the English public. The dates brought down from Ningpo are to the 3rd inst.:—

"The British Consul, Mr. Fred. Harvey, has called upon the English missionaries to leave the city of Ningpo, it being no longer a fit residence for Christian missionaries. All the British missionaries have abandoned the city.

"The rebel soldiers who insulted some of these missionaries have been summarily beheaded. Seven heads came off.

"Dreadful outrages committed by the rebel soldiers on a few Chinese women found concealed in the city. Seven or seventeen the number; the rebels are not particular.

"Mr. Consul Harvey has received a written apology from the rebel generals-in-chief for not returning his call. (The rascals are afraid of coming out of the city forts.)

"The Taipings continue to respect the foreign location site at Ningpo, in accordance with promise and arrangement made with Mr. Consul Harvey.

"Departure of rebel troops for Shaou-hing. Disbanding of those troops outside Ningpo—the recruits running away, and leaving the old rebels to return to Ningpo.

"Consul Harvey has been informed by the rebels that they propose establishing a native custom-house.

"Admiral Chinn is reported to be arming at Chusan for an attack on Ningpo.

"The city has become an armed camp; no trade or business within its walls. No residents of respectability—only rebels living in it."

The latest advices from Pekin are to the 18th December, at which date all was quiet. Mr. Bruce, in conjunction with Prince Kung, had issued revised regulations for the Yangtze river.

In a letter lately received from Hankow our correspondent says that—"Though everything is quiet as far as political affairs are concerned, and the rebels are still away from both provinces, yet business is at a standstill, owing perhaps to the bad weather, heavy falls of snow, and high winds, and also to the approaching grand Chinese festivals and rejoicings in consequence of the new year; be that as it may, business is very dull."

The result of Admiral Hope's visit to Nankin is shown in the new regulations which he published on his return to Shanghai. They do little more than repeat, with some variations, those issued by him in March last, when he first went up the Yang-tze. They indicate a determination on his part not to allow the rebels to interfere in any way with the navigation of the river by British vessels, or vessels authorised to fly the British flag. British-owned junks, having papers given them (by authority of Mr. Bruce) by the Consul at Hankow, are considered as authorised to fly the flag, and these junks have been interfered with on several occasions, both by Imperialists and rebels. With freight at twenty taels per ton from Hankow to Shanghai, the employment of such craft is a necessity, but as the number of steamers increases they will gradually be dispensed with.

At Nankin, we believe, the same condition of affairs prevails as when our authorities last paid it a visit. Beyond the traffic in a few necessities of life, there is nothing in the form of trade; terror rules within the walls, and decapitation—the only punishment known in the rebel camps—is a daily or hourly occurrence; the military patrols may kill a suspicious or unknown person on meeting him, and the chiefs, or headmen, have the same power over their slaves.

The security of Shanghai and the uninterrupted navigation of the Yang-tze are the points which the British Government appear at present disposed to maintain under all circumstances; but the fall of Ningpo shows that, as yet at least, they are not prepared to extend the same principle to all the ports. The question that now naturally agitates some minds is, which ports will be protected, and which not?

Chusan is at present a receptacle for the trade driven from Ningpo by the rebels.

From the ports of Amoy, Fuhchau, and Swatow, we have no news of importance.

Hangchow is reported to have fallen at last. This has caused a little consternation among the native merchants at Shanghai, who suppose that another stride will bring the rebels to their doors.

Mr. Harry Parkes goes to England by the present mail, after having done more for England in China than any other living man. He well deserves the brief interval of repose he now goes home to obtain.

From Japan we learn that the new regulations have not been relished by the British community; an order emanating from the native authorities, forbidding Japanese traders to take money from our merchants previous to furnishing the goods for which that money forms payment, is, in effect, an infraction of Article XIV. of the Treaty, which says that "foreigners may freely buy from Japanese, and sell to them, any articles that either may have for sale (munitions of war excepted), without the intervention of any Japanese officers in such purchase or sale, or in making or receiving payment for the same."

Another topic at present discussed in Japan is the opening of new ports, the time (1862) having now arrived for the opening by treaty of Ogasaki and Yedo. The former of these ports is said to possess commercial prospects of a very high order. Some of the consuls have been memorialised on the subject, and a reply has been received from Mr. Harris, the American Minister, to the effect that the subject is under the consideration of his Government, but that no conclusion had yet been come to. The British Minister is silent on the subject. The representatives of England and France have each assumed a guard of armed retainers; that of the former arrived at Yokuhama by the Centaur on the 1st of November. It is composed of a draft from the Military Train, and is said to form rather an imposing body of men. The guard of M. de Bellecourt, the French Minister, is composed of men drafted from the Dordogne, but acquainted more or less with cavalry service. The Prince of Mito is reported to be dead. His son, who succeeds him, is said to be friendly, if not to foreigners, at least to justice; for he has been making strenuous and successful efforts to apprehend the assassins who lately attacked the British Legation. A church and chaplain are being provided for English residents at Yokuhama. All causes of disturbance in this country seem now reduced to the freaks of drunken sailors ashore on leave.—Overland China Mail.

THE STRAITS.

NETHERLANDS INDIA.—By the Dutch mail steamer we have Java papers to the 14th Jan.

Very stormy weather had prevailed all over Java, and much rain had fallen. The papers are filled with accounts of inundations, the destruction of roads and bridges, and the bursting of dams. The crops of paddy, indigo, and other produce, in many places have been much injured. At Batavia and Samarang communication with the shipping was nearly suspended, on account of the heavy weather. A young officer of Government, Mr. Jeekel, newly appointed Secretary to the Residency of Surabaya, lost his life at Samarang in attempting to land there. The intelligence from Banjermassing is of a varied nature,—success and disasters. On the 15th December three columns of about seventy men each, under Major de Veer de Rochemont, and Captains Van Langen and Van Bennekom, attacked a hostile position at Benua Lawas, in the Amonthay district. The attack was made simultaneously in front and rear and at the side. Two bentings were carried in about an hour, the enemy offering a most determined opposition. Many of the rebels were killed, including one of the leaders, and a large quantity of weapons and two flags fell into the hands of the assailants. The position of the enemy was very strong, and in order to attack the second benting it was necessary to cross a river, which was done by some of the officers and men by swimming, while others made use of a rude bridge composed of a single bamboo. Five chiefs from the Kahayan, with sixty-six followers, had come in and made submission. Demang Lehman was confident that he would prevail upon Hidayat to surrender. That chief had sent letters to the Resident requesting terms, and was waiting the answer. On the 14th December the Controller Suyk, with an escort of five soldiers, set out from Mungu Thayu for the purpose of making an inspection in the Margasari district. On the night of the 16th he was treacherously attacked and put to death with three of his escort. The remaining two soldiers succeeded in escaping. The collector of customs at the same place also succeeded in hiding himself in the jungle, and afterwards got on board the tug van Os, which brought him to Banjermassing. The Custom house was plundered and burnt down. Information having been received that the murderers of the controller were to be found at a place about three quarters of an hour's distance from Margasari, the second lieutenant, Croes, with a detachment of twenty bayonets, proceeded in that direction to reconnoitre. He was suddenly attacked and with fourteen of his men killed, while other four were wounded. A search was afterwards made for the murderers, but they were not to be found.—Singapore Free Press.

STANTON, R.N.—On Friday, January 18, the Committee of the Singapore Chamber of Commerce presented Mr. Stanton, R.N., commanding H.M.'s surveying vessel Saracen, with a gold pocket chronometer, on behalf of a number of the merchants of Singapore, as an acknowledgment of the services rendered to commerce and navigation by Mr. Stanton's surveys of Banks Straits, &c. #### THE DELHI COMMISSARIAT.

Head Qrs., Camp, Sealkote, Dec. 19.—At the request of the offic. commissary general, it is announced for general information, that the commissariat duties of the station of Delhi have been separated from those of Meerut, and the former station constituted a distinct executive charge from Oct. 1 last; also, that the station of Futtehghurh (which was last year an independent executive charge) was made a dependency of the Cawnpore executive charge from May 1, 1861.

STATION PRIZE COMMITTEES.

Head Quarters, Camp Lalla Mouna, Dec. 23.—With reference to G.G.O., No. 1,147 of 13th inst., authorising the immediate issue of a first distribution of the Delhi prize money, the attention of officers, departments, and others concerned, is called to G.G.O., No. 1,154 of 16th idem, publishing detailed instructions for the preparation and submission of bills, &c., on the above-mentioned account; and directing the formation of station prize committees for the examination and payment of claims for European and native soldiers invalided, discharged, or deceased.

2. The instructions and forms laid down in the aforesaid G.O. are to be most carefully observed.

ISSUE OF ACCOUTREMENTS, &c.

Government having authorised the issue of the present stock of accoutrements, harness, and saddlery, of country manufacture, to all British troops, instead of obtaining any further supply of new equipments for the purpose from England, the C. in C. desires, with reference to Rule 2 of G.G.O., No. 922 of 12th Oct. last, that stores of this description received by regiments during the ensuing year, to replace articles worn out, may not be condemned merely on account of a difference in quality or pattern from the present prescribed patterns in the British army. Such articles will be issued with the understanding that the periods laid down by the regulations for their being kept in use will not be enforced; and that they will not be required to last longer than they are found to remain in good and serviceable order. Regiments will retain any regiment devices worn on their accoutrements, as these are not available in magazines.

DISHONEST CONTRACTORS.

Head Quarters, Camp Sumbrail, Dec. 20.—At several stations officers are in the habit of purchasing daily, at the contract price, bread and meat from the Government contractors.

2. This custom has unfavourable results, because it embarrasses the unceasing efforts of the C. in C. to eradicate the baneful practice of contractors supplying the troops with inferior rations.

3. H.E. has observed in his tours of inspection that contractors who tender inferior rations to the troops which are rejected by the regimental authorities because they are inferior, do not, at the same time, fail to supply the officers of the station with good rations.

4. This must arise from one of two causes: either the contractor, for the purpose of creating the belief that the rations are good and equal to contract, issues the best part of the rations to the officers of the station, instead of distributing it amongst the men; or, he furnishes, under the name of rations, officers with bread and meat which are superior to those supplied to the men.

5. The result is, that in the very stations where rations furnished by the contractor have been constantly rejected by the regimental authorities, and condemned by boards, as not equal to contract, officers have expressed their surprise at the circumstance, because the meat and bread supplied to them by the same contractors have been, invariably, good.

6. The C. in C. therefore directs that, for the future, officers at stations are not to purchase ration bread and meat from the contractors, except at stations or in camp where they cannot be otherwise obtained.

Military Letters.

MISUSE OF THE TELEGRAPH.

No. 3,033a.—With reference to the notification by the Govt. N.W.P., No. 2,522a, dated Sept. 21, 1861, relative to the misuse of the telegraph by public officers, the following extracts (paras. 3 to 8) from a letter on the subject from the Sec. to the Govt. of India in the home dept., are published for general information:—

Para. 3. The inspection of service messages recently undertaken in Calcutta has shown that it is a most common practice on the part of Secs. to Govt., heads of departments, officers commanding regiments, and other public officers, to communicate regarding applications for leave of absence and applications for appointments, by telegraph on the public service.

4. Such communications are, in fact, very rarely required in the interests of the public service. In nine cases out of ten they are made for the private convenience of the party concerned, and, therefore, the messages ought not to be sent at the public expense.

5. If an officer seeking leave, or applying for an appointment, desires to receive a reply by telegraph, he should pay for the reply himself, for no such message can properly be sent at the public expense unless it be so sent because it is in good faith believed that the interests of the public service require it.

6. The extent of the evil which results from the irregular practice above noted may not readily strike an individual public officer, who may, perhaps, send only one or two such messages in a month. The evil, however, is in reality a very great one; for the irregularity is found to be prevalent throughout India wherever telegraphic communication is available, and thus probably not a day passes that private messages which have been paid for, and messages which are really on the public service, are not delayed in transit by the passage of some of these unpaid private messages improperly sent on the public service.

7. The difference between the post-office and the telegraph in this matter is obvious, though there is reason to suppose that it is not always borne in mind. No one communicating with Govt. or any public functionary is entitled to expect a reply by telegraph. The telegraph is an extraordinary means of communication which is not intended to be used in the transaction of public business, except on urgent and important occasions, and when the saving of time effected by the telegraph is of real importance to the public interest; and it is, I am desired to observe, of the utmost consequence to the interests of the general public, and also as regards the economical working of the telegraph, that this rule should be rigidly observed by all public officers, and especially by those who hold posts of authority.

8. The Gov. gen. in Council has seen with great satisfaction a recent order on the subject of sending orders regarding leave, &c., by telegraph, published in the Gazette, by the Lieut. gov. N.W.P.

FAMILIES OF DECEASED OFFICERS.

No. 62.—The foll. G.O. by the Govt. of India, dated Jan. 10, No. 28, is republished:—

The following paragraphs of a military letter from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 461, dated Nov. 30, 1861, are published for general information:—

1. I have received and considered in Council your letter, No. 148, dated July 31, in which you inquire whether, in case of the death of an officer of the staff corps, who originally belonged to the British service, any provision will be made for his family.

2. I have to inform you, in answer, that to the widows and families of such officers pensions will be granted not less than those to which they would be entitled under the provisions of the Royal Warrant of June 15, 1855.

3. It remains to be decided from what funds these pensions will be provided.

(Signed) R. J. H. BIRCH, Major gen.,
Sec. to the Govt. of India.

COLONELS' ALLOWANCES.

Fort William, Jan. 10.—No. 36.—The following paras. of a mil. letter from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 467, dated Dec. 3, 1861, is published for general information:—

8. As regards the succession to colonel's allowance, I entirely agree with you that it is most desirable to make some definite announcement to the officers of the army.

9. In my despatch, No. 27, of Jan. 18, 1861, para. 30, I stated that the number of staff corps officers in receipt of colonel's allowance "can only be filled up as the establishment of colonels on the old footing diminishes, so that the aggregate number of officers receiving colonel's allowance at one time shall never exceed the regulated number of colonel's allowance for each presidency."

10. It has been since provided, in connection with the retiring scheme detailed in my despatch No. 320 of 10th Aug. last, that the names of lieut. colonels accepting that scheme shall remain in italics on the gen. lists of "field officers regimentally," to regulate the succession to colonel's allowance of those who do not accept the increased pension, so that one col.'s allowance will eventually be struck off for each retired lieut. col. who would have attained it had he remained on the effective list, the number of cols. in the receipt of that allowance being, however, never brought below the proportion they now bear to the number of officers remaining on the entire list, gen. and regimental.

11. It may safely be calculated that, under the operation of this measure, there will be a reserve of colonel's allowances in the cavalry and infantry arms of each presidency, available for the senior officers of the staff corps, and probably to a much greater extent than will be required for that purpose.

12. Her Majesty's Government have therefore decided that colonel's allowances shall at once be assigned to the several staff corps in the proportion of one colonel's allowance to every thirty officers who have actually joined the staff corps.

13. To these allowances, officers who have attained the rank of Colonel in the army, and have served not less than twelve years in the substantive rank of Lieut.-Colonel, will succeed according to seniority as Lieut.-Colonels, until the proposed establishment is completed to the relative strength of one in thirty officers of all ranks.

14. The necessity for a qualifying term of service will then cease, and officers will succeed by seniority as vacancies occur.

15. H.M.'s Government have further resolved that, upon succession to Colonel's allowance, officers of the staff corps shall vacate the appointment they then hold, being, however, eligible for re-appointment or employment in any other position at the discretion of their respective Governments, and with the sanction of H.M.'s Secretary of State for India in Council.

16. Officers holding appointments, the tenure of which is limited to five years, will not be required to vacate, on attaining to the colonel's allowance, before the expiration of that period.

18. The fourth subject is the position and pay of a captain in the staff corps, being a major general in the army.

19. The expressions in the staff corps warrant may not be sufficiently definite, and I have, therefore, to explain to you that, in order to entitle an officer to the rank of major general to the unemployed pay specified in the warrant for that rank, he must have actually served not less than six years in the substantive rank of field officer, the above six years being inclusive of any time he shall have been obliged to pass upon half-pay in consequence of ill health contracted in the service (as established by a board of medical officers), or in consequence of wounds received in action.

20. Other officers of the staff corps holding substantive rank in that corps as lieut. col. (whether he have the brevet rank of col. or not), maj., capt., or lieut., will draw only the pay of their respective ranks.

21. The last subject mentioned in your despatch has reference to the request of certain officers to be allowed the £50 extra pension, in anticipation of retirement on completing the required term of service.

22. Among the questions and replies lately published by you (No. 70), inquiry was made with reference to officers who might still have a few months to serve, but without reference to such service being required in India or allowable in Europe. You decided in the negative, and your reply has had my approval. You now recommend that it be allowed in the case of officers who are so situated as to be in a position to complete their time in England.

23. I cannot observe that this one class of officers have more claim to a relaxation of the rule in their favour than the other. Under the regulation of the service, officers are required to serve a given number of years for a given pension, such period of service being inclusive of a stated amount of leave. It has suited the convenience of one officer to take that leave, and he may have two years more to serve in India.

24. Another has chosen not yet to take his leave; he may have two years more to serve in England, if he pleases. As far as the interest of Government is concerned, it may be more expedient to relax the rule in question in favour of the latter; but, in point of equity, I do not consider that he has more claim to the indulgence than the former.

25. I must, therefore, reluctantly decline to accede to your recommendation, that the rule should be relaxed in the manner and to the extent proposed.

The Victoria Cross.

WAR OFFICE, Feb. 25.

The Queen has been graciously pleased to signify her intention to confer the decoration of the Victoria Cross on the undermentioned officers and non-commissioned officer, whose claims to the same have been submitted for her Majesty's approval, on account of acts of bravery performed by them in India, as recorded against their several names:—

Major Richard Hart Keatinge, Bombay Art. (now of the staff corps), for having rendered most efficient aid at the assault of Chundairee, in voluntarily leading the column through the breach, which was protected by a heavy cross fire. He was one of the foremost to enter, and was severely wounded in the breach. The column was saved from a serious loss that would probably have resulted but for Major Keatinge's knowledge of the small path leading across the ditch, which had been examined during the night by himself and a servant, who declined, when required, to lead the column without his master. Having cleared the breach, he led into the fort, where he was struck down by another dangerous wound. The C.-in-C. in India states that the success at Chundairee was mainly owing to this officer, whose gallantry, really brilliant, he considers was equalled by his ability and devotion. Major Keatinge was at the time a political officer with the 2nd brigade of the Central India Field Force.—Date of act of bravery, March 17, 1858.

Capt. James Blair, 2nd Bombay L.C., for having on two occasions distinguished himself by his gallant and daring conduct. 1. On the night of the 12th of August, 1857, at Neemuch, in volunteering to apprehend seven or eight armed mutineers who had shut themselves up for defence in a house, the door of which he burst open. He then rushed in among them, and forced them to escape through the roof. In this encounter he was severely wounded. In spite of his wounds he pursued the fugitives, but was unable to come up with them in consequence of the darkness of the night. 2. On the 23rd of October, 1857, at Jeerum, in fighting his way most gallantly through a body of rebels who had literally surrounded him. After breaking the end of his sword on one of their heads, and receiving a severe sword cut on his right arm, he rejoined his troop. In this wounded condition, and with no other weapon than the hilt of his broken sword, he put himself at the head of his men, charged the rebels most effectually, and dispersed them.

Lieut. Charles George Baker, Bengal police battalion, for gallant conduct on the occasion of an attack on the rebels at Suhejee, near Peroo, on the 27th of September, 1858, which is thus described in this officer's own words:—"The enemy" (at the time supposed to have mustered 900 or 1,000 strong in infantry, with 50 cavalry) "advanced. Without exchanging a shot I at once retired slowly, followed up steadily by the rebel line for about 100 yards clear of village or jungle, when, suddenly wheeling about my divisions into line, with a hearty cheer, we charged into and through the centre of the enemy's line, Lieut. Broughton, with his detachment, immediately following up the movement with excellent effect from his position upon the enemy's left. The rebel right wing, of about 800 men, broke at once, but the centre and left, observing the great labour of the horses in crossing the heavy ground, stood, and, receiving the charge with repeated volleys, were cut down, or broke only a few yards ahead of the cavalry. From this moment the pursuit was limited to the strongest and best horses of the force, numbering some sixty of all ranks, who, dashing into and swimming a deep and wide nullah, followed the flying enemy through the village of Russowlee, and its sugar-cane khets, over two miles of swamp and 500 yards into the thick jungles near Peroo, when, both men and horses being completely exhausted, I sounded the halt and assembly, and, collecting my wounded, returned to camp at Munjaen about 6 p.m." The charge ended in the utter defeat of the enemy, and is referred to by Lord Clyde "as deserving of the highest encomium, on account both of conception and execution." It is also described as having been "as gallant as any during the war."

Lieut. William Francis Frederick Waller, 25th Bombay L.I., for great gallantry at the capture by storm of the fortress of Gwalior, on the 20th of June, 1858. He and Lieut. Rose, who was killed, were the only Europeans present, and, with a mere handful of men, they attacked the fortress, climbed on the roof of a house, shot the gunners opposed to them, carried all before them, and took the fort, killing every man in it.

Lieut. John Charles Campbell Dannt, 11th (late 70th) Bengal N.I., and No. 2,165, Sergeant Denis Dynon, 53rd regt., are recommended for conspicuous gallantry in action, on the 2nd October, 1857, with the mutineers of the Rangurh battalion at Chota Behar, in capturing two guns, particularly the last, when they rushed at and captured it by pistoling the gunners, who were mowing the detachment down with grape, one-third of which was hors-de-combat at the time. Lieut. Dannt is also recommended for chasing, on the 2nd of November following, the mutineers of the 32nd Bengal N.I. across a plain into a rich cultivation, into which he followed them with a few of Rattray's Sikhs. He was dangerously wounded in the attempt to drive out a large body of these mutineers from an enclosure, the preservation of many of his party, on this occasion, being attributed to his gallantry.

Conductor James Miller, Ordnance Department, Bengal, for having, on the 28th of October, 1857, at great personal risk, gone to the assistance of, and carried out of action, a wounded officer, Lieutenant Glubb, of the late 38th Regiment of Bengal Native Infantry. He was himself subsequently wounded and sent to Agra. Conductor Miller was at the time employed with heavy howitzers and ordnance stores attached to a detachment of troops commanded by the late Colonel Cotton, C.B., in the attack, on the above-mentioned date, on the rebels who had taken up their position in the Serai at Futtehpoore Sikra, near Agra.

Midshipman Arthur Mayo, Indian Navy, for having headed the charge on the 22nd November, 1857, in the engagement between the Indian Naval Brigade and the mutineers of the 73rd Native Infantry and Bengal Artillery, when the former was ordered to charge two 6-pounders, which were keeping up a heavy fire. Mr. Mayo was nearly 20 yards in front of any one else during the advance.

SUPPLY OF INDIAN COTTON TO ENGLAND.

From H. L. Dampier, Esq., Secretary to the Board of Revenue—(dated Dec. 18, 1861).

Copy of letter from the commissioner of Patna and the collector's report, together with the samples of cotton seed, forwarded to the Secretary to the Govt. of Bengal. Apparently the district of Behar is a good field for the growth of New Orleans cotton.

From H. D. H. Fergusson, Esq., commissioner of the Patna division, to the Secretary to the Board of Revenue—(dated November 23, 1861).

Sir,—I have the honour to forward, in original, a letter, No. 193, dated 19th inst., from the officiating collector of Patna, on the subject of cotton cultivation.

2. Mr. Lautour relates the result of actual experiment made by himself in the Gyah dist.

3. The samples alluded to in the 13th para. of Mr. Lautour's letter are enclosed.

From E. F. Lautour, Esq., Officiating Collector of Patna, to H. D. H. Fergusson, Esq., Commissioner of the Patna Division. (Dated Nov. 19, 1861.)

Sir,—I observe in the Supplement Government Gazette, dated Nov. 16, at page 604, that Mr. Furrell has sent in a report with reference to the cultivation of cotton at Gyah.

2. I quite agree with him on one point, namely, that the seed distributed by the Collector in 1860 was bad. I tried it, and found it would not germinate. I obtained some New Orleans cotton from a friend, who was supplied with it by Messrs. Atkinson and Co. I sent the cotton to Calcutta, the produce of this seed, and it was valued at 5d. to 6d. per pound. The season was against the crop, as we had only half the usual fall of rain. I believe the soil of Behar to be well adapted for the growth of cotton, otherwise it would not have flourished so well in my garden, or in that of my neighbour (Mr. Hollings).

3. The Manchester trade has for many years gradually shut out the weavers from the market, who have either emigrated or turned their labour to more profitable employment as agriculturists.

4. As the district of Behar has increased in prosperity and population, the cultivation of cereals has largely increased, and waste lands have been brought under cultivation; but the cultivation of cotton has been gradually neglected by the ryots, the value of cereals being greater in the market than cotton. Cotton is cultivated along with other crops, but its yield is insignificant. The seed is used to feed cattle, and is to be bought in the bazar. The cultivation of country cotton might be improved; and I have no doubt the produce would be finer and more valuable in the market.

5. The proper time to sow New Orleans cotton seed is the end of May, or immediately after the first fall of rain. It should not be sown later than the end of July. It has then the benefit of the rainy season, and if we have the usual fall of rain, the moisture is retained in the ground until the end of February or the beginning of March, and by that time the first and second pickings are over. The cotton picked in March and April is coarse, bad coloured, and not fit for the English market. I therefore, from experience in its cultivation, disagree with Mr. Furrell as to the necessity of constructing reservoirs and other means of irrigation, as I have found New Orleans cotton not dependent on irrigation.

6. I tried the acclimated New Orleans seed this year, and sowed it in July as an experiment. The plant thrived well, although the rainy monsoon was excessive; I commenced gathering in September, but leaving Gyah, was unable to secure the entire crop. I only gathered a few bolls, which were not perfect, owing to the excessive rain which fell in September.

7. Cotton prefers shade from the fierce sun of July, August, and September, and should be protected by sowing Indian corn in every alternate row.

8. I am of opinion that New Orleans cotton may be grown in any quantity in the Gyah district, and that its cultivation will be profitable to the ryot, coming to that conclusion from experiments made by me on the poorest soil selected purposely. But the crop depends entirely on sowing the seed in June and July, and the seed should on no account be sown later than July, otherwise the plants become stunted, and the crop is not worth picking that season. It is a fair crop the second season, but nothing particular, and the produce is coarse, dirty, and not fit for the English market.

9. It is quite a fallacy to suppose much labour is required in cultivating this crop. The lands should be kept clean and free from weeds. It requires no more labour than that used in growing cereals, and not one quarter the labour used in growing the poppy.

10. Sea Island cotton is perfectly useless; it grows into a fine shrub, but the bolls produce no cotton.

11. Cotton is largely imported into the Gyah district from Mirzapore by water to Patna, and thence across the country on pack-bullocks and country carts. It is also sent from Mirzapore down the Grand Trunk-road on country carts.

12. The ryots of Behar are indifferent to cultivate New Orleans cotton, as they do not know its value. In fact, the cultivation is new to them, and they are prejudiced against it on that account. But that the cultivation of New Orleans cotton can be profitably cultivated I have no doubt, coming to that conclusion from certain experiments made by me in 1860 and 1861.

13. I have the honour now to submit, for the inspection of the Board of Revenue, two samples of cotton grown by me at Gyah in 1860 and 1861.

14. First is that grown from imported New Orleans seed, and gathered in March and April. The first pickings were sent by me to Calcutta, and were favourably reported on by Mr. Stewart, of Gillanders, Arbuthnot, and Co., grown in 1860.

15. Second sample is cotton picked in September, grown from acclimated cotton seed sown in July, 1861.

THE CULTIVATION OF COTTON IN MYSORE.

From C. B. Sanders, Esq., officiating commissioner for the Government of the territories of his Highness, the Maha-Rajah of Mysore, to the Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department, Fort William—(No. 275, dated Camp at Anantpore, Dec. 14, 1861.)

Sir,—I have the honour to submit, for the information of His Excellency the right hon. the Viceroy and Governor-general in Council, the following remarks on the subject of Mysore cotton, and to solicit at the same time for the arrangement I have already made, as well as for the measures which I am desirous of adopting, the sanction and approval of his Excellency in council.

2. When the subject of an increased supply of cotton became one of more than usual importance, I made many inquiries regarding the cultivation of cotton in Mysore, and learnt not only that several of the Talooks in the northern parts of Mysore still continue to produce considerable quantities of indigenous cotton, but that the New Orleans plant, when tried on a former occasion, by order of the late commissioner, had produced a very superior staple, specially commended by the jury of the Great Exhibition of 1851, and that the experiment of cultivating it had been abandoned solely because when the native gin was ascertained to be unequal to the task of cleaning New Orleans cotton, Sir M. Cubbon found that it would not pay Government to maintain an establishment for purchasing and cleaning the quantity then produced; for it would appear that on the occasion referred to the Mysore Government monopolised the crop obtained from the New Orleans seed at a fixed rate, and itself became the exporter or sole agent.

3. Bearing in mind the necessity for holding out every fair inducement to the ryots to cultivate more extensively the superior plant without deviating from the instructions of Govt., which prohibit all direct interference with the cultivation or sale of cotton, I felt that the practice formerly pursued was inadmissible; but, having ascertained beyond a doubt that certain large belts of land in the northern and central talooks were highly favourable to the cotton plant, I decided upon at once initiating indirect means of assistance which, I have every hope, will encourage the cultivators of Mysore, and will, by stimulating them to increased exertions, lead to the production, in 1862-63, of a cotton crop of superior quality in many parts of the province:—

Firstly,—I have made arrangements for obtaining from Dharwar a large supply of the best seed of the

New Orleans plant, which will be sold to the ryots at cost price.

Secondly,—I have, through the superintendents of districts, notified to the ryots of cotton growing talooks, that any waste land taken up for the cultivation of New Orleans or Egyptian plants will be given on half assessment for five years, and that gins will be provided for cleaning the same at a fixed rate per candy, in one or more of the principal places in each talook.

Thirdly,—As it has been found that the great drawback to the cultivation in Mysore of the New Orleans or other foreign plant is the difficulty of cleaning it with the rough native machinery of this country, I have secured, as a temporary measure, for the construction of saw gins, the services of a Mr. W. Davis, who was for many years employed by a Bombay house as an agent for purchasing cotton, &c., in the Dharwar country, and who is intimately and practically acquainted with the culture and preparation of cotton for the home market, and is thoroughly conversant with the principal native languages of Southern India, viz., Telogoos, Canarese, and Hindustani. The saws have been written for to England, but the other articles required being obtainable on the spot, Mr. Davis has been instructed to establish a workshop at Sheenooga for the preparation of the other parts of the gins, so that, immediately on the arrival of the saws from England, he may have every thing ready to at once set up a number of gins and forward them to the cotton-growing talooks; and it is anticipated that in this way each important locality will be furnished with a good gin before the next crop is ready to be gathered. A man, on the part of Government, will have charge of each gin, and the cotton will be cleaned at a fixed rate per candy to be settled hereafter; this will render the gins self-supporting. A number of extra gins will also be got ready to be sold at cost price to any enterprising ryots who may wish to be in exclusive possession of gins of their own.

4. On the part of the Mysore Government, I have granted to Mr. Davis Rs. 300 monthly, from Oct. 28, 1861, and Rs. 2 per diem travelling batta, so long as his services are required for constructing and setting up the gins, &c., and to this arrangement I would beg to solicit the sanction of H.E. the Viceroy.

5. I have every hope that these measures will ensure a highly satisfactory result, and that the out-turn of cotton and increased prosperity of the province will justify any small outlay on the part of the Mysore State which the indirect assistance above adverted to may, in the first instance, cause to be incurred.

6. There is, in addition to the foregoing, one suggestion which I am desirous of making, and which will, I trust, meet with the approval of H.E. the Viceroy.

7. It is not probable that either the Madras or Bombay Government will allow the Mysore cultivators to compete for the prize of 10,000 rupees, which has been offered for the best sample of cotton brought forward in those Presidencies. I am anxious, therefore, that the ryots of this province should not be left without some stimulus such as their fellow cultivators have held out to them in the surrounding districts, and this induces me to propose that the Mysore Government should be permitted to offer rewards amounting in the aggregate to Rs. 5,000. The prizes to range as marginally shown. Each cotton growing talook to have three or four small prizes allotted to it according to the extent under cultivation in the talook. The seven large prizes to be open to cotton cultivators of any talook of the Mysore territory. The rewards will, of course, only be awarded in the event of the successful competitors fulfilling the conditions as to extent of area cultivated and description of crop, &c., which may be previously advertised. I look upon this plan as advisable in the case of Mysore, because in this territory as yet no great stretch of cotton cultivation is to be found in any locality, though numerous small and medium sized patches of the indigenous plant are to be seen in all parts of the northern talook.

8. I have only, in conclusion, to solicit for this proposition, and for my arrangements generally, the sanction and approval of H.E. in Council.

From Col. H. M. Durand, C.B., Officiating Secretary to the Government of India, Foreign Department, to the Officiating Commissioner for the Government of the Territories of his Highness the Rajah of Mysore.—(No. 24, dated Fort William, Jan. 17, 1862.)

Sir,—In reply to your letter, No. 275, dated 14th ult., I am directed to inform you that the Gov. gen. in Council sanctions all the arrangements which have been made by you, and the arrangements which you propose to make, for the extension and improvement of the cultivation of cotton in Mysore.

THE BENGAL GOVERNMENT AND THE PLANTERS.

IN one respect Lord Canning's position resembles that of Louis Napoleon. He is unquestionably far in advance of his subordinates, who impede and shackle his progress by their obsolete prejudices and ignorance of the true principles of government. As it is, he has shown himself to be, without comparison, the most liberal-minded and impartial ruler India has ever known. Calm, resolute, and self-possessed, he has held the balance of justice steady and unshaken, in spite of the jealousies and passions by which he has been assailed. Throughout the late unhappy disturbances in Lower Bengal, the Viceroy has stood aloof from the petty rivalries of civilians and planters, and has done all that rested with him towards reconciling contending interests and appeasing senseless animosities. Had he been better seconded by those in authority under him, the reconciliation of the planters and ryots would long since have been brought about, and much misery and ill-feeling averted. It was with a view to remove all reasonable grounds of dispute that his Excellency instructed the Bengal Government to despatch two Special Commissioners into the disturbed districts, to adjudicate on the spot between the employers and the employed. Unfortunately his motives were misunderstood, and his intentions thwarted, by those to whom he necessarily confided the duty of working out his policy. The Lieutenant-governor and his officials were bent upon crushing the independent European element, which in the fulness of time was certain to destroy their monopoly of power and place, and reduce themselves to the level of ordinary human beings. Compelled to obey the instructions they had received, they took care to do it in such a manner that Lord Canning's designs were practically negatived and rendered abortive. Instead of taking measures to enforce the due payment of rents by the ryots, the Lieutenant-governor contented himself with sending two magistrates into Jessore and Nuddea, to make inquiries into the true state of affairs, at the same time plainly intimating his own leaning towards the ryots. One of these gentlemen, however, displayed exemplary tact and judgment, and applied himself with strict impartiality to the discharge of his delicate task. The result of his investigations was a decided conviction as to the existence of a combined resistance on the part of the ryots to the just claims of their landlords. But, notwithstanding his clear and explicit statements, the Bengal Government refused to believe that rents had been wilfully and systematically withheld, and even now the Lieutenant-governor speaks only of arrears to the extent of twenty-five per cent. in excess of those of the preceding year—carefully evading the fact that they are double their average amount previous to the rupture between the planters and the natives. Indeed, in consequence of the bad faith of their tenants, the landholders have been compelled to ask for time for the payment of their dues to Government. Very much of all this inconvenience and embarrassment would have been avoided had Mr. Grant acted in accordance with Lord Canning's instructions, and deputed a sufficient number of officers on special duty to "ensure a prompt issue to all suits for rent that might be instituted." As it is, the work has to be commenced afresh, and the Governor-general has approved of the desire expressed by the Landholders' Association that Special Commissioners "should be sent into the disturbed districts of Nuddea and Jessore, vested with the ordinary powers of a magistrate and collector, not for the purpose of putting down combinations and enforcing payment of rents, but for that of restoring the mutual confidence and good feeling which ought to exist between landlord and ryot for effecting a peaceable adjustment of differences wherever that is possible, and for supporting, by their counsel and influence, the action of the law as administered by the local Courts in cases in which resort to legal proceedings cannot be avoided." His lordship also agrees with the Association "in believing that if an officer representing the Government were to bring the zemindars and the ryots of any village together they would most probably come to terms. The officers, however, who may be entrusted with this duty must not only be chosen for their popular qualities, their justice, their official knowledge, and such fluency in Bengali as will enable them to hold personal intercourse with the people, but they must, of course, be supported in their endeavours by the hearty and open concurrence of the local Government; without such support it is not to be expected that they will be successful."

The Bengal Government is thus very properly rebuked for its past maladministration and unjust treatment of the planters:—

"One thing," continues his Excellency, "is certain, and that is that the Government cannot permit the continuance of a state of things in which the ryots, in large numbers, admitting in the abstract the justice of the demand made upon them for rent, and their ability to meet it, refuse payment except in execution of a decree of court. Whether or not this be the result of combination, in the technical sense of the term, or of a general understanding and agreement among the ryots, is of no consequence. If all debtors were to refuse payment of their just and admitted debts until compelled to pay them, it is obvious that no multiplication of courts would suffice to correct the evil. The law must be altered and made more stringent against those who withhold payment of their debts without sufficient cause. The institution by some landholders of suits for recovery of rent has not had a general effect in inducing the ryots to pay without being sued; and therefore it cannot be matter of surprise that the landholders should speak of feeling it to be an 'almost hopeless business to institute legal proceedings against a whole population,' especially when, as they truly state, the expense of recovering a vast number of small sums is enormous, and the difficulty of securing the attendance of witnesses, and of legal proof where everything is contested is insurmountable. The proposed law, whereby penal damages would be incurred in cases in which it is clear that rent has been wilfully and inexcusably withheld, may perhaps suffice to put an end to the common or simultaneous recusancy which seems still to prevail in some quarters without abatement; but if that recusancy shall continue, recourse must be had to measures of a more summary character. It is to avert such a consequence that the Governor-general in Council desires to try what may be done by an earnest and patient attempt to bring about an amicable solution of the questions at issue."

Fair means are first to be tried, but should they fail in inducing the ryots to act honestly, recourse will be had to harsher measures. It is to be regretted that so much time has already been lost; but at last the Supreme Government is evidently awakened to the necessity of affording more efficient protection to European settlers, and we doubt not that Lord Elgin will walk in the steps of his illustrious predecessor, and give full fruition to the wise and liberal policy that has marked the close of his viceroyalty.

THE INDIAN COTTON TARIFF.

AT the risk of repeating ourselves we must again revert to the subject of the Indian import duties so vehemently abused by the manufacturers of this country. On Friday last a very numerous and influential deputation of millowners from Lancashire, Yorkshire, and Scotland, waited upon Lord Palmerston and Sir Charles Wood in order to represent the terrible consequences to themselves of Mr. Wilson's departure from the principles of free-trade. According to the statement made by the Mayor of Manchester,—the chairman at the preliminary meeting held at Fenton's Hotel, St. James's—the cotton manufacturers feel that they have been unjustly treated, and are determined not to submit to a continuance of that unfairness from any Government. Now, the injustice complained of in this bombastic manner is simply this: The financial embarrassments caused by the mutinies rendered it imperative upon the Government to adopt various extraordinary but temporary measures for recruiting the exchequer. As Sir Charles Wood very properly observed, the people of India were at once subjected to an income-tax of 4 per cent., in addition to the augmentation of various existing duties and imposts, but still there remained a deficit which could not be filled up by mere reduction of expenditure. One gentleman, indeed, had the cool effrontery to tell her Majesty's Secretary of State for India that it was "perfectly feasible" to reduce the army to 50,000 men, but his assurance was speedily rebuked—Sir Charles Wood quietly remarking that those on the spot must be the best judges as to what military strength was necessary for the maintenance of order. It would be a very bad bargain, he continued, if the Home Government made itself responsible for the military expenditure of India in return for the removal of the duties complained of. As it appeared to Lord Canning and his experienced advisers that a large European force must be retained in the country, and as the ordinary sources of taxation proved unequal to the emergency, the only alternative was to devise some new scheme for covering the exigencies of the State. It was a choice of two evils, and the Indian Government naturally preferred the temporary inconvenience of a few wealthy millowners to the peril of weakening the defensive power of the empire. In this there was nothing unjust or unreasonable, nothing that a sensible and impartial mind can condemn or regret. It was clearly a matter of necessity, and therefore to be borne with dignified patience. But the manufacturing class are never remarkable for either dignity or moderation. Insolent in prosperity, they lose all heart in the hour of adversity, and arraign even the decrees of Providence for the consequences of their own shortsightedness and over-anxiety to accumulate riches. They now protest against being "compelled to give one bale out of every ten of all the cotton goods, and one bale out of every twenty of all the cotton yarns they have exported to India, for the exclusive benefit, and to spare the pockets of one portion only of the British people." Passing over the somewhat familiar phrase of "sparing the pockets" of a section of the community, it may suffice to remark that the "one portion only" spoken of thus disparagingly exceeds in number five times the entire population of the British isles. The memorialists admit that the present policy of the Indian Government is wise, liberal, and beneficent, except in the matter of this tariff, which they pronounce to be "unjust and unwise, inasmuch as it stimulates and encourages the native capitalists of India, under the false system of protection, to erect mills and other manufactories to the permanent injury of the manufactures interests of this country." Were it not for this protection the natives would "more profitably and legitimately" employ their capital "on the soil in raising cotton and other agricultural products, for which they (sic) are so well adapted, and which they might advantageously exchange for the manufactures of the mother country, or in other lucrative employments." This paragraph is open to criticism of a not particularly flattering character. In the first place, the natives may be safely trusted to invest their money in the manner most beneficial to their own interests. They are quite capable of taking care of themselves, and are not at all likely to venture upon hazardous enterprises such as are only too familiar to British merchants. Every business, we take it, is legitimate that is not based on false pretences, and there is surely no reason why Indian capitalists should not employ their money in competing with foreign manufacturers if they see a fair prospect of success. It is idle to talk of their being stimulated to rash speculations under a false system of protection, for none know better than themselves that the new import duties were never intended to be permanent. The word "they," to which we have drawn attention, by its position in the sentence and by the sense of the passage apparently refers to "soil," but probably it was meant to convey the impression that the natives are well adapted for agricultural pursuits—an opinion diametrically opposed to that held by the Cotton Supply Association. But it is more to the purpose to notice the contradiction expressed in the very next sentence. Having stated that it would be more advantageous for the natives to apply themselves exclusively to the cultivation of cotton for the European markets, the memorialists go on to say that "those import duties do, in effect, raise the cost of Indian cotton to the merchant who wishes to export it to this country." In other words, owing to the competition the native cultivator obtains a higher price for his produce than he would do if a local demand had not been created. He is, therefore, directly benefited by the employment of capital in local manufactures, and his "legitimate" occupation is rendered so much more "profitable." Then, it is hard upon "the poorer and lower classes of Hindoos, because cotton clothing is almost the only kind they wear, and 10 per cent. or more on nearly the whole of the cotton goods consumed in India is thus paid by those who can only earn two or three annas per day." But if the price of clothing has increased 10 per cent. or more, the effect of the import duty is neutralised as towards the British manufacturer; and if the price has not gone up, the natives are not only in no way injured, but are positively benefited by the greater demand for their raw cotton. The memorialists, of course, make the most of the nominal difference of wages in India and in Lancashire—in the one the average rate being only 6d. per diem, and in the other 1s. 8d.; but they carefully avoid any comparison of the relative quantity of work turned out for the money, nor did they allude to the very much higher cost of fuel in India until that fact was elicited by a question from Lord Palmerston. One would have supposed, however, that these generous friends of the poor Hindoos would rejoice at any new employment for labour being opened up, so as to increase the wretched pittance hitherto paid for it, but Mr. P. B. Ferguson actually asserts that if "the duties in question were abolished a market would be opened which would at once bring back prosperity to the English cotton trade, and be of equal benefit to India, in so far as that part of her population which is now engaged in manufacturing would be set free for the cultivation of cotton and other produce." But does Mr. Ferguson imagine that a ryot can earn sixpence a-day by agricultural labour, or that the withdrawal of a few hundred men, women, and children from the fields will diminish the breadth of land under cultivation? That "deep and widespread distress" exists throughout our own manufacturing districts is unhappily too true; but it has been caused partly by the state of affairs in North America, and partly by previous overtrading. The Indian markets are deluged with English manufactures, and Sir Charles Wood showed that the exports are still rapidly increasing.

"For instance," he said, "the exports in this last month of January alone showed a large increase on the exports for the same month during the previous year. Thus, there were last month sent 9,000 bales of cotton, as against 6,000 bales in 1861; there were 4,400 cases of cottons, as against 4,800 last year; 1,700 packages of printed cottons, as against 500 last year; of coloured cottons, 1,000 packages, against 800 last year. To Bombay 6,400 bales had been sent, when last year only 2,800 were exported. 1,800 cases of cotton went last month to Bombay, when only 600 cases went last January twelvemonth. There had been a slight falling-off in printed cottons exported to Bombay of from 400 to 250 packages, but, on the other hand, the coloured cottons had risen from 400 packages to 910."

If these speculations turn out unprofitable, that, at least, does not concern the Government, or afford any justification for interfering with the internal administration of India. When the financial balance has been fully restored it will be time enough to consider what sources of revenue may be given up; but that time has not yet arrived, and, in the meanwhile, our millowners must learn to bear their burdens with decent equanimity.

AGRA AND UNITED SERVICE BANK.—The Directors of the Agra and United Service Bank have announced a dividend at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum, with a bonus of £1 per share, for the past half-year, making a total distribution of 12 per cent. for 1861.

THE CHINESE REBELS.

The following is an extract from a private letter, dated Tang-chow, November 8, 1861:—

"You may, perhaps, have seen by the papers that a large body of rebels, which has long been ravaging the Shantung province, lately made a descent upon this district. For about a week before they showed themselves at Yentai we could plainly see the flames and smoke from the burning villages, which always mark the track of these wretches; but almost up to the moment of their arrival in our immediate neighbourhood foreigners here entertained little apprehension of their attempting to attack or plunder this town. One evening, however, just as I was finishing dinner, an old Chinese came running in to tell me that the rebels were rapidly approaching, and were already within five or six miles of our settlement. I at once hurried off to the Consulate, where I found Mr. Morrison just preparing to set out for the purpose of bringing in a missionary and two ladies, who were living in a village which lies between us and the place where the rebels then were, at a distance of about three miles from Yentai. Before starting, Mr. Morrison requested me to take a boat and go as quickly as I could to her Majesty's gunboat Insolent, which was then anchored near an island about five miles out at sea, in order that I might induce the commander to bring her over as soon as possible, and render what assistance he could to the town. After a long pull in the dark I at length reached the gunboat, at about twelve p.m., roused up the lieutenant in command, told him what I had to say, took a glass of whisky and water, and turned in. Next morning, at an early hour, we steamed over to the mainland and took up our position so as to command the road by which the rebels must pass before they could enter the town. Soon after we dropped anchor, the Consul came off and told us that he had reached the village where the missionary and ladies were some time before the arrival of the rebels, but that it had taken him so long to convince them that they were in any danger that he had only just got them off in time to save their lives. So near a thing was it that the missionary, who remained behind a short time after the others had left, in order to bring off some of his goods, was attacked by two of the ruffians, and did not get away until he had shot the mule on which one of them rode, and wounded the other. As it appeared probable that Chinamen might come off to communicate with our vessel it was determined that I should remain on board as interpreter until the next day. On the following morning, before I had finished dressing, I heard some one cry out that the rebels were in sight, and on going on deck I discovered a great number of foot and horsemen, bearing flags and banners, ranged along the hills which overlook the town to the west. In a short time about fifty horsemen, gaily dressed in red and yellow, came galloping down into the villages which lie between Yentai and the high ground. Whenever we could catch sight of these gentlemen we fired shot or shell at them, but as they moved about quickly, and in small parties, we did little or no execution. At length, however, we succeeded in sending them all scampering off to their companions, and soon afterwards the whole body marched away to the south and disappeared. Unfortunately the Insolent, being out of repair, had none but very small guns on board, otherwise we should have been able to give a good account of some hundreds of the enemy. On my return to my house, after leaving the gunboat, I found that my boy had endeavoured to strike terror in the hearts of the invaders by hoisting on the top of a tall bamboo in the middle of my yard a large piece of calico, on which he had copied the direction off one of my trunks. He was, of course, quite ignorant of the meaning of what he had written, but he seemed to think that the flag would be very efficacious in preserving my house in case of an attack. During the panic I had at one time as many as forty refugees in my house, and as the rebels approached, thousands of men, women, and children from the surrounding country came pouring into Yentai for protection, and not without cause, for these Northern rebels are perfect fiends, who make a hell upon earth wherever they go. When they come to a place which offers no resistance they kill all the old people, ugly young women, and little children, and, after collecting their plunder, carry away all the others; but when they come to a place which does not readily submit they put every living creature to death. They tie ropes round the necks of some of their victims and drag them about till they are dead, and suspend others by their thumbs and roast them alive, or hack them to pieces. Sight's horrible beyond description might be seen a short time ago by any one who would take the trouble to go a mile or two from this place. It is asserted that the rebels declare it is their humane feelings which induce them to kill the old people, for it would be needless cruelty, they argue, to allow them to live and grieve over the lost property which it has been their painful duty to destroy or carry off. They are now a good way off, and I do not think it likely we shall see any more of them until next spring, when it is not improbable they may again sweep the country for plunder. Two American missionaries, who were infatuated enough to go out from Yantai to meet them and argue with them on the wickedness of their conduct, were caught by them and murdered at a place about thirty miles from this. Both these gentlemen leave widows behind them. Their bodies were recovered and brought home."—Times.

DEBT OF INDIA.—The annual account of the debt and liabilities of India, made up to the end of last year for England, but only to April, 1860, for India, represents the amount to be £36,253,521 in India, and £36,000,277 in England—together, £122,253,798. The account for a twelvemonth previous, issued at this time last year, showed a debt of only £106,965,237. These accounts include service funds, bills payable, miscellaneous deposits, railway companies' capital in hand, &c.; but they do not include the charge upon the revenues of India of the dividend on the £6,000,000 capital stock of the East India Company.

THE NAWAB OF MOORSHEDABAD.—The Nawab of Moorshedabad has achieved one of those successes which damage the winning party. He has quarrelled both with the agent of the Governor general and the dewan, and Government have withdrawn Colonel Mackenzie, and made the dewan independent of the Nawab. The latter will in future receive his stipend of sixty odd thousand rupees a month, on his own personal receipt, but the disbursement of the pensions and other payments made on account of the Nizamut Fund will be made through the dewan acting under the direct authority of Government. The whole sum payable amounts to about fourteen lakhs a year, and we believe that there is a sum of some thirty lakhs to the credit of the Fund which the Nawab would fain become possessed of but is scarcely likely to do so. No successor has been appointed to Colonel Mackenzie, and we hope that the Government will abolish the useless pageantry of his office. It is a sheer waste of money to maintain an agent at the court of a mere State pensioner who in turn is obliged to keep up a corresponding establishment. Let him have all his money for household expenses, and dispense with the shows as well as the realities of power.—Hurkaru.

THE NATIVES OF MUTTRA, irritated by the Income-tax, are grinning gleefully over the expected war with America, and believe that the French have joined the Yankees.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

The object of this Company is the introduction of a system of tramways in connection with and as feeders to the railways throughout India.

The Government of India, as well as the shareholders of the various railway companies and the public generally, are fully alive to the necessity of these means of communication, and the want of them is now universally acknowledged.

The results of the opening of the Indian railways have conclusively shown that the whole population will travel wherever the means are afforded and the cost is within their reach; and while the railways require to obtain from £20 to £35 per mile per week to pay 5 per cent., the tramways will pay 10 per cent. upon a revenue of from £5 to £10 per mile per week.

The distinction between the railway and the tramway consists in the former being necessarily constructed at considerable cost, without which it could not be maintained under a heavy traffic; whereas the latter, being applied to tributary roads, where the traffic is comparatively moderate, will be completed at a cost not exceeding an average of £2,500 per mile, the railways in India varying from £8,000 to £18,000 per mile.

The advantages of these tramways will be twofold:—First, in yielding large profits to this company; and secondly, in largely increasing the pecuniary returns of the railways.

The rapid construction of tramways, with their comparatively short lengths, narrow gauge, light rails, and limited quantities of earthwork, brickwork, ballasting, &c., as compared with railways will enable the Company to earn a dividend upon their works within a very brief period after any section has been commenced.

The estimated returns, based upon the data of the several lines proposed to be constructed, will yield a net profit of from 10 to 15 per cent.

The average cost, as above stated, of laying down a line, building stations, furnishing the necessary plant and stock, and keeping the line in working order for the first twelve months, with all other incidental expenses, both in India and England, will not exceed £2,500 per mile.

The Directors had an interview with the Hon. Samuel Laing before his late return to India, and received from him the assurance of the interest taken by the Government of India in any works calculated to effect so great and important an improvement in the country as must attend a well-devised and judiciously applied system of tramways.

The object of the present subscription is to enable the Company to send out an accredited agent to India, for the purpose of communicating with the Government, making the necessary arrangements for their co-operation, and the selection of those sections for commencement, and to be made in succession which shall combine the greatest advantages to the public and hold out the greatest prospect of remuneration to the shareholders.

No further expenditure, nor any further liability, will be incurred beyond the present deposit; and the Directors do not propose to enter into any arrangements for undertaking the execution of the work without the authority of a special meeting of shareholders, to whom the whole arrangements will be previously submitted.

It will be one of the terms of the arrangement with the contractor who may undertake the execution of the works, that interest at 5 per cent. per annum shall be paid to the shareholders during the period of construction.

A deposit of 2s. per share must be made on application. If no allotment is made, the deposit will be returned without deduction.

The liability of subscribers is limited to the amount of the deposit.

Detailed Prospectuses and Forms of Application for Shares may be obtained at the Offices of the Company, No. 62, Moorgate-street; or of the Brokers of the Company, Messrs. J. and J. Whitehead, No. 8, Moorgate street.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Bombay Mail of the 12th February, among other interesting intelligence, places us in possession of Lord Canning's Resolution touching the amalgamation of the Burmese Provinces. The three Provinces hitherto known as the Arracan Division, the Province of Pegu, and the Tenasserim and Martaban Provinces, are now united under one Chief Civil Officer, styled Chief Commissioner of British Burmah. "This officer, whose head-quarters will be ordinarily at Rangoon, will exercise powers similar to those now vested in the Chief Commissioner of Oudh, and will be in charge, as the agent of the Governor-general, of the foreign relations of the British Government with the Court of Ava and other neighbouring States on the Eastern frontier. He will also exercise the powers of Judicial Commissioner for the general superintendence of the administration of justice and for hearing appeals from the Divisional Commissioners. His salary will be Rs. 50,000 a year, including all travelling expenses; and he will have a secretary on a salary of Rs. 9,600 a year, with an allowance for travelling expenses, and with an establishment not exceeding, in respect to cost, that now entertained for the Commissioner of Pegu." The province of British Burmah comprises three Divisions, each under a separate Commissioner, and styled the Pegu, Tenasserim, and Arracan Divisions. The salary of each Commissioner is Rs. 30,000, including all travelling expenses. There are to be—costing altogether Rupees 2,86,800 a year. It is intended, moreover, to establish at Rangoon and Maulmain a Court, to be presided over by a barrister or advocate of not less than five years' standing, with full powers of civil and criminal legislation.

A "little war" has broken out in Eastern Bengal, the mountaineers of the Jyntia and Tipperah Hills having been joined by a number of vagabond mutineer sepoys. Troops have been despatched to put down these barbarians, but it is evident that the Eastern frontier will require to be as carefully guarded as that on the north-western extremity of the empire.

We regret to learn that Mr. Laing has again been compelled to leave Calcutta, on account of his health, and has gone up-country for change of air. It is also only too true that Sir George Clerk's health has failed him to such an extent that he is obliged to resign the government of Bombay, and return to Europe without delay. Sir Bartle Frere has been appointed his successor.

Sir William Denison's objections to the transfer of North Canara to the Bombay Presidency have been overruled by the Home Government, and by this time that district has, no doubt, been handed over by Colonel Wallace, of the Madras Engineers, to Colonel Turner, Acting Secretary to the Bombay Government in the Public Works Department.

The official order for the reduction of the Madras army will be found elsewhere in our columns. In future that army will consist of: European.—29 batteries of Artillery; 2 Regiments of Cavalry; 11 regiments of Infantry. Native.—Four regiments of Cavalry; 44 regiments of Infantry.

Under this order the 45th, 46th, 47th, 48th, 50th, 51st, 52nd Regiments N. I. are to be disbanded and broken up from the 31st of March next.

According to the Cabul correspondent of the Delhi Gazette, the Russians are building a cantonment at Taskund, to the great annoyance of the King of Kohan. To allay the fears of Russophobists it may be mentioned that this place is quite 600 miles from the nearest point in the British territories.

Great satisfaction is expressed at the peaceful termination of the Trent correspondence, one good result of which will, probably, be the erection of adequate fortifications at Bombay. Cotton, says the

Englishman, "is making its way into the market from all quarters. Huge floating machines, known in Calcutta as up, country boats, are daily seen threading their way through the tortuous channel of the canal which connects the Ganges with the Hooghly, each piled up [with bales out of which burst snowy flakes of the vegetable fibre. What becomes of it? is the question. Some, and a larger proportion than heretofore, finds its way on board homeward bound craft; but China is still in the market, and will remain so."

The outgoing mail via Marseilles has been postponed from the 10th to the 12th inst.

The Ceylon steamer, Captain Evans, with the outward India and China mails, which put back on Thursday in consequence of a slight derangement of the packing in the screw shaft stuffing-box, has had the defect remedied in Graving Dock, and proceeded on her voyage at two o'clock yesterday.

INDIA IN THE EXHIBITION.

Great expectations have been formed in England of the articles contributed by India to the International Exhibition. So far as we have inspected those of Bengal, and seen lists of those of other provinces, these expectations are likely to be more than realised. Not more than one thousand superficial feet, or only half the space allotted to the Indian Department in 1857, has this year been assigned to it. In 1851 only part of the space was occupied. Though, on the present occasion, the articles have generally been so well packed that they will take up less room than before, we fear that more than the thousand feet will be required. In addition to the articles sent from India, a selection from the stores of the Indian Museum is to be displayed, comprising the whole of the products of the East already known in the English market. This Museum, under the intelligent care of Dr. J. Forbes Watson, reporter on Indian products, promises to be most valuable to both England and India. It is used as a depot from which specimens of Indian produce are sent to the chief museums and seats of manufacturing industry in England. During 1861 working samples of all the principal textile manufactures in 20 sets, each of 800 specimens, have thus been prepared. In this light the raw materials contributed by India become of immense importance. In addition to this, that the local producer may see the effect of quality upon price, 20 separate sets of Indian materials are to be returned to this country, with similar specimens from other places, which command a higher price in the European market. The best results may therefore be expected from India's share in this Exhibition, both to herself and England. That she is not only ready but eager to learn, must have been evident to every intelligent spectator of the Bengal articles, when he compared them with the inferior fabrics sent to London and Paris on former occasions. These two exhibitions have had a singularly healthy, though indirect, influence in improving almost every article exhibited this year, especially dyes and cloths. It is not always true of the ryot, and still less of the artisan of India, that considerations of self-interest fail to induce him to improve his productions. Caste, custom and apathy are very powerful with the mass, but let in a little intelligence, and, up to a certain point, cupidity expels all three.

Dr. Forbes Watson is naturally eager to meet the wishes of England by securing a large collection of samples of Indian cotton, indigenous, as well as exotic, of last year's planting. As such samples cannot reach London before the 31st March, the latest date, a special exception has been made in their favour. The cotton that came to maturity in 1861 is likely to be well represented, but it is most important that England should have specimens of the cotton planted after the American blockade began. Supplies of this new cotton have for some weeks been pouring in freely to Bombay. The weight of the samples should not be less than ten pounds cleaned, with two pounds in seed and a dozen of the ripe bolls. Of this part will be set up in the Exhibition, and the rest will be kept for exports, and samples for local museums and manufactures. Thus India will have a great chance, and we trust there is not a grower of cotton in the country, whether amateur or not, who will not be represented, furnishing all details of place, soil, seed, planting, instruments employed, proportion of wool to seed, the season, &c. In respect of cotton, as was to be expected, Bengal will be most deficient. Only a few specimens have been received in Calcutta, and these not accompanied by sufficient information. The extension of time will, we trust, partly make up the deficiency. As yet Bengal may not have so great a cotton future as Bombay. Its strength will lie in its teas, silk, rice, sugar, indigo, and fibres. But to be convinced that it will in time become a large exporter of cotton also, we have but to think of its ancient glories half a century ago, and of the new soils opened up on the plateaus of Behar, the eastern provinces, and Burmah.
